" As to that Article, it shal move beside, that howbeit suche othe of Ligeaunce was made sone upon the Deth of the " said King Edward IIII. to his Sone, not only at Calais, but also in divers places in England by many gret Astates and " Persones, being than ignorant of the verraye sure and true Title, which oure Soverayn Lord that now is King Rich- " ard the III. hath and had the same tyme to the Crowne of England; that Othe notwithstanding now every good " true English man is bound, upon knowlage had of the said verraye true Title, to depart from the first Othe so igno- " rantly gyven to him, to whom it apperteyneth not, and thereupon to make his Othe of newe, and owe his Service " and Fidelite to him, that good Lawe, Reason, and the concorde assent of the Lordes and Commons of the Royalme " have ordeigned to reigne upon the People, which is our said Soverayn Lord Kinge Richard III. brother to the said Kinge " Edward IIII. late deceassed, whom God Pardon: Whose sure and true Title is evidently shewed and declared in a Bil " of Petition, which the Lordes Spirituels and Temporells, and the Commons of the Land solempnely porrected unto " the Kinges Highness at London the XXVI day of Juyn. Whereupon the Kinges said Highnes notably assisted by wel " nere al the Lords Spirituel and Temporell of this Royalme, went the same day unto the Palais at Westminster; and " ther in such Roial Honourable apparrelled within the gret Hal ther toke Possession, and declared his Mind, that the same day " he wold begin to reygne upon his People. And from thence rode solempnly to the Cathedral Churche of London; " and was received ther with Procession, with gret Congratulacion and acclamacion of al the People in every place, and " by the weye that the King was in that day. The Copie of the which Bil the King wil to be sent unto Calais, and ther " to be redd and understanded togredre with these presentes: Desiring right effectiouslie al maner persones of the said " three Jurisdictions, what astate, degre or condition they be of; and also them of Guysnes and Hammes, to make their " Feithes and Othes to him, as to thair Soverayn Lorde; like as the Lordes Spirituels and Temporells, and many other " Noblemen in gret numbre, being in England, frely and of goode hert, have done, for ther partes: And that the said " Towne of Calais, al Castells and Fortresses, being within the said Marches, they wil saufly kepe unto the behoove of our " said Lord King Richard the III. and them not deliver to any Persone, but by his Commandement onely, &c. J. S.

These Resolutions of dethroning K. Edward V. and of making Richard King were very suddenly taken, or else the Players of this Game carryed on their Business very secretly to amuse the People. For the Day of Edward's Coronation was set, which was to be the 21st Day of June. And all solemn Preparation was making for that Purpose, til near the said Day King Edward with the Advice and Order of his Uncle Richard the Protector, appoints and summoneth the Gentlemen that were to be knighted at his Coronation, sending to each of them a Letter to this Tenor, viz.

" To Otes Gilbert Elq; Trusty and Welbeloved, We Grete you well. And by the Advice of our deareſt Unkle, " the Duke of Glouceſter Protector of this Our Royalme during our young Age, and the Lords of our Councel, we " write unto you at this time, Willing and ne the less charging you, to prepare and furnish your self to receive the " Noble Order of Knighthood at our Coronation; Which by Gods Grace we intend shall be Solempniz'd the one and " twentieth Day of this present Month at our Palace of Westminster; Commanding you to be here at our Tower of Lon- " don four Days afore our said Coronation, to have Communication with our Commissioners concerning the Matter: not " failing hereof in any Wise, as ye intend to please us, and as ye will answer. Yeven the 5 Day of June.

Semblable

1483. Semblable Letters were writ to John Speke, ——— Beaumont, Edward Courtney, Will. Carraunt, Tho. Arundel, Will. Bolney, Alex. Creſſenger, John Clopton, Hen. Haydon, John Wynkfeld, Chriſtoph. Willoughby, Ph. Colthorp, ——— Beddyngfeld, Tho. Lewknor, Will. Barkley, John Stanley, ——— Grevyle, Will. Birmygham, Tho. Butteler, of Beawſey, John Beron, Will. Trowtbeck, ——— Mylbourn, the Lord Dormund, the Lord Stourton, ——— Cornwal Lord of Burford, Nevyle, Son and Heir of the Lord Bergaveny, John Breny of Stamford, the Lord Grey of Ruthyn, John Gefford, Will. Cheney of Shepey, Rob. Whyte of South-Warneborow, Gervace Cliſton of Oddiſake, Nic. Lile, Will. Barkely of Beverſton, Henry Vernon, Nic. Mountgomery, and twelve more, one whereof was Henry Solet Alderman of London. J. S. 1483.

But now to the progreſs of our Story, where the Barons and Commons with one General Diſlike, and an Univerſal Negative Voice, refuſed the Sons of King Edward, not for any Ill Will or Malice, but for their Diſabilities and Incapacities; the Opinions of thoſe Times too held them not Legitimate, and the Queen Elizabeth Gray, or Woodvill, no lawful Wife, nor yet a Woman worthy to be the King's Wife, by reaſon of her extream unequal Quality. For theſe and other Cauſes, the Barons and Prelates unanimouſly caſt their Election upon the Protector, as the moſt worthieſt, and neareſt, by the experience of his own Deſervings, and the ſtrength of his Alliance, importuning the Duke of Buckingham to become their Speaker, who accompanied with many of the Chief Lords, and other Grave and Learned Perſons, having Audience granted in the Great Chamber at Baynard's Caſtle, (then York-Houſe) thus addreſs'd him to the Lord Protector:

Bp. Morton, Sir T. Moor, Hollingſhead, Grafton, Stow, Hall, Virgil, &c. Parliam.

The Duke of Buckingham to the Protector in the behalf of the 3 Eſtates.

"SIR, May it pleaſe your Grace to be inform'd, that after much Grave Conſultation amongſt the Noble Barons, and other Worthy Perſons of this Realm, it ſtands concluded and reſolv'd, That the Sons of King Edward ſhall not reign; for who is not ſenſible, how Miſerable a Fortune, and Dangerous Eſtate that Kingdom muſt be in, where a Child is King, according to the Wiſe Man, Væ tibi terra cujus Rex eſt Puer. But here, Sir, there is Exception of further conſequence againſt them, That they were not born in lawful Marriage, the King having then another Wife living, Dame Elizabeth Butler: Beſides the great Diſhonour and Reproach he receiv'd by diſparaging his Royal Blood, with a Woman ſo far unmeet for his Bed. Theſe Conſiderations have reſolutely turn'd all their Eyes and Election towards your Grace, as only worthy of it, by your ſingular Virtues, and that Intereſt in the Crowns of England and of France, with the Rights and Titles, by the High Authority of Parliament, entail'd to the Royal Blood and Iſſue of Richard Duke of York, whoſe lawful begotten Son and Heir yon are; which, by a Juſt Courſe of Inheritance and the Common Laws of this Land, is divolv'd and come to you. And unwilling that any Inferiour Blood ſhou'd have the Dominion of this Land, are fully determin'd to make your Grace King; to which, with all Willingneſs and Alacrity, the Lords and People of the Northern Parts concur. And the Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, have all allow'd, and gladly embraced this general Choice of your Grace; and are come hither to beſeech you to accept their Juſt Election, of which they have choſen me their unworthy Advocate and Speaker. I muſt therefore again crave leave, in the behalf of all, to deſire your Grace will be pleaſed, in your Noble and Gracious Zeal to the Good of this Realm, to caſt your Eyes upon the growing Diſtreſſes and Decay of our Eſtate, and to ſet your happy Hand to the redreſs thereof; for which, we can conceive no Abler Remedy, than by your undertaking the Crown and Government, which we doubt not ſhall accrew to the Laud of God, the Profit of this Land, and your Grace's Happineſs.

The common publiſh'd Stories have Eliz. Lucy, but that is falſe.

This Speech of the Duke is recorded by Dr. Morton, Sir Thomas Moor, and other Chronicles and Hiſtorians, to which the Protector gave this Reply:

The Anſwer of the Lord Protector to the 3 Eſtates.

"MY moſt Noble Lords, and my moſt Loving Friends, and Dear Country-men, Albeit I muſt confeſs, your Requeſt moſt reſpective and favourable, and the Points and Neceſſities alledg'd and urg'd true and certain, yet for the Entire Love and Reverend Reſpect I owe to my Brother deceaſed and to his Children, my Princely Couzens, you muſt give me leave, more to regard mine Honour and Fame in other Realms; for where the Truth and Certain Proceedings herein are not known, it may be thought an Ambition in me to ſeek what you voluntarily proffer, which would charge ſo deep a Reproach and Stain upon my Honour and Sincerity, that I wou'd not bear for the World's Diadem: Beſides, you muſt not think me ignorant (for I have well obſerv'd it) there is more difficulty in the Government of a Kingdom, than Pleaſure; eſpecially to that Prince who wou'd uſe his Authority and Office as he ought. I muſt therefore deſire, that this (and my unfeigned Proteſtations) may aſſure you, the Crown was never my Aim, nor ſuits my Deſire with yours, in this; yet I ſhall think my ſelf much beholding unto you all in this Election of me, and that Hearty Love I find you bear me, and here proteſt, that for your ſakes it ſhall be all one, whether I be your King or no; for I will ſerve my Nephew faithfully and carefully, with my beſt Counſels and Endeavours, to defend and preſerve him and his Kingdom; nor ſhall there want readineſs in me, to attempt the Recovery of that Hereditary Right in France, which belongs to the King's of England, tho' of late negligently and unhappily loſt.

There the Protector became ſilent, and thought it not ſafe in his Diſcretion or Policy, to open all the Diſguſts he had of the Sovereignity, for that wou'd have been Matter of Exprobration of the Barons, and touch'd too near the Quick, tho' he had well obſerv'd, by ſundry Experiences of the Leading Times, and Modern too, the inconſtant ebbing and flowing of their Diſpoſitions, how variable and apt they were to take up any occaſion of Change, purſuing their Kings (if once ſtirr'd) ſo implacably, that many times they never left without Death or Depoſing. Examples he had in the Reigns of King Edward his Brother, and Henry VI. not long before that in the time of Richard II. and his Grandfather Edward II. more anciently the Extream Troubles and Diſtreſs of King John, and Henry III. all by the Barons, being dreadful Warnings and inſolent Monuments of their Haughtineſs and 1483. Levity; and this was Alta mente repoſtum with the Wiſe Prince.

But the Duke of Buckingham, thinking the Protector ſet too ſlight a Conſideration upon ſo Great a Concernment, and the Affection tender'd by himſelf and the Nobility (and overhearing ſomething he privately ſpake to the Lord Mayor and Recorder, tending to his miſlike) for an Epilogue or Cloſe to his former Oration, he thus freely adds.

The bold and round Concluſion of the Duke of Buckingh.

"SIR, I muſt now, by the Priviledge of this Employment, and in the Behalf of thoſe "and my Country, add ſo much Freedom unto "my Duty, as to tell your Grace, It is immoveably reſolv'd by the Barons and People, That "the Children of King Edward ſhall not Reign "over them. Your Grace hath heard ſome "Cauſes; nor need I intimate, how theſe E-"ſtates have entred and proceeded ſo offenſively "to other Men, and ſo dangerouſly to themſelves, as is now too late to recal or retire. "And therefore, they have fixt this Election "upon you, whom they think moſt able and "careful for their Safety: But, if neither the "General Good, the Earneſt Petitions of the "Nobility and Commonalty, can move you, "we moſt humbly deſire your Anſwer and "Leave to Elect ſome other that may be worthy "of the Imperial Charge; in which (we hope) "we ſhall not incur your Diſpleaſure, conſidering the Deſperate Neceſſity of our Welfare "and Kingdom urges it. And this is our laſt "Suit and Petition to your Grace.

The Protector touch'd by this round and braving Farewel, which made him very ſenſible: For (as Sir Thomas Moor diſertly confeſſeth) the Protector was ſo much moved with theſe Words, that otherwiſe of likelihood he wou'd never have inclined to their Suit: And ſaith, That when he ſaw there was no remedy, but that he muſt either at that Inſtant take the Crown, or both he and his Heirs irrecoverably let it paſs to another; paradventure, one that might prove an Enemy to him and his, eſpecially if Richmond ſtept in; betwixt whom and this Prince, the Hatred was equally extream: Therefore it behoved the Protector to collect himſelf; and fixing his Conſideration upon the effect of that Neceſſity they laſt urged, gave this Reply:

The Protector's Reply to the Duke's laſt Suit.

"MY moſt Noble good Lords, and moſt loving and faithful Friends, the better "ſenſe of your Loves and moſt Eminent Inconveniences inſinuated by your Noble Speaker, "hath made me more ſerious to apprehend the "Benefit of your Proffer and Election. And "I muſt confeſs, in the Meditation thereof, I "find an Alteration in my ſelf, not without "ſome Diſtraction when I conſider all the Realm "ſo bent againſt the Sons of King Edward. And "therefore being certain, there is no Man to "whom the Crown by Juſt Title can be ſo due "as to our ſelf, the rightful Son and Heir of "our moſt Dear and Princely Father, Richard "Duke of York; to which Title of Blood and "Nature, your Favours have joyn'd this of E-"lection, wherein we hold our ſelf to be moſt "ſtrong and ſafe: And having the lawful "Power of both, why ſhou'd I endure my pro-"feſs'd Enemy to Uſurp my Right, and become "a Vaſſal to my Envious Subject? The neceſſi-"ty of theſe Cauſes (as admitting no other "Remedy) urges me to accept your Offer; and "according to your Requeſt, and our own Right, "we here aſſume the Regal Preheminence of the "Two Kingdoms, England and France, from this "Day forward, by us and our Heirs, to Govern "and Defend the one, and by God's Grace and "your Good Aids, to Recover and Eſtabliſh the "other to the ancient Allegiance of England; "deſiring of God to live no longer than we in-"tend and endeavour the Advancement and "flouriſhing Eſtate of this Kingdom." 1483.

At which they all cry'd, God ſave King Richard: And thus he became King. But yet his Detractors ſtick not to Slander and Accuſe all that was ſaid or done in theſe Proceedings of State for mere Diſſimulation; by which Juſtice, they may as well cenſure (At ſit Reverentiâ dictum) all the Barons, worthy and Grave Commons, which had there Votes therein, which wou'd fall a moſt impudent and intolerable Scandal upon all the High Court of Parliament; for in ſhort time after, all that was alledg'd and acted in that Treaty and Colloquy was approved and ratified by the Court of Parliament, ſo that their Cavils only diſcover an Extream Malice and Envy. For it was not poſſible, therefore not credible, he cou'd upon ſuch an inſtant (as it were) by any Practice, attain to that Power and Credit, with all the Barons, Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, to procure and perſwade them from the Sons of King Edward, ſo unanimouſly to become his Subjects, and put the Crown upon his Head with ſuch Solemnity and Publick Ceremonies. Whilſt theſe Matters had their current, the Northern Gentlemen and his Southern Friends joyn'd in a Bill Supplicatory to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, earneſtly expreſſing their Deſires for the Election of the Lord Protector, with the former Cauſes urg'd: Alſo That the Blood of the Young Earl of Warwick was Attainted, and his Title Confiſcate by Act of Parliament. This Bill was deliver'd to the Lords, aſſembled in the Great Hall at Weſtminſter, the Lord Protector ſitting in the Chair of Marble amongſt them, upon the 26th of June, ſome Six or Seven Days after he was Proclaim'd: The Tenour of the Bill was thus written in the Chronicle of the Abbey of Croyland: Lib. Abb. Croyland.

PRotector eodem die, quo Regimen ſub Titulo Regii Nominis ſibi vendicavit (viz.) 26° die Junii, Anno Dom. 1483. ſe apud Magnam Aulam Weſtmonaſterii in Cathedram Marmoream Immiſit & tum mox omnibus proceribus tam Laicis quam Eccleſiaſticis & Cæteris aſſidentibus, aſtantibus &c. oſtendebatur rotulus quidam, in quo per modum ſupplicationis in nomine procerum & Populi Borealis exhibita ſunt, Primum, quod Filii Regis Edwardi erant Baſtardi, ſupponendo, illum præcontraxiſſe matrimonium cum quadam Domina Elianora Boteler, antequam Reginam Elizabetham duxiſſet in Uxorem: Deinde quod Sanguis alterius Fratris (Georgii Scil. Clarenſiæ Ducis) fuiſſet Attinctus. Ita quod nullus certus incorruptus Sanguis Linealis ex parte Richardi Ducis Eboraci poterat inveniri, niſi in Perſona Richardi Protectoris, Ducis Gloceſtriæ, & jam eidem Duci ſuplicabant, ut jus ſuum in Regno Angliæ ſibi aſſumeret & Coronam acciperet.

In Engliſh thus:

"THE Protector, that ſame Day, wherein he took upon him the Government, under "the Royal Name and Title, being the 26th "of June 1483. ſeated himſelf in the Marble "Chair in the Great Hall of Weſtminſter; after "which, all the Lords, as well Temporal as "Spiritual, and others ſitting, or ſtanding by, "&c. a certain Writing was produc'd, wherein, "by 1483. " by way of Humble Petition, in the Name of " the Gentry and Northern People, was repre- " sented, First, That the Sons of King Edward " were Bastards upon account of his having entred " before into a Contract of Marriage with the La- " dy Eleanor Boteler, before his Marriage with " Queen Elizabeth: And next, That the Blood " of the other Brother, George Duke of Clarence, " was Attainted. Insomuch, that none being " to be found that was undoubtedly of a Law- " ful and Lineal Descent from Richard Duke of " York, besides Richard the Protector, Duke of " Gloucester, they therefore Humbly Petition'd " the said Duke to take to himself his Right " unto the Kingdom of England, and to Ac- " cept of the Crown.

But the Barons were all accorded before this Bill came, (b) both Sides moving with an equal and contented forwardness; and in July next following 1483. was Crown'd and Receiv'd with as general Magnificence and Acclamations, as any King in England many Years before. For as a Grave Man writeth, (i) Fuit dignissimus Regno, &c. non inter malos sed bonos principes Commemorandus; That he was most worthy to Reign, and to be numbred amongst the Good, not Bad Princes. The Queen his Wife was Crown'd with him, and with no less State and Greatness; Accompanied him from the Tower to Westminster, having in their Train (besides the Nobility of the South Parts) Four Thousand Gentlemen of the North (k). Upon the 19th of June 1483. in the 25th Year of Lewis the French King, he was named King of England, the Morrow Proclaim'd, and Rode with Great Solemnity from London to Westminster, where in the Seat Royal, he gave the Judges of the Land a Strict and Religious Charge for the Just Executing of the Laws; then departed towards the Abbey, being met at the Church Door with Procession, and the Scepter of King Edward deliver'd to him by the Abbot; so ascended to St. Edward's Shrine, where he offer'd; the Monks in the mean time singing Te Deum: From thence he return'd to the Palace, where he Lodg'd until his Coronation.

Cambden.

Upon the 4th of July he went to the Tower by Water with the Queen his Wife, and the next Day * Created Edward his only Son, (about Ten Years old) Prince of Wales: † He Invested Sir John Howard, (who was made Lord Howard and Knight of the Garter, 17 Edw. IV.) in the Dukedom of Norfolk, in a favourable Admission of the Right of the Lady Margaret his Mother, Daughter of Sir Thomas Mowbray, D. of Norfolk, and an Heir General of the Mowbrays, Dukes of Norfolk and Earls of Surrey, descended from the Lord Thomas Plantagenet of Brotherton, a Younger Son of King Edward I. and Earl of Norfolk, This King also made him Marshal and Admiral of England; he was as rightfully Lord Mowbray, Lord Segrave, Lord Bruce, as Lord Howard, as I have seen him stiled by Royal Warrant in a Commission for Treaty of Truce with Scotland.

Monstrolet, Comines, Anglici scriptores.

1483. Stile of the Duke of Norf. In rotulis in Domo conversi.

His Eldest Son, Sir Thomas Howard, was at the same time Created Earl of Surrey, and made Knight of the Garter; Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, was made Constable of England for term of Life, but he claim'd the Office by Inheritance.

Sir Thomas Moor writes, That Sir Thomas Howard executed the Office of Constable that Day; William Lord Berkley was Created Earl of Nottingham, Francis Lovel Viscount Lovel, and Chamberlain to the King; the Lord Stanley restor'd to Liberty and made Steward of the Houshold (l), Thomas Rotheram, Chancellor and Archbishop of Canterbury, having been committed for delivering the Great Seal to the Queen Widow, receiv'd to Grace, and many Knights Addubb'd of the Old Order, and some of the New, or Habit of the Bath, whose Names I have set down, to shew what regard was had of their Family, and in those Times accused of so much Malignity.

Sir Edmund De la Pool, Son to the Duke of Suffolk.
George Gray, Son to the Earl of Kent.
William Zouch, Son to the Lord Zouch.
Henry Nevil, Son to the Lord Abergaveny.

| | |
|---|---|
| Christopher Willowby. | Thomas Arundel. |
| Henry Babington. | Gervoise of Clifton. |
| Henry Bainton. | Edmund Beddingfield. |
| Thomas Bullen. | Thomas Leukenor. |
| William Say. | John Browne. |
| William Enderby. | William Berkley. |
| Thomas of Vernon. | i. another William Berkley. |
| William Barkley. | |

The 5th Day of July he Rode from the Tower through the City in Pomp, with his Son the Prince of Wales, Three Dukes, and Nine Earls, Twenty Two Viscounts and Simple Barons, Eighty Knights, Esquires and Gentlemen not to be number'd; besides Great Officers of the Crown which had Special Service to do. But the Duke of Buckingham carried the Splendour

His Coronation.

(b) The Barons and Commons were so far from Choosing him, that they were afraid he wou'd not Crown his Nephew. This part of his History is all wrong. Vid. Sir Thomas Moor's Hist. of Edward V. and Richard III.

(i) Compare this Quotation out of Cambden with what that Author says of K. Richard in his Brit. sub Tit. Leicestershire; speaking of Bosworth, Here Henry Earl of Richmond encounter'd King Richard III. who had by most Wicked Means Usurp'd the Kingdom: He overcame and slew the Usurper, and freed England by his Valour from the Rule of a Tyrant. Besides, he does not tell us where Cambden speaks so well of him.

(k) These Four thousand Gentlemen of the North, were (as Hall and Grafton relate it) 5000 Fellows evil apparel'd and worse harnest, whom he sent for out of the North. They were mustred in Finsbury, and were the Contempt of the Beholders.

* His Creation was not before September following, at York; as appears afterwards by the Chronicle of Croyland, and the Notes there. F. S.

† This Title this young Prince enjoy'd but a small time: For as he was Created about the 8th of Septemb. he was dead before the 21st of July the next Year, as may be collected from a Warrant of K. Richard to Nicholas Leventhorp, Receiver of the Dutchy of Lancaster, order'd thereby to pay to John Dawney, late Treasurer of Pomfret 139*l.* 10*s.* due to him for divers Provisions and Emptions by him made for the Expence (as the Warrant ran) of our most Dear Son, whom God pardon. Which last Words bespeak him now dead. This bare Date July the 21. Anno 2*do.* But before his Death, the King his Father heaped up all the Honour he cou'd upon him: He made the Lord Prime, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland for Three Years; confirm'd his Title of Earl of Sarum anew to him; constituted Great Officers in his Houshold, whereof I find William Herbert was his Secretary, for which he had XL Mark assign'd him for his Salary yearly out of the Honour of Pomfret, F. S.

He was (if we may give credit to the King his Father's Patents to Create him Prince of Wales) of great hopes for his Excellent Parts and Disposition. The Words are, Cujus optima indoles, ac praclaræ, quibus pro suæ ætatis Modulo singulariter præditus est, naturæ Doces ingentem atq; favente Deo, indubitatam probitatis spem nobis portendunt. i. e. Whose Excellent Wit and Remarkable Endowments of Nature, wherewith, his Young Age consider'd, he is singularly furnish'd, do portend to us great and undoubted hopes by the favour of God, that he will make a Good Man. K. Rich. Journal penes me. J. S.

(l) For fear of the Lord Strange, his Son, who as 'twas said, was raising Forces in the North.

of

1483. of that Day's Bravery, his Habit and Caparisons of Blew Velvet, Embroider'd with Golden Naves of Carts burning, the Trappings supported by Foot-men, habited costly and suitable. On the Morrow, being the 6th of July, all the Prelates, Miter'd in their Pontificalibus, receiv'd him at Westminster-Hall towards the Chapel; the Bishop of Rochester bare the Cross before him, the Cardinal and the Earl of Huntingdon follow'd with a pair of Gilt Spurs, and the Earl of Bedford with St. Edward's Staff for a Relick. After the Procession, the Earl of Northumberland bears a Pointless Sword naked, the Lord Stanley the Mace of the Constableship (but waited not for Constable) the Earl of Kent bare the Second Sword naked with a Point upon the Right hand of the King, the Viscount Lovel another Sword on the King's Left Hand with a Point. Next came the Duke of Suffolk with a Scepter, the Earl of Lincoln with the Ball and Cross, then the Earl of Surrey with the Sword of State in a rich Scabbard in Place of the Constable of England, the Duke of Norfolk on his Right hand with the Crown: After him immediately, the King in a Sur-coat and Robe of Purple, the Canopy born by the Barons of the Five Ports, the King between the Bishop of Bath and Durham, the D. of Buckingham bearing up his Train, and serv'd with a White Staff for Seneshal or High-Steward of England.

Bourchier Archbish. of Canterbury. Swords born. Signifying Mercy. Signifying Justice to the Temporalty. Justice to the Clergy Peace. Monarchy

In the Front of the Queen's Train, the Earl of Huntington bare the Scepter, Viscount Lisle the Rod with the Dove, the Earl of Wiltshire her Crown, and next to him follow'd the Queen her self (in Robes like the King) between Two Bishops, the Canopy born by Barons of the Ports, upon her Head a Coronet set with Precious Stones; the Lady Margaret Somerset, Countess of Richmond, carried up her Train, follow'd by the Dutchess of Suffolk, with many Countesses and other Ladies. In this manner the whole Procession pass'd through the Palace, and entred the West-Door of the Abby, the King and Queen taking their Seats of State, stay'd until divers Holy Hymns were sung, then ascended to the High Altar shifting their Robes, and putting on other open and voided in sundry Places for their Anointing; which done, they took other Robes of Cloth of Gold, so return'd to their Seats, where the Cardinal of Canterbury and the other Bishops Crowned them, the Prelate putting the Scepter in the Left Hand of the King, the Ball and Cross in his Right, and the Queen's Scepter in her Right Hand, and the Rod with the Dove in her Left; on each Hand of the King stood a Duke, before him the Earl of Surrey with the Sword as aforesaid; on each Hand of the Queen stood a Bishop, by them a Lady kneeling, the Cardinal said Mass, and gave the Pax; then the King and Queen descending, were both housled with one Host parted between them at the High Altar: This done, they Offer'd at St. Edward's Shrine, where the King laid down St. Edward's Crown and put on another, so return'd to Westminster-Hall in the same State they came, there dispersed, and retired themselves for a Season. In which Interim, came the Duke of Norfolk, Marshal of England, mounted upon a brave Horse, trapp'd with Cloth of Gold down to the Ground, to submove the Press of People and void the Hall. About Four of the Clock, the King and the Queen sat to Dinner, the King at the Middle Table of the Hall, and the Queen on his Left Hand; on each side a Countess attending her, holding a Cloth of Plaisance (or rather of * Essuyance) for her Cup: On the King's Right Hand sat the Archbishop of Canterbury, and all the Ladies were plac'd on one side of a Long Table in the middle of the Hall against them, at another Table the Lord Chancellor and all the Nobles; at a Table next to the Cup-board, the Lord Mayor of London and the Aldermen. 1483.

* Towel or Napkin that wait on the Cup.

Behind the Barons of the Kingdom sat the Barons of the Ports; there were other Tables for Persons Quality. After all were seated, came the Lord Marshal again, the Earl of Surrey Constable (Pro illa vice tantum) the Lord Stanley, Lord Steward, Sir William Hopton, Treasurer of the Houshold, and Sir Thomas Piercy, Controuler; they serv'd the King's Board with one Dish of Gold and another of Silver. The Queen was serv'd all in Gilt Vessels, and the Cardinal Archbishop in Silver Dishes.

As soon as the Second Course was served in, Sir Robert Dimock, the King's Champion, makes Proclamation, That whosoever wou'd say, King Richard the Third was not lawfully King, he wou'd Fight with him at all Gutterance, and for Gage thereof threw down his Gauntlet; then all the People cry'd, King Richard, God save King Richard; and this he acted in three several parts of the Hall; then an Officer of the Cellar brought him a Gilded Bowl with Wine, which he drank, and carried the Cup away as his ancient Fee: After that, the Heralds cry'd Largess thrice, and return'd to the Scaffold. Lastly came the Mayor of London with the Sheriffs, with a Voider, serving the King and Queen with Sweet Wines, who had each of them a Cover'd Cup of Gold for their Reward: By which time the Day began to give way to the Night, the King and Queen departing to their Lodgings.

Moor. Grafton. Polidore. Hall. Croyland. Hollingshed. Stow, &c.

And this is a Brief and True Relation of his Coronation, testified by all the Best Writers and Chroniclers of our Stories, publick and allow'd, which may confute the Boldness of that Slander, that says, He was not rightfully, and authentically Crown'd, but obscurely and indirectly crept in at the Window. But all Times have Detractors, and all Courts their Parasites; and many that have admired Princes to their Graves, even there have turn'd from them, with Ingratitude and Murmur. Soon after this the King dismissed, and sent Home all the Lords, Spiritual and Temporal, with a straight Charge and Direction to them, the Judges of Oyer and Terminer, with all other Magistrates and Officers in general and particular, for the Equitable and Just Government of their Jurisdictions and Circuits: And it is observ'd, those Times were under as happy an Expectation of Law and Justice, as those, either before or after more flatter'd; which John Hide (a Learned Man, and Doctor of Physick) implies in a Manuscript Poesy of his.

——— Solio juris rectique Minister,
Ille sedens alto, tali sermone profatur;
Moses Concilio soceri persuasus Jethro,
Solus quod Populi nequiit componere lites,
Constituit populi præfectos atq; Tribunos;
Sic cum me præcelsa premant fastigia Regni,
Ardua magnarum teneatis munera rerum;
Et primùm, à vobis pravos secludite motus
Æquis Justitiæ trutinis appendite causas;
Ob paupertatem miseros ne spernite cives,
Nec vota in cassum fundat Pupillus in auras,
Deniq; largitio, nè vos Corrumpat iniqua, &c.

Then seated on his Throne he thus begun,
As Moses was by Jethro's Counsel won,

Alone

1483. Alone unable to sustain the weight
Of Publick Rule, and judge in each Debate,
To choose a Court of Elders for the State.
So I, elected to the Pond'rous Crown,
On you lay half the Uneasy Burthen down.
First then, Let Vicious Passions be suppress't,
And banish Love and Hatred from your Breast.
In equal Scales impartial Justice weigh,
Nor to the Poor oppress'd Relief delay;
Let not defrauded Orphans Sue in vain,
Nor be Debauch'd with Baits of profferd (Gain.

All things thus in a Happy Presage and Good Order, the King, with the Queen, departed from London, and makes Windsor the first Gest in his Progress for some few Days: From thence to his Mannor of Woodstock, then to the University of Oxford, where the Muses Crown'd their Brows with fragrant Wreaths for his Entertainment. Next he visited the Circular City of Gloucester, and gave the Citizens (for the Love and Loyalty they express'd, in Holding the Castle and Town so constantly against Queen Margaret and the Forces of Henry the Sixth, for him and his Brother the King) large Priviledges and Immunities.

And here the Duke of Buckingham takes his leave for Brecknock, constantly disposed and affected in all outward appearance. The King making small stay any where, (save at Coventry) until he came to the goodly and ancient City of York, the Scope and Goale of his Progress, which receiv'd him with all Honour and Festivity, and was there the second time Crown'd by Dr. Rotheram, Archbishop of that See, in the Cathedral Church, and his Son invested in the Principality of Wales, as the Prior of Croyland reporteth; Eodem die quo Richardus Coronatus est Rex in Ecclesia Metropolitana Eboracensi, mox Filium Edwardum in Principatum Walliæ cum insigniis virgæ aureæ &c. evexit, & Pomposa & sumptuosa festa & convivia ibi fecit ‖.

Chro. M. S. in Quar. apud. D. Ro. Cotton, and Rob. Fabian. Richard the Bastard of the Duke of Glouceſt. Capt. of Calais.

And indeed, it was a Day of Great † State; for (as Polidore saith) There was then Three Princes in York wearing Crowns, the King, Queen and Prince; in acclamation whereof, there was Stage Plays, Turnaments, and other Triumphal Sports, as Sir Thomas Moor relates. At this time the King Knighted Richard of Glouceſter his Base Son, who was after Captain of Calais, and many Gentlemen of those Parts *. But (albeit this was an Intermission, as it were, of all Busie and Serious Agitations) yet the King, still where he travell'd had a Just Regard to the Administration and Execution of Justice and the more Facinorous Malefactors: And surely these respective Inclinations of his had their Solemn Affections and Desires naturaliz'd in him, witnessed by the Scope and Integrity of those Just Laws which after follow'd. 1483.

The Progress thus spent, he returns to London; and having consulted some Matters of State, declares his first Resolution for the Tribute detain'd by France, which he had formerly by a Friendly Message demanded, but now sends Stout Menaces and Threats for it. The French wou'd not have it call'd a Tribute, but a Pension, as Philip de Comines insinuates, though it had been rais'd and paid to King Edward IV. in lieu of the Dutchy and Countries of Aquitaine, Normandy, Poictou and Maine, &c. whereof the French had deseiz'd the Crown of England, which King Edward IV. forc'd Lewis to acknowledge, and to covenant and agree, That he, his Heirs and Successors, shou'd pay unto the Crown of England, the Sum of Fifty Thousand Crowns, with caution and security to be paid in the City of London; or after Iean Tillet and John Maierus, Seventy Five Thousand Crowns to be paid into the Tower; with which the French King also granted, in the name of Annual Pension, Sixteen Thousand Pounds to some Noblemen and others of special credit with the King. As to Sir Thomas Gray, Marquess of Dorset, William Lord Hastings, Chamberlain to the King, Doctor Thomas Rotheram, Bishop of Lincoln and Lord Chancellor of England; John Lord Howard, Sir John Cheyney, Master of the Horse; Sir Thomas Mountgomery, Mr Challoner, and to the Master of the Rolls: The chiefest of these had Two Thousand Crowns a piece per Ann. Besides which Pensions, he gave Rich Presents, and sent Rewards to such Lords as stood most for this accord. Eugueraunt de Monstroulet avoucheth, That the Lord Howard and the Master of the Horse, were the chiefest of the Mediators in it: his reason is, that they were the Men most in favour with King Edward. Iean Tillet, with Philip de Comines tells us, The Lord Howard in less than Two Years, had the value of Twenty Four Thousand Crowns in Plate, Coin and Jewels, over and above his Annual Pension; the Lord Hastings at one time to the value of Two Thousand Marks in Plate, besides his Pension. And if their own Stories speak truth, Richard de Nevil, the Great Earl of War- 1483.

John Maierus. Iean Tillet. Du Tillet saith That this Tribute or Pension 75000 Crowns or Escu's & chacum Escu valant trois souls.

---

‖ i. e. That same Day wherein Richard was crown'd King in the Metropolitan Church of York, he advanced his Son Edward to the Principality of Wales, with the Ensigns of the Goldeu Rod, &c. and there celebrated most splendid and sumptuous Feasts.

† In order to this Solemnity, the King sent from York the last Day of August, to Piers Curteis, Keeper of his Wardrobe; in these Words:

By the KING.

" We wol and charge you to deliver to the Bringers hereof for Us the Parcels following, that is to say, First One Dou-
" blet of Purple Sattin, lined with Holland Cloth, and enterlined with Buske. One Doublet of Tawny Sattin, lined in
" likewise: Two short Gowns of Cremysyn Cloth of Gold, the one with Droppis, and that other with Netts, lined with
" green Velvet. One Cloak with a Cape of Violet ingrained; the Bow lined with black Velvet. One Stomacher of purple
" Sattin; one Stomacher of Tawny Sattin. One Gown of green Velvet, lined with tawny Sattin. One yard and three " Quarters Corse of Sike [Silk] meddled with Gold, and as much black Corse of Silk, for Our Spurs. Two Yards and an
" half and three Nayls of white Cloth of Gold for a Crynelze for a Borde; five yards of black Velvet for a lining of a Gown
" of green Sattin: One Plakard made of part of the said two yards and one half and two Nayls of white Cloth of Gold lined " with Buckram. Three pair of Spurs short, al gilt; two pair of Spurs long white, parcel gilt. Two yards of black Buckram,
" for amending of the lining of divers Trappers. One Banner of Sarcenet of our Lady; one Banner of the Trinity: One
" Banner of St. George. One Banner of St. Edward: One of St. Cutbert: One of Our own Arms, al Sarcenet. Three
" Coats of Arms beaten with fine Gold, for Our own Person. Five Coat Armours for Heraulds, lined with Buckram:
" Forty Trumpet Banners of Sarcenet: Seven hundred and forty Pensils of Buckram. Three hundred and fifty Pensils
" of Tarter: Four Standards of Sarcenet with Boars: Thirteen thousand Quinyians of Fustian with Boars. And these
" Our Letters, &c. J. S.

* He knighted also Gaufridus de Safiola, Ambassador from the Queen of Spain, being present at this Solemnity; by putting a Collar of Gold about his Neck, and striking three times upon his Shoulders with his (the King's) Sword, and agreeable Words added, and by other Marks of Honour according to the English Custom. In testimony whereof the King gave him his Letters Patents, dated at his Court at York, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the King's Court being present, in the Act of the said Prince Edward's Creation, on the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, which was the 8th Day of September, 1483. J. S.

wick,

1483. wick, had of the Kings of France much more than any other English Nobleman, which the Chronicle of Brittain seconds. And doubtless, King Richard had still compell'd him to continue it, had not Eruptions of State and Tumultuary Practices fatally deterr'd his Sword: For as Kings have vaster Limits, they have higher Bounds than others. If our Vulgar Paths be rugged, theirs are slippery, and all their Mighty Resolutions and Ambitions have their Fate and Circle; hither they must, and no further; yet as envious as Fortune shew'd her self, he brought King Lewis to Terms of Fair Promises and Mediation for time of Payment, as Comines obscurely implies.

1484. The Q. Mother & K. Richard reconcil'd.

This Year the King kept a very Magnificent Chistmas at Westminster, and was reconciled to the Queen Dowager, who left Sanctuary, * and to congratulate the King's Favour, sent her Five Daughters to Court, where they were receiv'd with all Princely Kindness.

The Parliament of Rich. 3.

On the Three and Twentieth Day of January, in the First Year of his Reign, he summon'd a Parliament to be holden at Westminster, in which (after the enacting of many Good Laws) the Marriages of King Edward were debated, that with the Lady Gray adjudg'd unlawful, and her Children illegitimate, there being proof of a former Contract and Marriage with the Lady Elianor Talbot, Daughter of the Old Earl of Shrewsbury, and Relict of the Lord Butler of Sudeley, then and long after living, and all that had been infer'd by the Duke of Buckingham, or contain'd in the Bill supplicatory, demonstrated, was again consulted, and Judgment given against that Marriage, and Incapacity of the Children also of the Earl of Warwick and his Sister, the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, all decreed and confirm'd by Act of Parliament; so that here to tax so general an Assent, were to say there was not one Honest nor Just Man in that High Court, and what greater Scandal to the whole Kingdom? 1484.

There was likewise notice taken of the Earl of Richmond's Pretence to the Crown, by a Title deriv'd from the House of Lancaster, who was at that time in France, labouring to engage the King and the Duke of Brittain in the Quarrel. Oh! the infinite Windings and Perplex'd Sleeps we labour through, to get that we must bid Goodnight to To morrow; and yet the True and Rightful Lancaster had no Finger in it, for this Earl was not then granted to be of the House of Lancaster, until the Pope by his Bull had given him that Stile, and himself (after he was King) by his Prerogative assum'd it. In this Parliament he was attainted of High Treason, and with him John Earl of Oxford, Thomas Marques of Dorset, Jasper Earl of Pembroke, Lionel Bishop of Salisbury, Peirce Bishop of Exeter, the Lady Margaret Countess of Richmond, Thomas Morton Bishop of Ely, Thomas Naudick, by the stile of Thomas Naudick of Cambridge, Conjurer, Willsam Knevet of Buckingham smear'd with the same Pitch, George Brown of Beechworth, Thomas Lukenor of Tratton, John Guilford, John Fogg, Edward Poinings, Thomas Fieries of Cherstmonceux, Nicholas Gainsford, William Clifford, John Dorrell, with others of Kent ‖ and the West Countrey. There was further enacted for the approbation and confirming the True and Lawful Title of King Richard, this Clause or Sentence:

The Friends & Confederates of the Earl of Richm.

" It is declared, pronounced, decreed, confirm'd and establish'd by the Authority of this " present Parliament, That King Richard III. " is the true and undoubted King of this Realm, " as well by Right of Consanguinity and Here- " tage, as by Lawful Election and Coronation, " &c. And in a place of the Roll of this Parliament, † there are Arguments to be gathered, that the Two Sons of K. Edward were living in the time of this Parliament, which was at (a) The Sons of K. Edward living in Jan. and Feb. after the Death of their Father.

* This cannot be true, for she was certainly in Sanctuary in March following with five of her Daughters, viz. Elizabeth, Cecil, Anne, Katharine and Bridget: Nor could this Queen, which was now undervalued by the Name of Dame Jane Gray, be perswaded to leave the Sanctuary by any Entreaty hitherto. Insomuch, that the King on the First Day of March, in the presence of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, solemnly swore upon the Gospels, " That if she would come to him out of the Sanctuary at Westminster, he would provide for her " and for her Daughters, as his Kinswomen; and that they should be in no danger of their Lives; and that he would al- " low her 700 Mark a Year; and her Daughters 200 Mark apiece for their Portions in Marriage, and would take care to " marry them to Gentlemen. And to this his Oath he set his Sign Manual, as may be seen more at large in certain Notes in the Third Book. For he had left this Queen in a very bare condition, having possest himself (and that by Act of Parliament) of all her Castles, Seignuories, Mannors, Lands, Tenements, Farms, Fee-Farms, Franchises, Liberties and other Hereditaments, made over to her at any time, either by Confirmation, State or Act of Parliament, all from the 1st day of May last, to be utterly void, annull'd and of no strength nor effect in Law; Thus roughly had King Richard dealt with her. And this was done by an Act of Parliament that sat after Christmas, when this Author relates she left the Sanctuary, and the King was reconciled to her. J. S.

‖ This Insurrection of the Gentry in Kent was strong, so that soon after it was over, King Richard himself hasted thither in Person; and a severe Proclamation was set forth for the Taking of those concerned in it; and Who, and of what Quality they were, and what the Rewards were of such as should take them, the ensuing Proclamation will discover.

" The King, our sovereign Lord, remembring that many and divers of his True Subjects of this his County of Kent, " have now late been abused and blinded by Sir John Gilford, Sir Thomas Lowkenor, Sir William Hawte Knts, Edward " Ponyngs, Richard Gilford, William Cheney, Thomas Penys, Will. Brandon, John Wingfeld, Anth. Kene, Nic. Gaynsford, John " Isley, Rauf Tikhill, Anthony Browne, John Pympe, Rob. Brent, Long Reger, Richard Potter, Richard Fisher, Sir Markus Hussen " Priest, and others the King's Rebells and Traitours, which imagyned and utterly conspyred the Destruction of the " kyng the Soveraign Lords most Royal Person, the Subversion of his Royalme, and the Common-wele of the same: " And many of his said Subjects of this his County of Kent, when they knew and understood their said conspired Trea- " sons, left and forlook them, and as his true Subjects sithence have well and truly behaved themselves. For the which " the kynges Grace standeth, and wol be to them good and gracious soveraign Lord; and willeth and desyreth al his " said true Subjects to put them in their effectual Devoirs to take his said Rebels and Traitours; and graunteth that he or " they that shal hap to take the said Sir John Gilford, &c. Renold Pimroe, &c. shal have for each of them 300 Mark, or 40 l. " of Land. And for ever each of the other after named 100 l. or Ten Mark of Land; and great Thanks of the Kynges " Grace; and over this, the kynge woll it be known, that if any Person harbour, lodge, comfort, succour or kepe " within his House, or otherwise ayd or receive wyttingly any of the said Traitors, and disclose them not, nor bring them " to the Kynge in al good hast possyble after thys Proclamation, that then he or they so harbouring, ayding, comforting, " succouring or lodging them, or any of them hereafter to be taken and reputed as the Kynges Rebels and Traitours. " And also, that no Man presume, after this Proclamation, to keep any Goods or Cattals of the said Traitours; but them " utter and shew to the Kynges Commissioners, in this hys said County of Kent, assign'd and appoynted. And they " that so truly wil shew it shal be wel rewarded, and they that do the contrary shal be punished according to the Law. J. S.

† The Author would have done much towards the Credit of what he drives at in his History, to have specified this place of the Roll, and the Words thereof, whence such Arguments might be gathered. For all History relates the Murthers to be committed before this time. J. S.

the

1483. the least Nine Months after the Death of their Father, and six Months after King Richard; which will import thus much, That if King Richard then, lawfully and quietly possess'd of the Crown, suffer'd them to live so long, there is no reason why he shou'd after make them away, for their Lives cou'd not rectify their Blood or Titles, nor their Deaths advantage him; neither can Bastards be dangerous or prejudicial to the True and Titular Lord, or Lawful Proprietary, be he Prince or Subject; witness Foreign Countries, and England it self, which holds Bastards uncapable of Heritage, Honour or Offices. In the Month of February, towards the end of this Parliament, the King in his Providence to establish the Regal Fortune and Succession in the Prince his Son, and to fasten the Affection of the Nobility and the People unto him with the Crown, procures them to meet him in the Pallace at Westminster, and there (Interiori Cœnaculo, as mine Author saith) tendred by the Duke of Norfolk unto them, an Oath of Fealty and Allegiance in writing, to be taken to the Prince of Wales; which they took and subscrib'd most willingly: The Occasion of this, was his Jealousy of that New League struck up between the Earl of Richmond and the Duke of Buckingham, who was now discover'd more apparently, and the rest of the Engagement. To oppose and suppress them therefore, and stifle the Confederacy before it should grow more threatning; the King makes a Commission by Letters Patents, in the Name of the Vice-Constable of England, unto Sir Ralph Ashton; a Copy whereof (the President being unusual, and the Office great) I have transcrib'd verbatim from the Records in the Chapel of the * Converts.

Vice Constable of England.

* That is, the Chapel of the Rolls.

Vice-Constabulario Angliæ Constituto.

Patents de anno 1 Ri. 3. part. 1. mem. 2.

REX dilecto & fideli suo, Rudolpho Ashton Militi, salutem. Sciatis, quod nos de fidelitate, circumspectione, & probitate, vestra plenius confidentes, assignavimus deputavimus & ordinavimus vos hac Vice Constabularium nostrum Angliæ, ac Commissionarium nostrum, dantes & concedentes vobis tenore præsentium potestatem & authoritatem generalem, & mandatum speciale, ad audiendum & examinandum ac procedendum, contra quascunque personas de crimine læsa nostræ regiæ majestatis suspectas & culpabiles tam per viam examinationis testium quam aliter prout vobis melius visum fuerit ex officio vestro; nec non in causis illis judicialiter & sententialiter juxta casus exigentiam & Delinquentium demerita omni strepitu & futura Judicii appellatione quacunque remota, quandocunque vobis videbitur procedendum, judicandum & finali executione de mandandum cum omnibus etiam clausulis, verbis, & terminis specialibus ad executionem istius mandati & authoritatis nostræ de jure vel consuetudine requisitis, quæ etiam omnia hic expressa habemus, assumpto vobiscum aliquo tabellione fide digno, qui singula conscribat una cum aliis quæ in præmissis vel circa ea necessaria videbuntur seu qualitercunq; requisita; mandantes & firmiter vobis injungentes, quod aliis quibuscunq; prætermissis circa prædicta quoties & quando opus fuerit intendatis, causasque antedictas audiatis, examinetis, & in eisdem procedatis ac eas judicetis & finali executione ut præfertur demandetis. Damus etiam omnibus & singulis quorum interest in hac parte tenore præsentium firmiter in mandatis, quod vobis in præmissis faciendis pareant, assistant & auxilientur in omnibus diligenter, in cujus, &c. Teste Rege apud Covent. 34. Die Octobris, Anno Regni Primo; per ipsum Regem ore tenus.

1483.

In English thus.

To the Vice-Constable of England Constituted.

"THE King to his beloved and faithful Ralph Ashton Kt. greeting. Know, that We fully confiding in your Fidelity, " Wisdom, and Integrity, have assign'd, deputed, " and ordain'd you at this time our Vice-Con- " stable of England, and our Commissionary, Gi- " ving and Committing to you by the tenor " of these Presents, Power and Authority ge- " neral, and our special Command to Hear, Exa- " mine and Proceed against all Persons whatso- " ever, suspected or guilty of the Crime of " High-Treason against Us, either by way of " Examination of Witnesses, or otherways, as " shall seem to you most expedient and suita- " ble to your Office: As also in these Causes, " judicially and sententially, according to the " Exigency of the Case and Demerit of the " Delinquent, without all Noise or Appeal, " when you shall think fit, to Proceed, Deter- " min and Commit to Final Execution, with " all Clauses, Words, and special Terms by " Law or Custom required to the Execution " of that Our Command and Authority, as if " here particularly expres'd; taking unto your " Assistance some Publick Notary of known Fi- " delity, who may commit to Writing all these " things, with what else shall in or about the " Premisses seem necessary, or any manner of " way requisite; Commanding and strictly In- " joyning you, That all other Affairs whatever " being laid aside, you apply your selves to the " foresaid, how often, and at what time it " shall be necessary; and that the above-named " Causes you Hear, Examin, and in the same " Proceed and them Determin and commit to " final Execution as said is. We also by the " tenor of these Presents strictly command all " and every one in this Part whom it may " concern, to obey you in performing the Pre- " misses, and that they assist and diligently help " you in all Things, In Confirmation, &c. Wit- " ness the King at Covent. the 24th Day of O- " ctober, and First Year of his Reign; Taken " from the Mouth of the King himself.

What Succes this Commission, and new Office had, I find not reported; but it might come too late, or the new Officer forget what he was to execute, for the Faction lost none they could Corrupt or Win; yet surely, the Institution of it was very Politick and Important, as a plain Image and Pourtraict of the Office and Authority of the Great or High Constable of England, which, in the Execution of a Wise and Valiant Person, is of a high and great use.

Other Officers of K. Richard 3.

Having made mention of these Offices, it shall not be a Parergue, between these Acts, to inter-add the rest of this King's Officers, both Chief and Others; at the least, such as were of Honour or Dignity: I have before named the High-Constable, the Great Marshal, High Admiral, Lord Chamberlain, the rest were Sir John Wood the Elder, Lord Treasurer the First Year, and Sir John Touchet, Lord Audley during the rest of his Reign: Dr. Russel Bishop of Lincoln had the Great Seal, Thomas Barrow was Master of the Rolls, (which Place Henry the Seventh continued to him, and made him a Privy Counsellor) John Kendal was Principal Secretary, Sir William Hopton Treasurer of the 1483. Houſhold. Sir Thomas Peircy Controuler, after him Sir John Buck, John Gunthorp Keeper of the Privy Seal, Sir William Huſſey Chief Juſtice, Thomas Tremaine and Roger Townſend the King's Serjeants, Morgan Kidwel Attorney General, Nicholas Fitz-William Recorder of London.

Treaties for League and Commerce with Flanders, &c.: In Theſauro Scaccarii, 1 R. 3.

For Matters of Treaty, betwixt this King and Foreign Princes, I have ſeen a Memorial of one for Intercourſe and Commerce, between him and (m) Philip Duke of Burgundy, and the Eſtates of Flanders, who in the Record are call'd Membra Flandriæ: Theſe Princes and States had each of them their Commiſſioners to Treat and Determin the Affairs, which I find they diſpatch'd with Approbation of the Princes their Maſters.

In Rolls Anno 1 R. 3.

There was alſo a Commiſſion about theſe Times, to Hear and Redreſs the Complaints made to the King, by the Subjects of the King of France and of Denmark, which was well expedited.

1484. Anno Regni 2. That Treaty of Peace and League with Scotland, (began before) was continued, and finiſh'd by Commiſſioners ſent from James IV. King of Scotland, aud by other Commiſſioners Delegate for the King of England; thoſe for Scotland were Coli Earl of Argile, Chancellor of Scotland, N. Biſhop of Aberdene, the Ld. Liſle, the Lord Dromonde of Stobhall, Mr, Archibald Quhitlaw, Archdeacon of Lodion and Secretary to the King, Lion King at Arms, and Duncan of Dundas; they came to Nottingham in September, Anno Dom. 1484, and were honourably receiv'd in the Great Chamber of the Caſtle, the King ſitting under his Royal Cloth of State; Mr. Archibald Quhitlaw, ſtepping before the reſt, addreſt a very Eloquent Oration unto him in Latin, which reflected upon the Praiſe of Martial Men and Art Military, including much to the Honour and Praiſe of King Richard. This Treaty aim'd partly at a Truce and Peace, partly at a Marriage between James the Prince of Scotland and the Lady Anne, Daughter of John de la Poole, Duke of Suffolk, and Niece to King Richard.

Argile in Record.

Commiſſioners for the King of England, were John Biſhop of Lincoln, Richard Biſhop of St. Aſoph, John Duke of Norfolk, Henry Earl of Northumberland, Mr. John Gunthorpe Cuſtos privati Sigilli, Sir Thomas Stanley, Lord Stanley, Sir N. Ld. Strange, Sir N. Lord Powis, Sir Henry Lord Fitzhugh, Sir Humphry Lord Dacres, Mr. Thomas Barrow Maſter of the Rolls, Sir Richard Ratcliffe, William Catesby, and Richard Salkeld: The other for the Treaty of Alliance and Marriage, were Thomas Archbiſhop of York, John Biſhop of Lincoln, John Biſhop of Worceſter, John Duke of Norfolk, William Earl of Nottingham, John Sutton, Lord Dudley, N. Lord Scroope of Upſal, Sir William Huſſey, Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench; Sir Richard Ratcliffe, and William Catesby: But the Succeſs of that, and many other Good Intendments, were interpoſed by the Inconſtancy and Contraſte of the Times. The Lady Anne de la Poole, upon the breach thereof, (reſolving to accept no other Motion) forthwith took a Religious Habit in the Monaſtery of Sion (n).

1484.

The Lady Anne de la Poole a Nun.

There was another Treaty of Peace and Truce in this Second Year, between him and the Duke of Brittain, or at the leaſt given out for Peace, yet was indeed but a Part and Pretext of the Treaty: For the main Negotiations on the King's ſide, was, how to get the Earl of Richmond out of his Cuſtody into his own, or be as well ſecur'd of him there as his Brother King Edward was: And for this Treaty, the chief Negotiators were the Biſhop of Lincoln, and Sir Thomas Hutton for the King, the Biſhop of Leon and others for the Duke. The Treaty began Anno Dom. 1484. and was finiſh'd and ratified in the Year following; but the Duke violated his Part immediately, by giving Aid to the King's Enemies.

Treaty with the Duke of Brittain.

Ib. in Scac.

In the ſame Year there were Letters made (which are yet extant in the Treaſury of the Exchequer) that moved a Peace and Truce between King Richard and Charles VIII. King of France; wherein it muſt be nnderſtood, the Tribute before mention'd was Articled.

Treaty with the King of France.

Alſo in this Year, and the Year before, there was a private Treaty, which we muſt not paſs by, for the Marriage of the Lady Elizabeth with King Richard himſelf: What the Succeſs of it was, and how far it proceeded, will more aptly preſent it ſelf in another place.

Treaty of Marriage of King Richard with the Lady Eliz.

We are now to take notice of the Duke of Buckingham's Revolt, for this was the Preparative and Fourrier of the reſt: And to give it the more taking Feature and ſpecious Pretence, it muſt be given out, That the Cauſe was the Reformation of an Ill Government and Tyranny, under which Species (for Treaſon is ever fairly palliated, and ſeldom wants the form of ſome Plea, tho' at the Bar) they muſt take up Arms againſt the King. And here (as ſome Rivers deriv'd from the Sea, cannot ſuddenly loſe their taſte of ſaltneſs) they diſcover'd their ancient Taint and Inconſtancy, which the Prince wiſely ſuſpected from the firſt. For the Duke of Buckingham (how Affably ſoever he trim'd his Countenance) it ſhou'd ſeem departed Malecontent from Court, yet made not that general publick pretended Cauſe of the King's Crimes all his Quarrel, but challeng'd him by ſome private Grudges, * as denying to give or reſtore to him the Earldom of Hereford and Conſtableſhip of England

Revolt of the Duke of Buck.

The Duke of Buck. firſt riſeth in Rebellion.

The Quarrel of the Duke of Buckingh. againſt the King.

(m) This cannot be true, for Philip D. of Burgundy died in June 1467. according to Comines, and his Son, Charles Ten Years after him. To Charles ſucceeded Anne his Daughter, married to Maximilian Arch-Duke of Auſtria, who in right of his Wife was ſtiled Duke of Burgundy till the Year 1485, when he was choſen King of the Romans, and 'twas 1492. before his Son the Arch-Duke Philip ſucceeded him in the Sovereignity of the Netherlands, as Duke of Burgundy, Eight Years after King Richard's Death. ——— Phil. de Com.

(n) Thin, in his Account of all the Dukes in England ſince the Conqueſt, ſays Anne de la Pool was by King Richard's procurement, marrried to the Duke of Rothſay, the Scots King's eldeſt Son. ——— Hol. p. 1236.

* King Richard had extremely obliged this Duke, to keep him faſt to him; ſo that he had little reaſon to be malecontent. While he was Duke of Glouceſter and Protector of the Realm, and of the Perſon of his Nephew Edward V. he procured for the Duke almoſt all the Government and Authority of Wales, and other bordering Counties: For he had the Office of Conſtable of all the King's Caſtles, and the Office of Steward of the ſaid Caſtles and divers Manours, Roy-alties, Lands, Lordſhips, &c. in the Counties of Salop, Hereford, Somerſet, Dorſet and Wilts: To have without making Account or rendring any thing to the King. To him alſo Edward V. granted the whole Overſight and Government of his Subjects in thoſe Counties, and a Power and Authority for the ſecurity of his Perſon and Kingdom, and Conſervation of Peace in thoſe Parts, to call them together, and to Array and Arm them. To the ſaid Duke the King alſo gave the Office of Chief Juſtice and Chamberlain in South and North Wales for term of Life. He conſtituted him Conſtable of the Caſtle and County of Carmerden, of the Caſtle and County of Cardigan, of the Caſtle of Aberſtwith in Cardigan, the Caſtle of Denevey in South Wales, the Caſtle and Town of Tynbych in the County of Pembroke, the Caſtle and Lordſhip of Kilgarrum in South Wales, and the Caſtle and Town of Llanſtephan there; the Lordſhip of Wallewyns Caſtle in the County of Pembroke: the Caſtle and Lordſhip of Weſt-Haverford in South Wales. He alſo gave, granted and conſtituted 1483. ſtituted the ſaid Duke to be Conſtable, Steward and Receiver of the Caſtle, Lordſhip and Manour of Usk, the Caſtle and Manour of Carlion, the Caſtle, Lordſhip and Manour of Dynos; the Caſtle and half of the Lordſhip and Manour of Ewyas Lacy; the Caſtle Lordſhip and Manour of Belth; and the Caſtles, Manours and Lordſhips of Clifford, of Ragener, of Melenueth, of Mountgomery, of Dynbigh, of Elbel, of Nerberch, of Wigmore, of Holt, of Branfeld, with a great number more in Wales and the Marches of Wales, which were in the Hands and Poſſeſſion of the Earl of Pembroke before. 1483.

Again by another Patent, the King conſtituted the ſaid Henry Duke of Bucks, Conſtable, Steward and Receiver of the Caſtle, Manour and Town of Monmouth; and al Caſtles, Towns, Lordſhips, Manours, Lands, Tenements, which were parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter in South Wales. He was alſo conſtituted Keeper or Chief Foreſter of the Foreſt and Chaſe of Hodenake, with all the Profits, Commodities, &c. And to put in all manner of Officers, Bailiffs, &c. Still further there was another Grant to him from Edward of Gowerlands in Wales, and to have the Rule, Government and Overſight of them and the preſent Officers turn'd out to admit the Duke.

Beſides all theſe large Grants from Edw. V. Richard when he came to reign added, moſt royally, further Favours to him; For he had made him, Firſt of all Great Chamberlain of England, June 28 afterwards he made him Steward of the Honour of Tutbury, in the County of Derby and Stafford; alſo of the Caſtle, Town and Lordſhip and Manour of Newcaſtle under Tine; the Lordſhips and Manours of Worksworth and Aſhborn, and all the Caſtles, Lordſhips and Manours, &c. in the ſame County, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter: Alſo the Office of Conſtable of the Caſtle of Tutbury, Maſter Foreſter of the Chaſe of Nedewood and of Duffeld Firth; and the ſame Duke to be Superviſor of the Honour aforeſaid, and of the ſame Caſtles, Manours, Lordſhips, Towns, Lands and Tenements, Foreſts, Chaces, Parks and Warrens in the County aforeſaid, with the Appurtinences, parcel of the ſaid Dutchy: Alſo Maſter of the Game ‖ of the ſame Foreſts, Chaces, Parks and Warrens aforeſaſd; alſo Chief and Great Steward of the Honours aforeſaid, and other Premiſſes, for the term of the ſaid Duke's Life, with the Fees, &c. anciently due and accuſtom'd thereto; and an 100 l. of lawful Money for the term of his Life, out of the Revenues aforeſaid, by the Hand of the Receiver. Alſo, the Office of the Steward of the Lordſhip of the High Peak, and to be Maſter of the Foreſt, and Surveyor of the Foreſt there. And alſo to be Conſtable of the Caſtle of Donington in the County of Leiceſter, and Steward of the ſame Caſtle, Lordſhip and Manour, parcel of the ſaid Honour of Tutbury. And alſo to have Power and Authority, during his Life, to make from time to time, all Bailiffs, Foreſters, Parkers and other Officers and Miniſters. ‖ Deduct.

To the ſame Duke, K. Richard granted alſo the Office of Conſtable of all the Caſtles, and of Steward of all the Caſtles, Lordſhips, Manours, Lands, &c. in the Counties of Salop and Hereford, which were then vacant, and which hereafter ſhou'd be vacant; and alſo the Superviſorſhip of all the King's Subjects there.

To the ſame Duke was alſo a Grant by Letters Patents to be Conſtable, Steward and Receiver of the Caſtle, Manour and Town of Uske in the March of Wales; and of all other Caſtles, Lordſhips, Manours, Towns, Lands, &c. which were Parcels of the Earldom of March in North Wales, South Wales, and March of Wales: And alſo to be Keeper or Chief Foreſter of the Foreſt and Chace of Treweke, and all other Foreſts and Chaces, parcel of the Earldom aforeſaid in North Wales, South Wales, and March of Wales, for term of Life. And again, to the ſame Duke, the Office of Chief Juſtice and Chamberlain in South and North Wales, for term of Life; giving further Power and Authority to make, exerciſe and execute all and ſingular things belonging to thoſe Offices.

Further, by another Patent K. Richard granted to Henry D. of Bucks, the Offices of Conſtable, Steward and Receiver of the Caſtle, Manours and Towns of Monmouth and Kidwelly in South Wales; and of all other Caſtles, Lordſhips, Towns in North and South Wales, and Marches of Wales, Parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; and the Office of Maſter Foreſter and Maſter of the Game within all the Foreſts, &c.

And laſtly, he had granted him the Stewardſhip of the Town of Cheſterfield; and of the Manour and Lordſhip of Scarſedale in the County of Derby, for term of Life. F. S. Journ. of K. Rich. III.

The Title of the Earldom of Hereford, and Conſtableſhip of England.

England (for they went together a long time) which he alledg'd belong'd to the Partage that fell to his Great Grand-mother the Lady Anne Daughter and Heir of Thomas Plantagenet, alias Woodſtock, created by King Richard II. Duke of Glouceſter and Earl of Buckingham, and of his Wife Elianor, Daughter and Co-heir of Humphry de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Conſtable of England: Which Claim, had he conſiderately look'd upon, could not rightly revolve to him, but rather was for the King's Part; for Humphry de Bohun Earl of Hereford, of Eſſex and Northampton, Lord of Brecknock and Conſtable of England (in the time of King Edward III, and the laſt Earl of the Family of the Bohuns) had by the Lady Jane his Wife, Daughter of Richard Fitz-Allan Earl of Arundel, two Daughters and Heirs Elianor and Mary: Elianor was married to the ſame Thomas Plantagenet, alias de Woodſtock, youngeſt Son of King Edward the Third, Duke of Glouceſter and Earl of Buckingham: Mary, the ſecond Daughter, was married to Henry Plantagenet Duke of Lancaſter, and after King of England, by the Name of Henry the Fourth, and the Earldom of Hereford fell to his Wife; in favour whereof, he was created D. of Hereford by K. Rich. II. and the Earldom (now a Dutchy) and the Rights thereof remain'd in the King, and in the King's Heirs and Succeſſors until the Death of K. Hen. VI. who died without Iſſue, and then all the Eſtate of Lancaſter (eſpecially that of the Royal Family of Lancaſter) eſcheated to King Edward IV. and from him it came to King Richard, as Heir to his Brother and all his Anceſtors. But the D. of Buckingham pretended Title to that Earldom by his ſaid Grandmother Anne, who was one of the Daughters and Heirs of the aforeſaid Lady Elianor (Wife of Thomas de Woodſtock Duke of Glouceſter) and the Wife of Edmond Stafford Earl of Stafford, and Grandfather to this Henry Duke of Buckingham, who the rather preſum'd to make this Claim, becauſe the Iſſue of the other Siſter Mary being extinct, he took himſelf alſo to be her Heir.

But King Richard reliſhing ſomething in this, near the Diſpoſition and Inclination of Bullingbrook, anſwer'd, "That the Earldom of Hereford "was of the Inheritance of Henry IV. who was "alſo King of England (tho' by Tort and Uſur- "pation) and will you, my Lord of Buckingham, claim to be Heir of Henry the Fourth? "You may then haply aſſume his Spirits, and "lay claim to the Crown by the ſame Titles.

This was as bitter as ſhort, and doubly ill taken; Firſt, becauſe it came with a Repulſe: Next, becauſe it ſeem'd to proceed from a Suſpicion, and as a tax of his Loyalty, and begets another pretence of Exception in the Duke's Boſom, which he call'd a breach of Promiſe in the King, for not joyning the Prince his Son in Marriage with the Lady Anne Stafford his Daughter: But all thoſe Colours were but to give Complexion to the Face of his Defection; the true Cauſe was well divined and found out by the King, his Ambition and Aim to be Sovereign, rais'd by an overweening of that Royal Blood he ſuppoſed to be in his Deſcent from the ſaid Thomas de Woodſtock, &c. Son of a King; and yet he was not reſolutely determin'd to make his Claim to the Crown this way, nor to attempt the Kingdom by Arms, until thoſe Embers which (as it were) lay but luke-warm in his Thoughts, were quicken'd and reviv'd by the Animation of ‖ Dr. Morton Biſhop of Ely, then a Privy Counſellor, tho' he ſtood in ſome Umbrage and Diſgrace in the Court with the King, for his Practices againſt him, and was at this time in the Cuſtody of the Duke of Buckingham as a Priſoner; (n) more expreſly, for that being a Privy Counſellor, he had given ſecret Advertiſement to the Earl of Richmond of what paſs'd in the ſecret Counſels of the King; to this Advantage

‖ Morton Bp. of Ely. (n) A great Miſtake, he was never a Privy Councell. to K. Rich. he was ſeiz'd before Rich. Election the very day the Ld Haſtings was murder'd, and kept in the Tower till the D. of Bucks had him ſent to Brecknock. Hol.

1483. vantage he applies that which he had wittily drawn from the Duke's Discontent and Passionate Discourses at times past. By which, perceiving the Glance of his Ambition, and that deriv'd from the great Opinion of his Royal Blood, he pregnantly tickles and feeds that Humour, until he had sooth'd him past his own Strength or Retirement; for his secret Drift was, to apt and prepare the Duke to a Rebellion at any hand, tho' not to set his own Title on foot, yet lays open the Advantage of the present times to it, proposing flat Usurpation and Tyranny against the King Regnant, and the strong likelihood of his Deposing. This lifts the Duke something higher in his own Opinion. But coming to Pause, and perceiving Richmond was the Man they had aim'd at for this Great Blow (who had condition'd by Oath to marry the Lady Elizabeth, (for the Countess of Richmond, had by the Means of Dr. Lewis, conciliated the Friendship of the Queen Mother to that Alliance, and to draw as many of the House of York into the Action as were at her Devotion) that many Potent Lords and some Foreign Princes had promised their Aids.) He began to retreat, and conceive he had taken the wrong Path to his Journey's end, for his Title and Claim must be nothing, if those of York and Lancaster were united: And that the Earl (who stood between him and his Aims) was not only resolute to attempt, but strongly aided for it, himself not able, upon such an Instant, to raise a Power able to Encounter, much less give Check unto his violent Ambition, therefore concludes all against himself, and that it wou'd fall out far better to side with the Times; a Consideration which doubtless wou'd highly stir a Spirit where so much Greatness of Opinion and Ambition was. And the Doctor discerning this Disgust, and that he was startled in his Hope and Resolution, to recover him an entire Man, and not let him stand by an idle Spectator in so meritorious an Action, he opens a private way of Honour and Satisfaction, suggesting him the first and greatest Man the Kingdom was to know next the King: And finding his particular Distastes to King Richard, of quickest Sense and Argument to him, he freshly urges (and as it were) refrigates each Particle, to the greatness of his Spirit and Discontent. The Duke replies not much at that time, but busy in his Thoughts leaves him, and presently fashions a Visit to the Countess of Richmond, (a Lady of a politick and contriving Bosom) to know the credit of his Intelligence, which she insinuates, with Arguments so full of Circumstance and Honour, besides her Son's Indearment to him, their nearness of Blood, affirming the Duke's Mother a Somerset, the reciprocal Affinity betweeen her Father and his, and then the Bravery and Religion in the Cause that the Duke now forsakes himself, and fully gives up his Resolution and Promise to her: Thus prepar'd, he finds out the Lord Stanley, the Marques of Dorset, Edward Courtney Earl of Devonshire, and his Brother the Bishop of Exeter, Sir John Bourchier, Sir John Wells, Robert Willoughby, Edward Woodvil, Thomas Arundel, who had severally rais'd Forces, and intended their Rendezvous near Glouceſter, so to march for Dorsetshire, there to receive the Earl and the Duke with his Welshmen: But the King was early in his Preparation, to prevent them before they could unite, or the Earl of Richmond arrive there, else they had fastned a most dangerous Blow upon him *. And at this full stop, in these Progresses, methinks, we may observe, how uncertainly in our strongest Valuations we are our own; and that our greatest Confidences and humane Policies, are but heavy Weights hung at trembling Wires, while our Expectations are apt to be flatter'd and outgo themselves, but are overtaken in their Succes's and Fates, as was this Great Man's; for their Forces neither met by Sea nor Land, the English being scatter'd by a sudden and huge Inundation that so dangerously overflow'd all Passages, they cou'd not joyn nor pass the River Severne, while the suddenness and strangeness of it struck the Souldiers with such Alteration, that most part of them forsook the Duke and left him to himself: The Earl of Richmond was as unfortunately met at Sea by a great Tempest, upon the Coasts of England.

Sir Thom. Moor.

1483.

This Margaret Co. of Richm. was Daug. and Heir to John Beaufort D. of Somerset, and Marg. de Beaufort, Mother of the said D. of Bucking. was Daug. of Edmond D. of Somerset; and thus were the E. of Richmond and the D. of Buckingham akin. Rob. Glov. in Catal. &c.

The Conspirators with the D. of Buck. for the E. of Richm.

The overthrow of the Duke of Buckingham.

The King took the Advantage this Accident offer'd, and pursu'd the Duke, not only with a Galloping Army, but with Edicts and Prescriptions that promised a Thousand Pounds in Money (whereunto some Writers add, so much Lands as was worth One Hundred Pounds per Ann.) to any one that should bring in the Duke, who was betray'd and brought to the King, then at Salisbury, by || Humphry Banister, of an eternal

Polid. lib. 25.

||K. Richard sharply reprehended Banister for betraying his Master, which argued a noble Mind.

* The King was now in the Month of Octob. at Lincoln, providing to go to meet the Duke his Rebel, and with such Strength as he surely confided in. He was greatly incens'd against the Duke for so bad a Requital of the extraordinary Gifts and Honours he had bestow'd upon him, which made him Stile the Duke, The most untrue Creature living, in a Postscript under his own Hand, to a Letter to the Bp. of Lincoln his Chancellor, now absent and sick; ordering him by some fit Officers of the Chancery, to send him the Great Seal, which he should have occasion to use. The Original is still preserv'd in the Tower, and friendly shew'd me by Mr. Geo. Holmes, Deputy Keeper of the Records. It ran to this tenor.

By the KING.

" Right Reverend Fadre in God, and Right trusty and welbeloved, We grete you wele, and in our hertiest wyse " thank you for the manyfold Presentes that your Servantes in your behalve have presented unto Us at this oure being " here: which we assure you we toke and accepted with good hert: and so we have cawse. And wheras We by Goddes " Grace intend briefly to avaunce us towards oure Rebel and Traitor the Duc of Buckingham, to resiste and withstand his " malicious purpose, as lately by oure other Letters We certifyed you oure mynde more at large: For which Cause it " behoveth us to have our grete Sele here, We being enfourmed, that for suche Infirmities and Diseases as ye sulteyne ne " may in your person to your ease conveniently come unto us with the same: Wherfore we wil, and natheless charge you " that forthwith upon the sight of thies, yee saufly do the same oure grete Sele to be sent unto us; and such of thoffice " of oure Chauncery as by your Wisedome shal be thought necessary, receiving these oure Letters for youre sufficient Dis- " charge in that behalve. Yeven undre oure Signet at oure Cite of Lincolne the xii. day of Octobre.

Then follows the King's Postscript under his own Hand, viz.

" We wolde most gladly ye came your selff, yf that ye may, and yf ye may not, we pray you not to fayle, but to a- " complyshe in al dyllygence oure sayde commaundemente, to sende oure Seale incontinent apon the syght hereof, as we " truste you with such as ye truste, and the Officers parteyning, to attende with hyt; praying you to ascerteyn us of your " Newes ther. Here loved be God, is al wel, and trewly determyned, and for to resiste the Malyse of him, that had " best Cawse to be trew, the Duc of Bokyngam the most untrew Creature lyvynge. Whom with Gods Grace we shal not " be long til that we wyll be in that parties, and subdew his Malys. Wee assure you there was never falsre Traitor pur- " vayde for, as this Berrerr Glouceſtre shal shew you. F. S.

|| This Note of Bucks, is scarce agreeable with the Kings Gift to this Rauf Banister, (for so was his Christian Name, and not Humphrey) and with the King's Commendation of his Service in his Letters Patents For he gave him the Manour and Lordship of Ealding in Kent, late belonging to the D. of Buckingham. So the Letters ran, Richard, &c. " to al and singular the Offi- " cers, &c. Wit ye, that in consideration of the true and faithful Service, which our well beloved Servant Rauf Banistre " Esq; now late hath done unto us, for and about the taking and bringing of our said great Rebel into our Hands, we have " given unto the said Rauf and to his Heirs male the said Manour for ever. K. Rich. Journ. F. S.

Brand

1484. Brand) having liv'd by this Man's Service, and now thought treacherously to subsist by his Ruin. The Duke being examin'd, freely confess'd all, and for it lost his Head in the Field according to Marshal Law used by Armies, in Nov. Ann. Dom. 1484. Ann. 2 Rich. III.

The Duke executed by Marshal Law.

And here, if we view him in the Figure of his Ambition or Fate, we shall find Dr. Morton his Caput Argol, or the malignant Planet of his Fortune; who, as Sir Thomas Moor confesseth and affirmeth, by his Politick Drifts and Pride, advanced himself and brought the Duke to this Ruin. The rest fled, some into Sanctuaries, others into Brittain to the Earl of Richmond, and some into Flanders, all their Plots being now how to be safe. 1484.

And thus far King Richard, in the Voyage of his Affairs, had a promising Gale; we will therefore here cast Anchor a while, and clasp up this First Book with the Relation of his Better Fortunes.

BOOK II.

The ARGUMENT of the Second BOOK of the LIFE and REIGN of RICHARD III.

The Earl of Richmond practiseth with Foreign Princes, and with the English Nobles for Assistance and Forces to make his First and Second Invasions of England; he came first to Poole with Ill Success, secondly to Milford cum bonis avibus. What Bastards are, and whereof they are capable, who be of the House of Lancaster; how Lancaster and Beaufort, or Somerset differ. Bastards of Kings must not take the Sirnames of the King or Kingdom. The Honourable Privilege of the Name of Plantagenet. Prince Edward and Queen Anne, John de la Poole proclaim'd Heir of the Kingdom by Richard the Third. Bastards of John Duke of Lancaster made Legitimate and Capable of Offices, Honour and of Heritage by Richard II. and the Parliament. What the Legitimation of the Pope is. Arms and Names of Princes Bastards. The Nobility of King Henry VII. He affied not much in the Titles of York and Lancaster. The Pope giveth to him the Title, De jure Belli, & de Domo Lancastriæ. The greatness of the Title of York; of Counsel and Counsellors. The Prerogative of the King in Judgments and Controversies. The Earl of Richmond landeth at Milford Haven; his Entertainment there and in Wales: His Aptness for divers Wives: He marcheth to Bosworth: King Richard and he Fight; Richard is overcome and slain, also the Duke of Norfolk by the Earl of Oxford (ut Creditur). The Earl of Richmond is straight Crown'd King in the Field: The fatal Error of King Richard: King's lov'd Combat: The Titles of King Henry VII. Kings go not now to Wars: Cruelties committed upon the Body of King Richard: He was attainted of Treason, tho' against the Laws of Nature and of Royal Majesty, with many of his Followers and Servants: The Earl of Surrey how released out of Prison; his Genealogy from Hewardus Walter de Buck, and his Progeny.

WE left King Richard the Third in the growth of a flourishing and promising Estate, and his Fate now, in the rise of a peaceful and prosperous Reign, of a calm and hopeful Presage: But Fortune, that lends her Smiles as Exactors do Money, to undo the Debtor, soon call'd for the Principal and Interest from this Prince, to whom she was merely Novercal, and he might well call her, with the expert Heroes in Euripides, Fortuna diurna, i. e. Fortune of a Day's life; for in her best Mood, she is most slippery in her Favours and tedious in her Mischiefs, as was aptly consider'd by a grave Man; Fortuna adversas res cupido animo inducit, secundas parco; She is a Mother but a little while, a Step-Dame a long time, and for ever to some; here then we are aggressing into the Turbulent and Luctual Times, which were towards the end and period of his Life and Reign; the Formal and final Causes happening from the Invasions attempted by the Earl of Richmond. I will begin the Second Book there, and may say Invasions, because he twice invaded the Kingdom, tho' by Error or Ignorance of our Vulgar Historians they are confounded and made one, which corruptly maims the Story, and conceals and pretermits some very remarkable Agitations; particularly, the true Cause of the Duke of Buckingham's Ill Success and Defeat is misunderstood, or not at all known. To come to it therefore more certainly, we must take notice of the First Preparation by the Earl of Richmond, who was resolv'd to advance his Claim that way, and unbosoms himself to the Duke of Brittain, his Possibility and Advantage by Friends, if he could raise but sufficient Strength to set him safely in England. The Duke gives him all good Wishes to his Undertaking, but opposes (against all Arguments of drawing him in) first, his Amity and League with England, which in Honour and Justice he was not to violate: Then his Wants by the long Civil and Cruel Wars with his Barons, that had so exhausted his Coffers, as durst he dispense with the former Cause, yet that might render him excused,

Eurip. in Hera.

Vale. Max. l. 7.

1484. excuſed, being unable to furniſh him, at leaſt in ſo ſhort a time as his Expedition required; beyond which Anſwer, for the preſent, the Earl thought not fit to preſs him. But having a prompt and ſtrong Affiance in his good Fortune, makes up to ſome of the Duke's moſt honourable and powerful Friends, to lay Siege that way to him by private Advantages; for by his ingenious Demeanour he had won the Inclinations of many Great Ones, being Maſter of a pleaſant acute Wit, which was well ſupply'd in him by the ſtrain of all Courtly Acts; to thoſe he had the help of the French Tongue, which he ſpoke excellently well; and, to give the more plauſible Acceſs and Influence, he was (as Philip de Comines, who knew him, teſtifies) a very Compleat and well Featured Gentleman which makes the Rule certain, and well animating;

Gratior eſt pulchro veniens e Corpore virtus.

The Beauties of the Mind more gracious are,
When as the Bodies Features are more fair.

In the number of thoſe Eminent Perſons he had gain'd during his Fair Impriſonment, more fortunately he had apply'd himſelf unto the Lady Margaret Dutcheſs of Brittain, Daughter of Gaſton de Foix (a Great Man in the Weſtern Parts of France, whoſe Anceſtors were well affected to the Engliſh) and Madam De Bevier the Dutcheſs, ſo far countenanced him in his Deſign, that ſhe became an earneſt Suitor unto the Duke her Husband, and prevailed both for his Liberty and Aid; for Caution and Pledge herein, he was only to kneel at the High Altar, before the bleſſed Sacrament, in the Cathedral Church of St. Vannes, there to make his Religious Vow, juſtly and truely to obſerve what Reſtitution he privately had promiſed to the Duke and Dutcheſs; which Proteſtation made, he had three Ships well rigg'd and furniſh'd with Men, Arms and Victuals, as my Author relates.

John Froiſard Paradin. Hiſt. de Brit. The Duke had by this Lady his Daughter and Heir Anne, who brought the Dutchy of Brittain to to France Hiſt. d eBr

Au Conte de Richmond furent aux deſpens du duc trois groſſes Navires de Britannia, charges de gens de Armes, &c. & qui ſe miſent in mer.

But, by the favour of this Britiſh Writer, the Earl ſtaid many Days at St. Malo, to receive and ſend Intelligence, and made it the beginning of October 1484, before he came to St. Poole in Dorſet, where he lay ſome time at Anchor, to ſend his Boats a Shore as Explorers or Spies, for diſcovery of the Coaſts, where the King's Army or his Friends lay, who return'd without any particular Satisfaction, but that there was many arm'd Men about the Country. The Earl (who in all things was circumſpect, and cautiouſly timerous) reſolv'd immediately to looſe from thence; but the Night following, a terrible Tempeſt conſtrain'd them with all haſte to weigh Anchor and make into the Maine, the Storm and Darkneſs of the Night ſevering and diſperſing their Ships, ſome to the Coaſts of Brittain, but the Earl himſelf to the Coaſts of Normandy. And this was the ſucceſs of his Firſt Invaſion, which, though it bore an inauſpicate Face, it proved of a friendly Event: For had he landed about Poole, or but ſtay'd till the King's Ships had come in, that lay waiting not far off, he had been a loſt Man every way; the King being not only active to meet their Contrivements, but had ſome advantage upon them, by the cloſe Intelligence of a Friend, and knew that the Forces of the Duke of Buckingham, with the Earl of Devon and others, were to meet near Glouceſter, and march in their full and united Strength to'ards the Sea-coaſts of Dorſet, there to receive the Earl: But the King encounter'd with the Duke of Buckingham's Army, Beat him, and cut of his Head, before any of the reſt cou'd come at him, daily putting the Ordinary Bands of theſe Weſt Countries in a ready Poſture for Guard of their Coaſts; and that if the Earl of Richmond or any of his French Forces came a-ſhore, they were to be Entertain'd courteouſly by them, pretending themſelves of the Duke of Buckingham's Army, who had Routed the King's Party, and were ſent thither to receive and conduct the Earl with his Men to London. This was the projected End: But 'tis of remarkable Note, to look into the various Paths of this Earl's Fortune, and how they brought him to his Journey's End, when they appear'd moſt doubtful and threatning, not only gave him Advantage by the good Succeſs of his Enterpriſes, but made the moſt adverſe Accidents ſerve as proſperous unto them; for was it not happy the Storm at Poole drove him from the Coaſts of England, and no leſs fortunate, that the Duke of Buckingham was defeated, whereas, had the Duke atcheived that Day, the Earl of Richmond not being there, (who was to be preſent in Perſon, and General of the Field) we may with reaſon conjecture his Emulation and Policy would have accumulated the Honour and Fortune of the Conqueſt to his own pretended Title: ſuch Spirits like the Sea, where they intrude or win, making their Advantage their Right, and not eaſily ſurrender, ſo much is the Engagements of Ambition, too ſtrong for all Ties of Faith and Right.

1484.

The Example is obſervable in the Earl of Richmond himſelf; who altho' he knew the Children of the Duke of Clarence and others, had better Right to the Crown, yet once poſſeſs'd wou'd not reſign, no not to his own Son whilſt he could hold it; nor did he want his Preſidents, as all Men know, who know any thing. And to take all Relations in our way that may be level with our Story, betwixt this and his Second Invaſion, ſome other Paſſages offer themſelves, as an Interim, and not impertinent to ſupply the Reader's Obſervation.

The Death of the King's dear and only Son (at leaſt Legitimate) who died in the Caſtle of Middlebam in Yorkſhire, in the Month of April, Anno Dom. 1484. gave ſuch a paſſionate Charge upon the Nature and Affections of the King and Queen (being then in the Caſtle of Nottingham) that as mine Author ſaith, Subitis doloribus inſanire videbantur.

The Death of Edward Prince of Wales, Son of Richard 3. Chron. Croyland. Ibidem.

Yet the King being a Man of an equal Moderation to his Courage, puts it into the Scale of his other worldly Encounters; and as it was ſaid of Julius Cæſar, That he ſoon paſs'd the Death of his only Daughter Julia (moſt precious in his Affection) Et tam facile dolorem hunc, quam omnia vicit; ſo King Richard temper'd his Grief and Buſineſs ſo together, that the One made him not unſenſible, nor the other negligent; but as the Prior of Croyland telleth, did all things gravely and diſcreetly as before. Seneca.

Rex Richardus nihilominus tamen ſuam partem defenſione vacaverit: Altho' the Queen cou'd not hold ſo proportion'd a Temper over her Grief, the Tenderneſs of her Sex letting it break upon her in a more paſſionate manner, and with ſuch an Impreſſion, that it became her Sickneſs paſt recovery, languiſhing in Weakneſs and Extremity of Sorrow, until ſhe ſeem'd rather to overtake Death, than Death her; which was not long after the Prince's, and added not a little to the King's Sufferings and Sorrows, (tho' traducing

1484. traducing Spirits have charged him with shortning her Life by Poison or some other Practice, which are prestigious and black Comments, falsly plac'd in the Margent of his Story, and may more nearly touch the Credit of the Author's than his, if we judiciously take a view of him and his Actions; and look upon the indulgent and active Care for his Country, which he gave a constant and sincere Expression of, instantly after his Son's Death, when by the Deliberation and Consent of the Barons, he was industrious to think of a Successor, and to nominate such an One, whose Blood and Worth might make him equally Heir to the Crown and the Peoples Affection, (with the highest approbation of the Kingdom) and none more near to either than Sir John de la Poole Earl of Lincoln, Son and Heir of John de la Poole Duke of Suffolk, and of the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, Dutchess of Suffolk, the Sister and Heir of this King Richard, who was declared and proclaim'd Heir apparent to the Kingdom. This was a ‖ Contrecarre to the Faction of Richmond, and, indeed, what greater Affront could thwart them, if those of the House of Lancaster or Beaufort were next Heir to the Crown, (as the Pretenders affirm'd for the Earl of Richmond) who would likewise have him to be Caput gentis Lancastriæ, & Princeps Familiæ, tho' they could scarcely prove him (not without question I am sure) Membrum illius Familiæ, until he came to be King, for it was a Question in those Times, and much disputed, whether the Beauforts or Somersets were of the House of Lancaster or no? Most true it is, the Children of the Houle of Lancaster being lawfully Born, and after Henry Plantagenet Duke of Lancaster had conquer'd and deposed Richard II. were to be held Princes of the Blood Royal, and capable of the Crown in their natural and due order. But those of Beaufort or Somerset were, as the Vulgar hath it, Filii Populi, or as the Imperial Juris-consults say, liberi vulgo quæsiti, who by the old Greeks were term'd Ἀπατορες, i. e. sine Patre, the Doctors of the Spiritual Law, drawing the Originem of such Children ab illicito & damnato coitu, of the polluted adulterous Bed (and so those Beauforts, three Males and one Female, begotten by John of Gaunt as he believed) according to the Laws were to be reputed, the Children of Sir Robert Swinford, begotten upon Katharine his Wife in his life time, who was Daughter of Sir Payen Rovet a French Man, dwelling in Beauforts, and was Guyen Herald to the Duke of Lancaster. His Dutchess Dona Constantia (a most Noble and Virtuous Lady, Daughter of Don Pedro King of Castile) was living also in the time he kept this Katharine and had those Beauforts, who were Sirnamed so from the Place of their Birth, a Town of his own in Anjou. But to Note transitu, how obnoxious this Duke made his Frailties, that (thinking to put a smoother Face upon his Sin) gave it but the same Blush, by making this Katharine Swinford his Dutchess, against the liking of the King and all his Noble Friends, and direct Tenor of the Common Laws, which pronounce Marriages between such as have lived in Adultery unlawful: Nay, to make him the more Marvaile and Smiling Discourse of the Court, the Glass of his Age was turn'd to his last Year, when he sacrificed these scatter'd Embers of his Desires and Passion. But he obtain'd those Children to be legitimated: First, by the Pope Urbanus the Sixth; next by the Charter of King Richard II. and had both these Indulgences afterward enlarg'd and confirm'd by Parliament. Yet neither these four Legitimate Children, nec qui nascebantur ab illis, were permitted to the Princely Familiar Title of Lancaster, so long as that Name flourish'd, much less of Plantagenet, for that was the peculiar Sir-name in chief of the Kings of England and Princes of the Blood Royal, since the time of the Second Henry, Son of the Empress Mitilda, the first Founder of that Name in the Royal Family of England. Of which Honour were Partakers the Princely Family of Wales, of Brotherton, of York, of Lancaster, of Clarence, of Woodstock, of Gloucester, &c. And there are yet some Noblemen in Portugal, who descended from John Duke of Lancaster, and are call'd and written de Lancastro, others of the like Origin and Title may do as much. Neither would King Henry IV. Henry V. nor King Henry VI, all Kings of the Lancastrian Race indure to let the Lineage of Beaufort (tho' they respected them as Kinsmen, and advanced them to many Honours) assume the Sirname of Lancaster, holding it an Arrogation and Usurpation of Royalty and Royal Rights, wherein they follow'd their Ancestors, who devised other Names for their Base Children; as Fitz-Roy, Oxenford, Fitz-Herbert, Clarendon, Fitz-Henry Longuee spee Cornwal; and so they continued the Name of Beaufort and Somerset until the Earl of Richmond came, and this was in imitation of the Kings of France as I conceive: For within the reach of my Observation, since the time of Hugh Capet, they never vouchsafed any of their Base Sons to be capable of the Crown of France, or to have the Adven (as they call it) nor the Sirname of France; but the Illegitimate Daughters may take the Sirname France or de France; because they can make no Claim to the Crown by a pretended Permission of a Salick-law, which John de Tillet witnesseth.

1484. Parl. Ann. 20 Rich. II.

John Earl of Lincoln and after Duke of Suffolk proclaim'd Heir apparent.

‖ A Counter Strength.

John Sarisburiensis Ep. 85.

Sir Thom. Walsin in Rich. II.

He married her in the Year 1693, and died Ann. 1399.

Dm Duart de Lancastro a Noble Gentlem. of Portug. aver'd himself descended from the D. of Lancaster. Valodolid. The peculiar Sir-names of the Bastards of the ancient Kings of England.

Arms of Bastards of the Kings of England.

La troisiesme lignée a du tout rejettè, les Bastards non seulement de la Coronne mais aussi de l'aduen, & Surnom de France, qui Concession est permis aux Bastards de Roy, &c.

And as the Bastards of the Kings of England had other Names, so they took differenc'd Arms, or else were permitted to bear their Mother's (if of any Family). If tolerated to bear the Arms of England; then they were Diversify'd in a checking, debasing and rebating manner, with Bastons, Bends, Sinister Bars, Bordures, Marks of Baseness, Obscurity and Novelty, which any new Gentleman might bear, such as the Learn'd call'd Filios terræ & novos Homines; and we vulgarly, Upstarts. But to object against the use of this in England, the Example of Hamelin is brought in; and to credit it, his Arms forg'd by some weak and negligent Heralds, who call him Hamelin Plantagenet; when the truth is, this Hamelin (Base Son of Jeoffry Plantagenet, Earl of Anjou) was simply call'd Hamelin, and his Son William took the Sirname of his Mother Dame Isabel de Warren, Daughter and Heir of William de Warren Earl of Surrey, which their Posteri continued; as Joannes de Warrena the First, and Joannes de Warrena the Second, both Earls of Surrey; and Isabella de Warren and Elianor de Warren, &c. mention'd in the Charters and Records, but never Plantagenet, which is acknowledg'd by our best Heralds and Antiquaries; Mr. William Cambden hath these words, Isabella Filia sola Gulielmi de Warrena Comitis Surriæ Hamelinum Nothum Galfredi Plantageneti, &c. Titulo Comitis Surreiæ maritum exornavit. Hamelinus Gulielmum Surriæ Comitem genuit, cujus posteri a scito Warrenorum Nomine eundem Titulum gesserunt. And that the Base Son of King Edward IV. was commonly call'd Arthur Plantagenet proves nothing neither, well considered: For in the

Camb. in Surr.

Times

1484. Times when this Arthur lived, the Name of Plantagenet being only left in the Houſe of York, (the Lancaſtrian Plantagenet being more extinguiſh'd) had not the former Honour and Reputation, but was darken'd and ſetting, rather drawing a Contempt and Hate to them that bare it, the White Roſe daily fading and withering; and ſo malignant was their Planet then, that, as a learned Gentleman hath further obſerved, It was not ſafe in that time to be a Plantagenet; therefore, the Permiſſion of thoſe Times can be no Warrant for the Objections, nor the Ignorance of the Poetical Heralds, who have ſtrain'd this Fable of Hamelin. Yet farther, not only giving him and his Poſteri a falſe Sirname, but aſſign'd him by the like Fabulous Art, a Shield of familiar Enſigns, the Arms of France border'd with an Orle of Normandy or Guyen; which he, nor yet any of the Antique Lineage of Anjou or their Progeny ever bear, or could by juſt Title bear, either ſimply or compounded, or the Progenitors of our Engliſh Kings the Lillies of Gold in an Azure Field, until King Edward claim'd the Crown of France, and aſſum'd them in the Right of Queen Iſabel de Valoys his Mother, who was the firſt that bare them quarterly with the Arms of England.

Thomas Gainsford.

Scarboucle, falſly call'd Carbuncle.

But the Arms of the ancient Earls of Anjou were a Scarboucle, (that is, a Golden Buckle of a military Scarf or Belt, ſet with Precious Stones) not a Carbuncle or more precious Ruby, for the Term is erroneous and abſurd, if conſider'd: The Princes of Anjou bare this Scarboucle in a Shield party per Chief, Argent and Gules; and the Heirs of this Hamelin (who took the Sirname of Warren) bare alſo the Arms of the Houſe of Warren in their Shields and Capariſons, but bare the Scarboucle of Anjou for their Creſt, as they were deſcended out of that Houſe, as I have ſeen upon a Seal of Joannes de Warrena Earl of Surrey, at a Charter, dated 20 Edw. III. Ann. Dom. 1346. apud Dom. Rob. Cotton, which hath given me occaſion to ſpeak thus much to cure the Blemiſh that miſtake hath thruſt into Hiſtory, ſuch Abſurdities having their Infection, and paſſing by an Age or two upon the eaſy and common Judgments, after grow up for tall and undeniable Truths: For ſome merely reading the Complexion of things, as they do Men by their outſides, or as Boys Poetry, with tickled Faith; through ſuch wide Ears and Obſervations, crept in that Paraſitiſm on the one ſide, and Pride and Uſurpation on the other ſide, that made the Houſe of Lancaſter and the Beauforts, alias Somerſets, all one; which (whilſt the Houſe of York flouriſh'd) were held to differ as much as Royal and Feudal, Soveraignity and Suzeraignity; for their Modeſty at firſt was very well pleaſed with that of Beaufort, and it ſeem'd Honourable enough until the Children of John de Beaufort, the eldeſt Brother (being Earl of Somerſet) aſſumed the Name of their Fathers greateſt Honour and Earldom for their Sirname, and the reſt following, quite left the Name of Beaufort, and made the other Hereditary. From this John de Beaufort Earl of Somerſet and Marqueſs of Dorſet, deſcended Henry Duke of Somerſet, Father Natural to Charles Somerſet, created Earl of Worceſter by King Henry VIII. And 'tis worth the noting, that this Duke Henry left the Faction of Lancaſter to follow Edward IV. The firſt Beauforts legitimated by the Pope, and Richard II. have no other Sirnames but Beaufort in either of the Inſtruments Apoſtolical, nor any Words to give or emure them to any Capacity of Royal Title, or State of Soveraignty in the Crown, only purged them by the Pope's Spiritual Power from the foulneſs of Baſtardy, allowing them as Children legitimate and lawfully born, but gives 'em no other Title than Joannes de Beaufort Miles, Henricus de Beaufort Clericus, Thomas de Beaufort Domicellus, Joanna de Beaufort Domicella, and more the Pope cannot do. As the Doctors of Sorbone, and ſome of the beſt Canoniſts hold, who peremptorily affirm, That the Pope cannot make Baſtards capable to inherit the Hereditary Lands of their Father; neither can give them power to conſtitute Succeſſors or Heirs, or hold Offices, Dignities, or Titles, without the Prince's ſpecial Diſpenſation, to which the Civil and Imperial Laws agree, and is authentick in England, as a learn'd and eminent Judge reports, though others think it of too ſevere a nature, and moderately agreeable to Reaſon and Law (the Law much obſerving Reaſon) That Baſtards being honeſt and worthy Men (the rather if they be avow'd by their Fathers) may be admitted to Honours, Dignities, Titles, Feuds and other Ornaments of Rewards and Virtue. Of this Indulgence and Connivence, we have Examples in England by two worthy and deſerving Men, (flouriſhing this Age) who, tho' Baſtards, held the greateſt Offices in England. So Rich. II. in the Charter for the Legitimation of the Beauforts, wou'd have Men of Deſert (and avow'd by their Fathers) capable of Advancement and Honours. The Tenor of which Charter and Confirmation of it by Parliament I ſhall exhibit, as it is taken out of the Archives and Tower Records, opening the way by a ſhort Advertiſement, That in this Act of Parliament there is an Induction to the Charter, made by Dr. Edmond Stafford, Brother to the Earl of Stafford and Bp. of Exeter, Lord Chancellor of England in the 20th Year of Richard II. which intimateth, That Pope Urbanus VI. at the earneſt Requeſt of the King, vouchſafed to legitimate theſe Beauforts, the Baſe Sons and the Daughter of the Duke of Guyen and Lancaſter: That the King alſo, having power to legitimate and enable Baſtards in the ſame kind, and in as ample manner as the Emperor hath or had, for ſo he preſs'd and avow'd in the Act, was pleas'd at the Humble Requeſt and Suit of the Duke their Father, to make them not only legitimate, but alſo capable of Lands, Heritages, Titles, Honours, Offices, Dignities, &c. And that the King, for the more Authority thereof, crav'd the Allowance and Favourable Aſſent of the Barons in Parliament, which was granted: The Charter runs thus;

1484.

The Civil and Imperial Law againſt Baſtards. Sir Edw. Cook.

Dr. Steph. Gardiner. Sir Thomas Egerton Chancellor of Eng.

Difference between the Houſe of Lancaſt. and Somerſet.

The Earls of Worceſter from whom.

Charta Legitimationis Spuriorum Joannis Ducis Lancaſtriæ.

RIchardus Dei Gratia Rex, Angliæ, Franciæ, Dominus Hiberniæ, Chariſſimus Conſanguineis noſtris, Nobilibus viris Joanni de Beaufort Militi, Henrico de Beaufort Clerico, Thomæ de Beaufort Domicello & Nobili Mulieri Joannæ Beaufort Domicellæ præclariſſimi Patrui noſtri Nobilis viri Joannis Ducis Aquitaniæ & Lancaſtriæ Germanis natis & liegis noſtris ſalutem.

Nos pro honere & meritis, &c. Avunculi noſtri, proprio arbitratu & meritorum ſuorum intuitu vos, quia magno probitatis ingenio, ac vitæ ac morum honeſtate fulgetis, & ex regali eſtis proſapia propogati, &c. hinc eſt quod Joannis, &c. avunculi noſtri genitoris veſtri precibus inclinati vobis (cum (ut aſſeritur) defectum natalium patimini) hujuſmodi defectum & ejuſdem qualitates quaſcunque abolere præſentes, vos haberi volumus, pro ſufficientibus, ad quoſcunque ho-

nores

1484. nores, dignitatis præeminentias, ſtatus, gradus, & officia, publica, & privata, tam perpetua quam temporalia, atq; Judicialia & Nobilia, quibuſcunque nominibus nuncupentur, etiam ſi, Ducatus, Principatus, Comitatus, Baroniæ vel alia feuda fuerint, etiamſi mediate vel immediate, à nobis dependeant ſeu teneantur præfici, præmoveri, eligi, aſſumi & admitti, illaque recipere proinde libere ac licite valeatis, ac ſi de legitimo thoro nati exiſteritis, quibuſcunq; Statutis, ſeu conſuetudinibus regni noſtri Angliæ in contrarium editis ſeu obſervatis quæ hic habemus pro totaliter expreſſis, nequaquam obſtantibus, de plenitudine noſtræ regalis poteſtatis & de aſſenſu Parliamenti noſtri tenore præſentium diſpenſamus, voſque & quemlibet veſtrum natalibus reſtituimus & Legitimamus, Die Feb. Anno Regni 20 R. 2.

Which in Engliſh is as follows;

A Charter of Legitimation of the Baſtards of John D. of Lancaſter.

"RICHARD, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of "Ireland; To Our moſt Dear Couſins, the illuſtrious John Beaufort Kt. Henry Beaufort "Clerk, Thomas Beaufort Gent. and Joanna "Beaufort Gentlewoman, of Our moſt renowned Uncle, the Noble John Duke of Guienne "and Lancaſter, Children German and Our "Lieges, Greeting. We for the Honour "and Merits, &c. of Our Uncle, out of Our "own Good Pleaſure, and in conſideration of his Deſerts, becauſe you are conſpicuous for your Virtuous Inclinations, and Honeſty of Life and Manners, and deſcended of "Royal Progenitors, &c. Hence it is, that "mov'd by the earneſt Entreaties of Our Uncle, your Parent, to remove from you (for "(as is ſaid) there is a Defect in your Birth) this "Defect and all its preſent Conſequences, We "will that you be and be reputed Capable, "to be preferred, promoted, elected, aſſumed "and admitted to any Honours, Dignities, "States, Degrees, Offices Publick and Private, "as well perpetual as temporary, and judicial "and noble, by what Appellations ſoever diſtinguiſhed, whether Dukedoms, Principalities, Earldoms, Baronies and Feuds, whether "mediately or immediately depending or holden of Us, and them to take hold of, and enjoy as freely and rightfully, as if you had been "born in lawful Matrimony, all Statutes and "Cuſtoms of Our Kingdom of England, to the "contrary enacted or obſerved, as if they were "here mentioned at length, notwithſtanding; "with which, out of the Fulneſs of Our Royal "Power, and with Conſent of Our Parliament, "by the Tenor of theſe Preſents We diſpence, "and you, and every one of you, to Birth Reſtore and Legitimate. ——— Day of Feb. "in the 20th Year of Our Reign. R. II.

Here we find large Graces, Honours and Priviledges conferr'd upon thoſe Beauforts; for the King calls then Conſanguineos ſuos, and not only confirms their Legitimation, but makes them (by the help of the Parliament) capable of Baronies, Earldoms, Dukedoms, and Principalities; enableth them for all Offices publick and private, temporary and perpetual, to take hold of and enjoy all Feuds, as well noble as other, all Lands and Seigniories Hereditary, as lawfully, firmly and rightfully, as if they had been born in lawful Matrimony, but yet confers no Royal Title nor Intereſt in the Crown, at the leaſt, to the obſervation of thoſe who allow not the Claim of the Beauforts and Somerſets, and ſay, that to reach that, there muſt be Words of a higher intent, Words of Emipre, Majeſty and Soveraignity; ſuch as Regni ſumma poteſtas; Corona; Sceptrum, Diadema, Purpura, Majeſtas, and the like: Neither of theſe, nor any importing their extent, being in this Grant, ſo no Title to the Crown or Soveraignty cou'd paſs to them. 1484.

Principatus Princeps.

To which the other Side replies, That there is a Word in the Charter that comprehendeth Empire, Reign, and Soveraignty; that is, Principatus; whereof the King and Parliament make the Beauforts capable, Principatus being the State of Princeps, a Title of the moſt abſolute Soveraign Power; for the Roman Emperors in their greateſt Height, were call'd Principes, therefore Princeps is thus defined; Princeps eſt penes quem ſumma Reip. poteſtas eſt, & qui primus omnium dominatur; and Principatus and Dominatus are uſed as Synonomies. But it is conceiv'd an Error now, to take Principatus for Regnum, or Supremus Dominatus, being the word Principatus long before, and in the Age of Richard II. alſo ever ſince, hath been reſtrain'd to the Eſtate of Primogenitus and Heir apparent, not only of Kings, but alſo of Dukes and Marqueſſes, as well Feudal as Soveraign. And the next King Henry IV. a wiſe, diſcreet, and wary Prince, though he was much inclined to thoſe Beauforts, (as being his Natural Brethren by the Paternal ſide, and willing to advance them all he cou'd) yet he diſcover'd clearly enough by that certain Charter, in which he entail'd the Crown ſucceſſively to his Four Sons, and to the Heirs of their Bodies, that he reputed not the Beauforts to be Lancaſtrians or near the Crown: Neither is there the leaſt Clauſe or Mention to leave any Remainder therein to them: Firſt, he intail'd the Crown to his eldeſt Son Henry Prince of Wales, after him to the Heirs of his Body; If they fail, then to Thomas of Lancaſter his Second Son, and to the Heirs of his Body, ſo to his Third Son John of Lancaſter, and to the Heirs of his Body. Laſtly, to the Fourth Son Humphrey, and to the Heirs of his Body, for ſtill, and for every Eſtate: The words are, Poſt ipſum ſucceſſive Heredibus ſuis de ipſius corpore legitime procreandis, which is all, and implicatively an expreſs Excluſion of the Beauforts. This Charter was confirm'd by Act of Parliament holden at Weſtminſter the Two and Twentieth Day of December, in the Eighth Year of Henry IV. and ſeal'd with his own Signet. Upon the Dexter ſide of that, hung the Seals of ſundry Lord's Spiritual; on the Left ſide, the Seals of the Lords Temporal Witneſſes. And albeit, the Earl of Richmond cou'd not ſo well and rightly bear the Name of Beaufort or Somerſet, being a Teudor by his Father, and ſo to be Sirnamed, or of ſome other Welſh Name (if there were any in his Family) by his Mother he was deſcended from the Beauforts; for the Lady Margaret, Counteſs of Richmond, was Daughter and Heir to Sir John de Beaufort Duke of Somerſet, (p) and Grand-child to John of Gaunt, by Katharine the Wife of Otho de Swinford, which John de Beaufort, was created D. of Somerſet by Henry V. His Wife was the Daughter and at length the Heir of Sir John Beauchamp

The Charter of H. 4. for intailing the Crown.

This Charter I ſaw in the Hands of Sir Robert Cotton, and from it took theſe Summary Notes. The Nobleneſs & Family of Hen. E. of Rich.

Glover. 1413.

(p) She was Daughter to John Duke of Somerſet, Grand Daughter to John Earl of Somerſet, and Great Grand Daughter to John of Gaunt. See Cambd. Sub tit. Somerſetſhire.

1483. of Bletso, and the Widow of Sir Oliver St. John when he married her: But the Earl of Richmond, by his Grandmother Katharine Queen of England, was deſcended from the Kings of France; and I have ſeen him in a Pedigree (drawn after he was King) deriv'd from the ancient Kings and Princes of Brittain. Polidore ſaith, he was Ex fratre Nepos to King Henry VI. who call'd him Nephew, and he the King, Avunculum noſtrum (our Uncle) inſtead of Patruum, as it is in the Records of Parliament, Ann. 1 of Hen. VII. but not his Nephew, as we erroneouſly now take it, that is his German younger Brother's Son, for then he had been a true Maſculine Iſſue of the Houſe of Lancaſter and Royal Blood of England.

Polid. lib. 25.

So K. R II. call'd John of Gaunt Avunculum noſtrum, Rec. in Tower: But that was the fault of the barbarous Lat. Clerks, not knowing the difference between Patruos & Avunculos

But he was Nephew to him by his Brother Uterine, Edmond Teudor Earl of Richmond, the Son of Owen Teudor or Meridock, and of Queen Katherine, Daughter of Charles the Sixth King of France, which the French well knew, and gave him the better Eſteem for it, but thoſe Honours were obſcure Additions to him that muſt not go leſs than for a Prince of the Houſe of Lancaſter, and ſo of England, which paſs'd with ſuch vulgar credit in France, that Du Tillet miſtook John Duke of Somerſet, Father of Margaret Counteſs of Richmond, for the true and lawful Son of John de Gaunt, &c. by his firſt Wife Blanch Plantagenet, Daughter and Heir of the Earl (q) and Earldom of Lancaſter. Philip de Comines, Lord of Argent, had better intelligence of his Pedigree and Title, which he gives us thus.

In his Book Le Recueil. des Rangs, &c. Part 2.

(q) 'Twas the Duke and Dutchy of Lancaſter.

Il n'avoit croix, ny pile, ne null droit (Come je croy) a la Coronne d' Angleterre: And this expreſſes, he had no great Opinion of either, tho' he was then King when this was writ. But let us ſuppoſe him lawfully deſcended from that D of Lancaſter, his Claim muſt ſtand excluded whilſt the Houſe of York ſurvived; for Richard Plantagenet Duke of York and King of England Deſignat, by Act of Parliament holden 39 Year of King Henry VI. to whom theſe Titles of Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwal, Earl of Cheſter, and Protector of England were given by the Three Eſtates in that Parliament, deſcended from the Daughter and Heir of the Second Son of King Edward III. (For as before, ſo ſtill I leave the Infant William of Hatfield without the Catalogue) and King Henry IV. and his Progeny, deſcended from the Third Son; and King Henry VI. being the beſt of the Houſe of Lancaſter then living, did acknowledge in that Parliament the Title of Richard Duke of York, the only lawful and juſt Title; ſo conſequently next and better than that of Lancaſter or any other; and before any Beaufort or their Heirs, the Iſſue of the two Daughters of John Duke of Lancaſter; Philip and Katharine (married to the King of Portugal and Caſtile) were to be prefer'd if Foreign Titles be not excluded by Parliament. But the Earl of Richmond meaſuring his own Heighth by the Advantage of a Tumultuary and Indiſpoſed Time, and finding his Lancaſtrian Pretence began to have a popular Retinue, he was now incompatible of any others Precedency and Propinquity: For thoſe Great Ones that led him by the Hand into the Action, laid the Line by their own corrupted Hopes and Fears of the Succeſs, therefore wou'd not let the Fortune of their Expectation faint in him. Biſhop Morton ſteer'd much in the courſe of their Affairs, and was a great Oracle to the Earl, who was noted too Partial and Credulous, eſpecially where he believ'd the Perſons of any Honeſty, Virtue, or Learning, for which his Fame yet bears ſome Stains of Morton, Dudley, Empſon, Bray, Urſewike, Knevett, &c. for there be two Extreams obſerv'd in the Counſels of Princes, one, when the Prince is ſubject to follow the Counſels of Evil Men; the other, when the Prince is too opinionated to conſult with Counſel; ſuch an one as was Charles the Hardy D. of Burgundy, ſo opinionated and overweening of his own Wiſdom and Judgment, that he underthought all Mens elſe; which wide Conceit of his hath left this Monument. 1484.

Phil. Plantagenet, Lyonel Plant. D. of Clarence.

Carolus pugnax aliorum Conſilia & Rationes (ne dicam) ſequi vix audire volebat, ignominiæ loco habens ab aliis diſcere, & judicavit, ſe proprio cerebro omnia Concilia habere recondita. Pe. Hemterus. Joh. Megerus.

And to give us yet a further Character of Bp. Morton, Sir Thomas Moor (ſometimes his Maſter) tells us, his beſt Inclinations were ſway'd to the dangerous Poſitions and Rules of Policy; and Dr. John Hird in his Metrical Hiſtory of England, brings him in an Ambodexter and Obſerver of Fortune, one while Yorkizing, another while Lancaſtrizing, thus delivering himſelf:

Si Fortuna meis faviſſet partibus olim,
Et gnato Henrici Sexti diadema dediſſet,
Edwardi nunquam veniſſem Regis in aulam,
Sed quia ſupremo ſtetit hæc ſententia Regi,
Henrico auferre, ac Edwardo reddere Sceptrum,
Tanta mea nunquam luſit dementia mentem,
Ut ſequerer partes Regis victi atque ſepulti,
Adverſus vivum, &c.

If ſmiling Fortune had my Party own'd,
And the Sixth Henry's Offspring had enthron'd;
I'd ne're have ſtruck to Royal Edward's Claim,
Nor fill'd his Court, aſſiſtant to his Fame:
But ſince all-potent Heaven had ſo decreed
Henry ſhou'd fall, and Edward ſhou'd ſucceed,
No ſtupid Madneſs cou'd my Mind miſguide
With a dead King prepoſt'rouſly to ſide
Againſt a living Victor ———

Which may be thought well ſaid by a mere Politician, but from a Friend it wants ſomething of a Chriſtian; for true Friendſhip and Piety will own us in the blackeſt Adverſity and Silence of the Grave, as the Divine Arioſto hath ſomething near obſerv'd in this elegant Stanza.

Neſſun puo ſuper du chi ſia amato
Quando felice in ſula rota ſi ede;
Pere ch' ha iveri, & i finiti amici alato,
Chi moſtran tuti, una medeſſima fede,
Se poi ſi cangia in triſto il he'ſto ſtato,
Volta la turba adulatrice il piede,
Et quel di cuor' ama riman' forte,
Et ama il ſuo amico doppola morte. Arioſt. cant. 19.

No Man whilſt he was happy ever knew
Aſſuredly of whom he was belov'd,
For then he hath both feigned Friends and true,
Whoſe Faith ſeems both alike till they be prov'd;
But he is left of all the flattering Crew
When from his happy State he is remov'd:
But he who loves in Heart, remains ſtill one,
And loves his Friend when he is dead and gone.

Dr. Morton's Aims were drawn from other Rules, which with good Alacrity, made him Archbiſhop and Lord Chancellor of England, and put him the next Liſt into a Cardinalſhip, and then he ſtood on Tiptoes by the King, according to the Roman marſhalling of States; for in the Pope's Liſt of Ranges and Preſence, his Holineſs is the firſt, then the Emperor, next a Cardinal, then 1485. then a King: And in this, Sir Tho. Moor notes the extremity of his Pride, to abuse his Wisdom and Piety, which otherwise might have kept Him and his Memory unsully'd in these Preferments, so much our Vices impostumate our Fames, Hypocrisie leaving the Scar but of a deform'd Cure upon it at best.

Fra. Goodwin in Catalogo Episcoporum. But Dr. Goodwin, Bishop of Hereford, presents him nearer (as it were) in his Domestick Nature, and reports when Dr. Morton was Archbishop of Canterbury, he exacted and extorted a far greater Sum of Money from the Clergy of his Dioceſs than was ever before, and for his private Commodity (which he covetously sought) brought certain Leams or bigger Ditches to his own Grounds about Wisbitch, from the River Nine, which was before Navigable, and of much publick Use, but hath since serv'd for little or none. Joh. Stow. And John Stow says, he was the stirrer up of those great and grievous Taxes which rais'd the People to Arms and Rebellion. These Notes of his Natural Dispositions stuck like Wens upon the Face of his Religion, and from that Mind, whereby Affections justle Religion and Conscience out, how hazardous may the Power and Counsel of such be, to the Inclinations of a Wise Prince; but this Prelate made his so canonical, and fitted them to the Times, and his Temper, that they deceived not his Expectation, but brought him home to his Ends, and to the Favour of a provident and wise Prince; that he was so, the World must justly avow; and in all his Actions, we may see him of a safe and contracted Wisdom, govern'd by a most cautelous Spirit; as great a Husband of those Virtues he had, as of his Glory; not too Modest (if I be not much mistaken) to hear of either; of both which he hath left us pious Tastes. But the most surviving addition of Memory, is that great Example of Majesty and her Sex, Qu. Elizabeth, who was said to be like this King her Grandfather, as well in composition of Qualities, as Favour and Lineaments, that she was his lively and perfect Image; and to use an even Hand in the Extention of Himself and his Power, it must not be denied, (how far off soever he was at first) after the Crown yielded to him, he was the true Proprietary of all the Rights and Titles which carried it, or had dependency thereon, and to colleague all in a full and perfect strength, the Title of York was confirm'd to him by Marriage of Elizabeth Plantagenet, eldest Daughter of Edward IV. Prince or Head of that Family, to whom the Title of Lancaster instantly escheated as he was King, which before was in controversie or in nubibus, or * Abbeyance (as our Lawyers say) for no Man being a Subject, how Capital and Chief a Judge, or of what Judicatory Power soever, could give a Definitive Sentence, in any ambiguous Cause or Act of the King: But the King himself which is an ancient and authentick Paragraph in the Laws of England, as learned Judge Bracton affirmeth.

Q. Elizab.

* In delay or dispute such as Lawyers use, a term borrow'd from another Creature.

Brac. lib. 2. cap. 16. De Chartis, & de factis regum non possunt Justiciarii disputare, nec si disputatio oriatur, possunt eam interpretari, sed in dubiis & obscuris, & ubi aliqua dictio contineat duos intellectus, Domini Regis erit expectanda interpretatio & voluntas, &c.

The reason is given in the Books of the Civil and Imperial Laws peremptorily, quia de principali Judicio non est disputandum. So that Controversy, whether the Beauforts or Somersets were of the House of Lancaster, or capable of the Crown or no, cou'd not be determin'd until there came a competent Judge, a King, and King of England, who by that Vertue and Power decreed to himself, the Title of Lancaster, with all the Royal Apurtenances confirm'd by the Pope, as proper to him, and then the Writers, both English and French, had some colour to say he was De la ligne de Lancastre, & caput gentis regalis & Princeps Familiæ Lancastriensis. 1485.

But the Chancellor Morton, by a more happy and plausible Insinuation, term'd the Marriage an Union of York and Lancaster, and not improperly, nor without a very favourable acceptance to the King, (at least in the beginning of his Reign) though after (as may be observ'd) he thought those Attributions but small Wyers to hold the Weight and Consequence of his Crown; nay, so slender was his Affiance, (or rather none at all) in his Titles of York and Lancaster, much less of Somerset, that he seem'd tacitly to wave and quit them, and stuck to that of his Sword and Conquest; for the more publick Vote and Knowledge whereof, there was at his Coronation, Proclamations made with these Titles, Henricus Rex Angliæ Jure Divino, Jure Humano, & Jure Belli, &c. which the Barons could not fancy, nor condescend to, tho' the King peremptorily avow'd and maintain'd he might justly assume and bear it, having as a Conqueror entred the Land, fought for the Crown, and won it: They answer as peremptorily, That he was beholding to them, both for his Landing and Victory, and by their permission had that fair and prosperous Footing upon their Coasts; not by any Stroke of his French, who were not so many as the least Legion of the Romans, and had found but bloody Entertainment by the valiant English, if ever they had landed, besides, the Instigation of a mortal Hatred against the Invader, never to be extinguish'd, but with an utter Expulsion and Destruction, which they humbly pray'd might be worthy of his consideration, and not to take from his loving People the just due of their Affections, by ascribing so much of his Victory to the French, or his Welsh Sword; sith they voluntarily open'd their Arms and Country to receive him and put the Crown upon his Head; that this was their free and voluntary Act, they hoped he could not forget: And if so, why wou'd he make such an Atchievment, a Conquest, or a Purchase of the Sword? Terms of a most harsh and dissonant Sound to the English, who reputed them as barbarous and tyrannical, their Ends and Events to enslave Them, their Goods and Fortunes, under a Licentious Power, that might act and will any thing: Quicquid Victor audet, aut Victus timet? The Examples of the Conquering Gothi and Vandals, Longobards in Italy and Spain, Saxons and Normans in England; and lately, the Spaniards in America, with many other Cruel Lords estated only by their unjust Arms and Swords, being fresh and bleeding Instances, that when but mention'd, stir up Thoughts of Horror and Detestation of the Sword's Title. But the more they oppos'd it, the more he is constant to have it assented by the Pope, with his Title of Lancaster, which he thought wou'd be a stronger Bridle to check all Murmurs, but yet endeavour'd it not directly and disertly, but under a close and borrow'd Pretext, the outside of his Embassage being only to obtain a Dispensation and Pardon for his Marriage, pretending a fear of Incest, his Wife being his Kinswoman; Et quarto Consanguinitatis & forsan affinitatis gradu, which Pope Innocentius the Eighth granted the first Year of his Reign, and afterward (upon what Occasion I cannot say) he renew'd the same Suit to Pope Alexander VI. who confirm'd and ratified the Pardon and Dispensation made by his Predecessors, in the Fourth Year of this King's Reign.

K. H. VII. only affected the Title de Jure Belli.

Senec.

Ann. Dom. 1486.

Ann. Dom. 1490.

1484. But 'tis obſervable, that the Pope herein taketh not upon him to confer or give any new Titles; neither did the King publickly ſolicite the Pope to confirm theſe Two Titles, his Ambaſſador had that Particular in his Private Inſtructions: So that by this, the Pope ſeemeth only to make a Rehearſal of thoſe Titles as due and proper to him before, and the Titles De jure Belli, & de jure Lancaſtriæ, ſeem'd not as any Matters or Subject of the Bull, but rather ſome Deſire the Pope had, to expreſs a Love and Honour to the King, and that he was pleaſed, Ex proprio & mero motu & certa ſcientia ſua, to make ſuch honourable Memorial of all the Majeſtical Titles in the King's Right, as the more ſtately Embroideries to his glorious Letters of Apoſtolical Indulgence, for the Diſpenſation of the ſaid Marriage convey'd, and in theſe words:

I have ſeen this Bull in the Cabinet of Sir Robert Cotton.

The Pope's Charter for the Title of Lancaſter, Et de jure Belli, &c. for the diſpenſing with the inceſtuous Marriage.

Hic Rex Angliæ, de Domo Lancaſtriæ Originem trahens; ac qui notorio jure, & indubitato proximo ſucceſſionis titulo & Prælatorum & procerum Angliæ Electione & conceſſione &c. Etiam de jure Belli eſt Rex Angliæ.

After, for the more clear repairing and curing all Flaws and Defects of Titles, the Pope addeth this Gracious Clauſe; Supplemuſq; omnes, & ſingulos defectus, tam juris, quam facti, ſi qui intervenerint in Regno dicto.

And then in the End, not in the Front, this Bull is intituled, Pagina confirmationis noſtræ, approbationis, pronunciationis, conſtitutionis, declarationis, ſuppletionis, monitionis, requiſitionis, prohibitionis, Benedictionis, inhibitionis, & excommunicationis, & Anathematizationis in quoſcunq; qui preſumpſerint, infringere, vel auſu temeritatis, contravenire his literis Apoſtolicis.

For all this muſt be held, and thought to be done Autoritate Apoſtolica, i.e. by the Authority of the Apoſtles, St. Peter and St. Paul.

And thus the King received of the Pope the two Titles, De Domo Lancaſtriæ, and De Jure Belli, without any ſeeking or Solicitation (as we are led to credit) for there appeareth not any expreſs Suit or Motion by the King to that purpoſe, though by Circumſtances and Probability it was preferr'd under Hand, for the other Things were but of ſlight Requeſt and no neceſſity, nor obnoxious to any Danger; when thoſe two Titles were the preſent Marks, his Aim was ſtrongly and mainly directed to. Though, I muſt confeſs, after a while, he was as lightly ſatisfied in theſe (notwithſtanding the Pope's Thunder and Lightning, added to them) as in the Titles of York and Lancaſter, which he diſcover'd, and not obſcurely, when he moved the Eſtates in his firſt Parliament, to grant an Eſtate Hereditary and Entail'd of the Crown and Kingdom, with all the Appurtenances, to the Heirs of his Body: beyond this he cou'd not require much, nor they give, which was unanimouſly condeſcended unto, as a Gift of a new Title confirm'd by their Act; the Copy whereof I have tranſcrib'd (where I come to rehearſe the Titles of our Soveraign Lord the King, that now is). Nor is the Divination of this Piece ſo dark, but that the Cauſe may be gueſs'd at, why he held himſelf not ſafe in the Titles of York and Lancaſter, of Beaufort and Somerſet already touch'd at, but may fall more ſeaſonably elſewhere into our Stories, without confounding it with Hiſtorologies, and preſenting Matters out of their time and place; my Purpoſe only being, to take ſo much Light from the Story of Henry VII. as ſhall but properly conduce to the true ſhadowing and proportioning of K. Richard's, being neceſſarily inforc'd to inculcate ſuch Matters as may ſeem of no preſent concluſion; yet loſing their Obſervation, we ſhall want the knowledge of many things much pertinent to the Credit and Honour of K. Richard and his Actions: To which, according to the Orders and Affairs of Time, I am now to come again. 1485. The ſecond Invaſion of the E. of Richmond.

And here, upon our Account, we ſhall find it near upon Ten Months ſince the Duke of Buckingham was ſuppreſs'd, and the Earl of Richmond driven from Pocle with the Storm, who was now again very buſy raiſing freſh Preparations in France, and King Richard upon the Intelligence, as ſtickling to levy Souldiers, and re-inforce all his Havens and Frontier Places. But the Earl of Richmond found it not ſo eaſy a Matter now as at firſt, to draw a Party and Concurrence from France, having ſped ſo ill in his former Undertakings, which indeed ſtruck a great Diſcouragement in the Expectation of all his Favourers, and made his Welcome the colder to the D. of Brittain; the rather alſo, becauſe he had been with the French King before he came to him, which was taken but ill, altho' the Earl cou'd not otherwiſe do, being forc'd upon the Coaſts of Normandy; and coming into the Road at Deipe, landed, to Refreſh Himſelf and Company: From thence he intended to Roan, which being ſo near Paris, engaged him thither to the King, being, (as Philip de Comines ſaith) follow'd in a very honourable Port, by 500 Engliſhmen. In his Stay there (to ſhew us how much Intereſt a provident and active Spirit hath in Fortune) he ſo heighten'd and ſweeten'd his Behaviour to the Court, as conciliated the Favour and Reſpect of the Greateſt and Nobleſt Perſons to him. But moſt happily, the fair Opinion and Eſteem of the Princely Lady Anne de France, eldeſt Siſter to King Charles the Eighth; who had ſuch an Influence upon him in his Minority, that ſhe out-pitch'd Lewis Duke of Orleance, chief Prince of the Blood: In Envy or Miſſike whereof, he took Arms and raiſed a Civil War in France (as John Tillet and others write). She was Wife to Peirce de Bourbon Lord of Beaujen, after Duke de Bourbon; but Beaujen being his moſt ſtately and honourable Seigniory, he was call'd Monſieur de Beaujen; and his Lady had ſo flexible an Inclination to the Earl of Richmond's Cauſe, that ſhe importun'd the King to aid him with a good Sum of Money and 3000 Men, but odd Fellows: For Philip de Comines ſaith, they were Trois mille hommes les plus meſchants que lux peut troit ver, no better than Rogues and Trewans, Men of baſe Quality and as low Courage. Whilſt theſe were levying, the Earl (thrifty of all Opportunities, and as diligent to add what advantage of Time and Aid he cou'd) viſits the Duke of Brittain to the ſame purpoſe. The Duke propounds it to his Council, which Peter Landois his Treaſurer and Chief Counſellor objects againſt, with this Reaſon, That if the Enterprize ſucceeded well, yet the Event muſt fall out unhappily and ill to him; the Earl having now intereſted himſelf to the Favour and Aſſiſtance of Charles King of France: And this wou'd be the firſt Link of ſo ſtrong an Engagement, that the Earl and his Confederacy muſt be loſt to Brittain when he came to be King, being reſpectively tied to lend the King of France Aid againſt them, if any Cauſe ſhou'd happen, which the King of France had a prepared Stomach for, and had not been nice to ſeek any Provocation that might countenance a Quarrel againſt the Dutchy of Brittain, which was beyond his ſpan, ſo long as they continued in League with England; that being untwiſted, and France and England contracted, how eaſy was it for the French to invade and ſwallow up both him and his Dukedom. To make the preſent Advantage, therefore

Comines, p. 536.

1485. fore, as profitable as safe, his Advice was to stay the Earl: The Duke knowing his Coffers at that time very lank, and that the King of England wou'd offer well for him, approv'd the Counsel, and resolv'd to be led by Landois (whose Respects (notwithstanding) were very affectionate to the Earl). But whether by the secret Caution of some Friends, or suggested to him by his better Genius, sure it is, by some unknown Means he had knowledge of it; and yet this was determin'd but at Night, and design'd for the Morning: But before Midnight, or the knowledge of their Flight, he, and Twelve Gentlemen his Followers, had left Vannes, and recover'd Anjou (under the French King's Protection) from thence to the French Court again, the King being still very pliable and constant to his Promise concerning those French Forces under his own Charge. The next thing he works at, is how to enlarge the Earl of Oxford out of the Castle of Hammes, committed thither by Edward IV. (and in this he uses, or rather follow'd indeed) the Contrivement of Dr. Morton, who held good Quarter with the Earl of Oxford, and by his frequent Visits, had a familiar and easy Door open'd, which the Earl readily took the opportunity of, least it shou'd be shut again by some Miscarriage, for Richmond thought, or found the Constitution of his Design not a little strengthned by the Earl of Oxford's Confederacy: Nor did he mistake himself in his Accompt, when he set him down of Special Use, knowing him a Man of an Eminent Power, wisely and valiantly Temper'd: And to give him the stronger Presumption and Confidence, one that most mortally hated Edward IV. and all the House of York: To begin therefore an Obligation, the E. of Richmond makes a Complemental Journey to Hammes (r) where the E. of Oxford was then, under the Charge of S. James Blound; He finds all honourable and respective Entertainment, with fit liberty and occasion to propound himself unto the Earl who had been partly prepared by Dr. Morton, and therefore met him the neareſt way, engaging himself solely to the Premises, and (by vertue of an indefatigable Confidence) sets upon his Keeper, wins him to the Faction, and to Paris with them. By which time, all Preparations were in readiness; and whilst they make this Stay in the French Court, the Earl of Richmond receives a fair Excuse and Protestation from the D. of Brittain, with offer of Auxiliary Forces: This Supply came very acceptably, and however he resented the Duke's late Purpose upon him, his Wisdom told him, he must now convert his Anger into Thanks, which he returns with a reciprocal Protestation and Order, to send the Troops to Harflew, where his Shipping lay, and was the Rendezvous for his Souldiers.

(r) He did not go to Hammes. See Sir Th. Moor's History of Edward V.

In the end of July 1485. he took leave of the King and his most Noble Cousin Madam De Beaujen, departing for the Port of Harflew in Normandy, where he met with Two Thousand Brittains from the Duke honourably accommodated. But by the Way, he made some stay at Roven, and had News which much distemper'd him, That the Lady Elizabeth was forthwith to be married to King Richard; this quicken'd his Haste for England, presuming, his landing would forbid the Banes, otherwise he might sit down with folded Hands, for upon this Marriage insisted the main Hope and Consequence of his Fortune; without her, all his great Prætexts would faint, yet seemed to hear it, as a thing that cou'd not concern him so much, having so present and provident a Wit, that in any Chance he wanted not Counsel and Determination in himself for all Fortunes; instantly resolving to apply his Suit to her Sister the Lady Cecily: But ere he could perfectly fashion these Intents, they were also countercheck'd by the next Pacquet, which assured him the Lady Cecily was lately married: Neither did that (after some Collection) seem much to discompose him; but quickly, varying his Disposition to his Fortune, he would now fix himself upon some Choice in Brittain, amongst his noble Friends (for the most part Welsh-Men) and treats about a Daughter of Sir William Herberts, a Gentleman of an noble Alliance and principal Power in the South part of Wales; who had married the eldest Daughter, not long before, to the Earl of Northumberland, to whom the Earl of Pembroke (by a new created Friendship betwixt them) imbosoms the whole Design, and presses his Comprobation in it; for by this means it was presumed, the greatest part of Wales would fall under their Command; which had been no small Addition to a Banish'd Man's Fortune. Whilst those things were in their Mould, Dr. Morton gave him such assurance, by Letters, of the Countries Readiness to receive him, that it was thought best to take the Advantage of landing there; and in the Month of July they loose from Harflew, and safely arrived at Milford Haven in Pembrokeshire, his Native Country: After some Refreshing, he marches to a Town call'd Haverford West, and was entring amongst his Brittish Kindred, who welcom'd him as a Prince, descended from their ancient Princes of Wales, (the Country generally very noble and loving to their Friends) whilst he continued amongst them, Sir Rice ap Thomas, Sir Walter Herbert, Sir John Savage, Sir Gilbert Talbot (who drew his young Nephew the Earl of Salop into this Action with him) and divers others of all Qualities, brought or sent their Forces. His Army thus strong and united, he passes the Severne, and marches to Lichfield, purposing to hold on to London, if the King had not interposed it, who, though he lay at Nottingham when the Earl landed, and while he marched through Wales, had constant Spies upon him. But as no Policy or Law can secure their Faith, that think they may dispence with it, so all Benefits are too narrow, where Ambition and Ingratitude urges Merit: And to shew there is not much of our Fate in our own Providence, when this King thought the Nobility most firmly cemented to his side, and was to put himself upon their Constancy, they make a present and general Defluxion to the other; but he had heightned and contracted his Resolution and Judgment to the greatness of his Cause, and was not now to be outbid by Chance or Danger. The next Day (which was Sunday about Evening) passing through Leicester in open Pomp, the Crown Royal on his Head; with him John D. of Norfolk, Marshal of England, the Earl of Surrey, the Earl of Westmoreland, the Viscount Lovel, and other of the Nobility and Gentry; at Redmore Heath the Armies came to an Interview, and put themselves in array: The next Morning, early, there was some Conference held in the King's Tent, by those Peers and others of principal Trust, who gave him particular Information of all those secretly revolted; and it much amazed him, the Earl of Northumberland was one, to whom he had ever been most constant and forward in his Respects and Favours; therefore where he had confer'd so much, he suspected little. But no Obligations are religious if not held so. And altho' in the Conflict he stood but as neutral, yet the suddenness and example of it drew many from the King, even at the Instant

Leicest. Inquit. Rex Richardus cum maxima Pompa portans diadema, in capite. Chron. Croy.

1485. ſtant when he was ready to arm himſelf: Yet this was not of ſo great and ſenſible amazement unto him as the Lord Stanley's Defection; who, in pledge of his Faith, had left his Son George Stanley, whilſt his Wife (the Earl's Mother) had made her ſubtil Perſwaſions of ſtronger Tye, and ſub-induced him to the Lancaſtrian Side, which he aided with 26000 Men, if Philip de Commines be not miſtaken; for our Stories have but 5000. But it was a very great Defection, and made the Earl's Army far ſtronger; ſo that the chiefeſt Point of Conſultation now, was how to preſerve him by Flight, and the recovery of ſome Strong Hold, until the Tempeſt had ſcatter'd or ſpent its violence, which they conceiv'd could not be long, if the Camp broke up and once diſſolved. But no Argument could faſten on him, tho' the benefit of a Swift Horſe was offer'd at his Tent Door, nor the Fatality and Portent of Prodigies, related by his Friends, as preſaging ſome inevitable Calamity, and that Prophetical Prediction,

Jack of Norfolk be not too bold,
For Dicken thy Maſter is bought and ſold.

Theſe things aggravated, the weakneſs of his Army objected, Counſels, Perſwaſions, Terrors, Prodigies, Prophecies, cou'd not make him hear, ſo fatally reſolute he ſtood in the Jealouſie and Reputation of his Honour and Valour, peremptorily proteſting, He would rather adventure Life, Crown and Fortunes, than his Honour to a cowardly and ſiniſter Conſtruction. This might taſte of a deſperate Will, if he had not afterwards given an Apodixis in the Battel, upon what Plat-form he had projected and raiſed that Hope, which as it had much of Danger in it, ſo of an inconcuſs and great Reſolution, and might have brought the Odds of that Day to an even Bett; for knowing the Earl to be thirſty and appetent after Glory and Renown, but of an unpractiſed Skill in War, and as inferiour in Courage to him, he had projected (in manner of Stratagem) ſo ſoon as the Armies approach'd ready for the Charge, to advance himſelf before his Troops, and give the Earl, being General of his Forces, the Signal of a Combat. And to provoke and ſingle him with a more glorious Invitation, he wore the Crown Royal upon his Head, the faireſt Mark for Valour and Ambition. Polidore ſays he wore it, thinking that Day ſhould either be the Laſt of his Life, or the Firſt of a Better; which may as well be a reaſon of his wearing it Three Days before at Leiceſter, when he rode from thence to Boſworth. But doubtleſs, by it he intended chiefly, that the People might ſee and know him to be their King: And thoſe that ſtood arm'd againſt him, looking upon that Imperial Evidence, where their own Hands and Voyces had ſet it, ſhould by the Awe and Sovereignty of it, conſider how lately they had avow'd him their lawful King; and by what Pledges of their Faith and Allegiances, they ſtood ſolemnly bound to defend him and his Title in it, againſt all other: Whatever was his Myſtery, it render'd him a valiant and confident Maſter of his Right; and in the Conſtancy of Hope and Reſolution, he gives order for the Battel: The Armies confronted, and whilſt the Alarm and every Blow began to be hot and furious, forth breaks King Richard towards the Earl, wafting him by a Signal, who ſeem'd readily to accept it; and pricking his Horſe forward came on very gallantly, as if but one Genius had prompted their Spirits and Ambition: For a good Author teſtifieth that Comes Richmondiæ directe ſuper Regem Richardum, &c. But his Carreir ſoon faltred, and Mars became Retrograde, it being but a nimble Train, to draw the King on to ſome Diſadvantages, or elſe he liked not his furious Approach, for ſuddenly he makes halt, and with as much Credit as he could (and no Harm) recover'd the Vanguard of his Army, whither Richard purſued him, with ſo much ſpeed and fierceneſs, that he forc'd him to his Standard: And now, high in Blood and Anger (to ſee his Valour deluded by ſuch a Politick Bravery) with his Sword makes way, and with his own Hand ſlew Sir Charles Brandon, Standard-bearer, thinking to have made the next Blow as fatal to the Earl; but the confluence of Souldiers interjecting, reſcued him, Sir John Cheney being one of the foremoſt, whom the King ſtruck from his Horſe to the Earth; but charged and inviron'd with Multitudes (that like a Storm came on him) Valiant Richard falls the Sacrifice of that Day, under their cruel Swords, ſo rabious in their Execution, as if his Body muſt ſuffer more, becauſe they cou'd not kill his Better Part, mangling and wounding his dead Corps whilſt it lies drencht in Gore.

1485.

Sir William Brandon Father to Charles Brandon, afterward D. of Suffolk.

The 22th of Auguſt 1485.

Et Lupus & Turpes inſtant morientibus urſi,
Et quæcunque minor nobilitate fera eſt.

Ovid. triſt. l. 2. Eleg. 5.

Foul Bears and Wolves inſult and tear the Slain,
With each Inferior Savage of the Plain.

As Curs in their Kennels will bite and tear the Skin of thoſe Beaſts which in the Field they durſt not bark at:

Occidit in bello miſeranda cæde Richardus,
Crinibus attractus, dum ferro ſæviat hoſtis.

Dr. John Hird. in Hiſt. Angl.

Drag'd by the Hair to Hoſtile Swords a Prey,
And ſlain with barb'rous Wounds the vanquiſh'd Richard lay.

And after all (to complete their Barbariſm) threw his Body behind One upon a Jade, and ſo convey'd it to Leiceſter. A Story to be thought incredible, at leaſt to charitable and modeſt Ears, and highly upbraided by the happier and Chriſtian Fame of William the Conqueror, who ſeverely puniſh'd a Souldier for but hacking the Thigh of King Harold after he was dead, though an Uſurper and his perfidious Enemy; with all nobleneſs cauſing the Body to be delivered to his Mother for an honourable Interment, which was ſolemnly celebrated in his own Abbey at Waltham.

Matthew Paris, Hen. Huntington.

The Battle thus fought and won, the Victor was crown'd in the Field with that Crown King Richard wore, which the Lord Stanley put upon his Head, and ſalutes him King, by the Stile of Henry VII. King of England, &c. And Henry Earl of Richmond Son of Edmund ap Meredith ap Teudor (alias of Hadham) Earl of Richmond, and of Margaret Daughter and Heir of John Beaufort Duke of Somerſet attain'd to the Crown, and had the eaſier aſcent by the Overſight and Remiſſneſs of Richard in that Cataſtrophe of his Reign, who gave too much Opportunity and Scope to the Actings of his Enemies when they were under his Power and Arm. And in the Fortune of his Judgment (at the cloſing of the Scene) that did not better pre-ſuppoſe his Enemy too prudent and reſerv'd, to truſt the Advantage he had upon ſo ſharp and ſingle an Hazard: But Richard believing he had the odds in Courage and Monomachy of him, which probably might make him Maſter of the Combat, and ſo of the Field (the Strait being ſo deſperate too) reſolved rather to truſt to the Fate of his own Valour, than the Chance of an uncertain Eſcape; a Reſolution not ſo raſh and overweening, Henry of Richmond Crown'd in the Field.

Why K. Rich. wore the Crown at Boſworth.

Chron. Croy.

1485. overweening as commendable, if we look upon the very Aims and Neceſſity of it; neither is it new or improper for Princes to demand the trial of Camp Fight, or Single Combat perſonally in their Armies, and to the Generals in their Abſence: William the Conqueror challenged King Harold; Before that, a Combat was fought between Edmund Ironſide and Canute the Daniſh King, for the whole Kingdom of England: Our Richard I. and Edward I. in Paleſtine proffer'd the like to ſeveral of the Pagan Princes; ſo did Edward III. Henry V. with the Kings of France.

The Challenge of James V. King of Scots to Tho. D. of Norfolk.

In the Laſt Age, the valiant Prince James the Fifth of Scotland, in perſon challenged Thomas Lord Howard, Duke of Norfolk, General for the King of England, who accepted it; but the King into his Demands would have the Country or Lands then in controverſie, to be made Brabium victoris, which was without the General's Power to engage, being the Inheritance of the King his Maſter, but proffer'd better Lands of his own upon the Combate, which was not accepted, ſo that concluded nothing.

The better End of theſe Challenges and Combats, being at firſt level'd from Mercy and Piety, for by this Single Adventure, the Innocent Blood of Armies was (more than ſtanch'd) preſerv'd, Forreign Stories brings this home to us, and highly Characters their Kings and Generals in the like Examples, which this Age draws a Curtain before as not fit for Imitation, making too deſperate a Wound in a ſettled State and Succeſſion; the firſt who rendred that (or ſome more Politick) Reaſon for Princes not to adventure themſelves, was Philip II. King of Spain, (as a late Writer aſcribeth) but is miſtaken; for the more ancient Hiſtories of Syria and Perſia mention ſome Kings that refrain'd from Wars long before; as Herodotus, Diodorus, Trogus Pompeius tell us: But let us take meaſure from that Times, Wiſdom, Valour, Policy, &c. to this, and we ſhall find them but tottering Foundations of States which cannot uphold themſelves, or obvert the leaſt Decree of God, when he intends to ſcourge or alter Kingdoms; for where ſuch Viciſſitudes are deſtin'd, the Counſels and Faculties of Men muſt be darkned, and there will fall out all Concurrences and Advantages to further that Purpoſe. So in the Extirpation and Transferring of Families, the Potter in Jeremy, breaking one Jarr to make another, whoſe fatal Commutations ſhould extimulate the Piety of our Natures, and make us modeſt Cenſurers of their Events: For as we ſee things but thro' a Cloud, whilſt we meaſure them by Accidents, ſo we intrude on God's Providence, judging Men's Actions in their Succeſs, while we overact our own. Of ſuch a Compoſition was the Ill-wiſhers of King Richard, who forgot him not in his Grave, but endeavour'd to be equally cruel to his Memory: And in November following a Parliament was holden, in which he was attainted of High-Treaſon; a Strain very high to make him guilty of that, being a King, he cou'd not commit. By the ſame Figure may others, who were ſtiled Chief Aiders and Aſſiſtants of King Richard in the Battel of Boſworth, as Sir John Howard Duke of Norfolk, &c. though ſome would have him retired from the Court all King Richard's Reign. But Sir Thomas Moor affirms, he was conſtantly with him and near his Counſels, Sir Thomas Howard Earl of Surrey, Son and Heir apparent to the Duke: Francis Lovel Viſcount Lovel, Sir Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, Sir John de la Souch, Sir Robert Harrington, Richard Charleton, Richard Ratcliffe, Will. Berkeley, Will. Catesby, Thomas Broughton, John Buck, Humphry Stafford, Rob. Midleton, Robert Brokenbury, John Kendal Secretary to the King, Walter Hopton, Jeoffry Saint-German, Rog. Wake, Thomas Billington, William Sapcoate, Will. Brampton, all Knights, and ſome Heralds at Arms, with divers other; an Act of Parliament being made to Diſable and Forejudge them of all manner of Honour, State, Dignity; alſo to Forfeit all Mannors, Caſtles, Lordſhips, Hundreds, Franchiſes, Liberties, Advowſons, Priviledges, Nominations, Preſentations, Tenements, Rents, Suits, Reverſions, Portions, Annuities, Penſions, Rights, Hereditaments, Goods, Chattels, and Debts. Theſe be the words of the Act, and if jus, then jus ſummum in all Extremity. 1485. Parliam. an. 1 H. 7.

Princes go not to Camp.

Cruelties done to the Body of K. Rich. Noble Perſons attainted by Parliament.

Sir Thom. Moor.

Thoſe of Note that were taken, loſt their Heads at Leiceſter two Days after, being St. Bartholomew's-Day, and had a Glimpſe like that Bartholomew in France in our Time; all ſuch Slaughters from thence call'd Bartelemies, and Bartelemies, ſimply in a perpetual Stigma of that Butchery.

The Duke of Norfolk ſlain by the Earl of Oxford.

It is ſuggeſted, the Duke of Norfolk was ſlain in the Battel by the Earl of Oxford, and the Story of Croyland ſeemeth to ſay as much; Comes Oxoniæ valentiſſimus miles in eam alam ubi Dux Norfolciæ conſtitutus erat in agro (de Redmore) tum Gallicorum tum Anglicorum militum Comitatu ſtipatus tetendit, &c.

The Earl of Surrey eſcapeth at Boſworth.

Amongſt thoſe that eſcaped the ſad Deſtiny of that Day, was the Earl of Surrey, Sir Thomas Howard Viſcount Lovel, Sir Thomas Stafford, and his Brother N. Stafford; and many other Nobles and Gentlemen that got into Foreign Countries and Sanctuaries, obſcuring themſelves till the Storm and Smart of that Day's Memory were paſt. But ſome would maintain Thomas Earl of Surrey to be one of them that ſubmitted to the New King at Boſworth, immediately after the Overthrow, which muſt not be believed, if we underſtand the Compoſition of thoſe Times and Affairs: For certain it is, the E. Richmond had peremptorily proſcrib'd all thoſe he had cauſe to fear or hate, whoſe Names are partly in the Rolls, kept in the Chapel of the Convertites in Chancery lane, and partly omitted by the Scribes.

Now the Earl of Surrey, of all the reſt, was ſo terrible and diſtaſteful to him, there could be no Excuſe left for his Life. And therefore let no Man think he was taken or ſubmitted, but took an happier Seaſon ſome Months after. The Relation and Truth is (by the Warrant of one that well knew him, and the Inter-paſſage of his Fortune) the Earl opportunely left the Field, but ſo wounded, that Faintneſs and Night conſtrain'd him to the Houſe of a Gentleman not far from Nottingham, and one that bare a faithful Reſpect to the Earl and his Family, until he was recovered. In the mean time, that terrible Parliament held in the next November was concluded, and the King's Deſires reaſonably well appeaſed, in ſeeing the Execution of his New Laws paſt upon ſome of them.

After which, (ſome ſmall diſtance of time) followed a gracious Pardon to all the Offenders in that Cauſe, which proffer'd Mercy this Earl laid hold on, hoping to reſtore himſelf (by his Submiſſion) his offence, conſider'd, being but an Act of Loyalty to his Maſter. But this confidence ſent him to the Tower; for tho' the Violence of the Storm appear'd well calm'd, yet the 1485. the King retain'd ſome Heavings of it in his Thoughts: And this Impriſonment continued from his Firſt year of Reign unto the Fourth; and towards the beginning of that, being in the Tower with the Queen Elizabeth (to whom he was ſhortly after to be married) he took occaſion to call for the Earl, (bearing ſtill a guſt of the ſame Tempeſt in his Brow) and challenged him upon the old Quarrel, his Service to the late Uſurper and Tyrant, (as he uſually term'd King Richard) the Earl humbly moved his Pardon, and more favourable Conſideration to the Nature of his Offence, which Thouſands more conceiv'd to be but a due effect of their Liege Duties, and Allegiance to a Prince ſo lawfully, and with all general ſufferance crown'd, whoſe Title he held himſelf bound to defend by the Law of God and Nations, and would die in defence of him and that Crown, though he ſhould find it upon a Stake: The King left him with a ſtern and ruffling Reply, but in cold Blood better acknowledged his Integrity, and thought he would come of no leſs Value to him, having the Advantage to merit him by his Pardon, which ſoon after he granted him; nor did the Earl loſe ought of that Opinion: Shortly after, being made of the Privy Council, then Lieutenant or Governour of the North, and General againſt the Scots, whom he overthrew; as fatal was he to them at Flodden Field, where he took their King in the time of Henry the Eighth, who made him High Marſhal and Treaſurer of England, and reſtor'd him to his Father's Dukedom, the Inheritance of his Grandmother Mowbray, being a Man of ſuch a happy Direction in his Carriage and Wiſdom, that all his Actions came home with proſperous Succeſs, and accumulated what was ſometime ſpoken of his great Anceſtour Hewardus, of whom it was queſtion'd, Utrum fælicior an fortior eſſet, ſo Fortunate and Honourable hath that Houſe been in the Service to this State; and in the infinite Alliance and Cognation, it holds with the moſt Ancient Families, the Extractions and Propagations from Mowbray, Warren, Bruce, Dalbery, Marſhall, Segrave, Plantagenet, Brotherton, Bigot, Fitz-Alan, Matraver, Buckingham, Oxford, and Dacres: The Father of which Heward, was Leofrick Lord of Burne, and the adjacent Country in Lincolnſhire; his Mother was the Lady Edina, deſcended from the great Oſlac, a Duke amongſt the Eaſterlings in King Edgar's time: In whoſe Family, I alſo find a Noble Kinſman of his called Haward (to note obiter) This Haward was of a Noble and Magnificent note, a goodly Perſonage, anſwer'd with an equal Strength and Valour; Et nimium Bellicoſus, much, or too much devoted to Mars. He ſerved in the Wars of Northumberland, Cornwall and Ireland; and after in the Lower Germany, where he made up much of his Fame, and married a fair Lady called Turfrida, the Daughter of a Nobleman in Flanders, where he continued until the Death of his Father call'd him Home. About which time, William Duke of Normandy made his Conqueſt of this Kingdom, and had gratify'd Johannes Talbois the French Count, now Earl of Holland, with Leoffricks Country of Holland, in the Marſhand; and the Count very rudely had expuls'd the Lady his Mother, out of her Poſſeſſions and Dower. Hawardus ſet upon him with ſuch Forces as he could ſpeedily raiſe, took, and held him Priſoner in deſpite of the Conquerour, until he redeem'd himſelf, and accounted for what he had done with a large Sum of Money. This drew thoſe of the Nobility to the protection of his Sword, which the Conquerour had chaſed out of their Country, who had fortified themſelves in the Iſle of Ely, and made Hawardus their General, where he built a Caſtle that a long time after had his Name. But the Normans took that Advantage to infeſt his Country, and put him again to the Recovery of it, which he ſo fortunately ſettled, that the Conquerour was contented to make him his, and hold him in good favour whilſt he lived. He was buried in the Abbey of Croyland: Concerning his Iſſue by the Lady Turfrida, there is mention only of a Daughter named Turfrida, married to Hugo Enermua, Lord of Deeping: But circumſtance will perſwade us, he had other Iſſue, if we conſider him in the likelihood of his Strength and Ability, and that divers continued of his Sir-name in that Country a long time after him, which makes it probable, he had a Natural Son, (at leaſt, bearing his own Name of Heward) that next to him was the Original Anceſtor of this Houſe of Howards. And let it not be thought any Diſparagement for a Noble Family to be raiſed from a Natural Iſſue; for many Princely Families have been deriv'd and propagated from Natural Sons, as was Eneas, Romulus, the Founders of the Roman Families; So was Theſeus and Themiſtocles, as Plutarch writeth; others ſay as much of Hercules, &c.

1485.

Scots overthrown by the E. of Surrey.

Ingulfus.

Lib. Elienſis.

The honour of Baſtards.

Homer. Livy.

The King of Spain deſcended from Henry de Traſtamara, Baſe Son of Alphonſus the Juſticer, King of Caſtile. And who doth not honour the Princely Race of William the Conquerour, Baſtard Son to the Duke of Normandy? Where was a more Heroical Man than Robert Earl of Glouceſter, baſe Son of King Henry I.? The Earls of Warren deſcended from Hamelin, a baſe Son of Geoffry Plantagenet, Earl of Anjou: The Noble Herberts are alſo ſaid to come from a baſe Son of Henry the Firſt.

And the Duke and Earls of Somerſet (which followed the red Roſe) were the Off-ſpring of the Beauforts, Natural Sons of John de Gaunt.

For a further Conjecture, why theſe Howards muſt be deſcended from Hewardus or Herewardus (for ſo ſome Writers call him; but (Ingulfus, who beſt knew him, conſtantly calls him Hewardus) both Names may ſignifie in the Saxon old Dutch, a Chief Captain of an Army, whom the Romans call'd Imperator.) And that the Titles and Names of great Offices have given Sir-names to many Noble Families, we have Examples in plenty; Particularly, the Viſconti of Milan, the Chamberlaines of Normandy, the Stewards of Scotland, the Butlers of Ireland, and divers others, who had their Sir-names from the Offices of their Anceſtors and Fathers; and the ſame Preſumption or Argument may be for taking the Sir-name of Howard, and the Origine of their Family from Hewardus, the Howards from the time of Heward, dwelling in theſe Countries of Holland and Marſhland, and were Lords of ſome Lands belonging to him, until by their Matches, with the Daughters and Heirs of Fitton, Tendring, Mowbray, Tilney, &c. they became poſſeſſed in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Berkſhire, and were Lords ſometime of Sunning-hill near Windſor, and bore the Sir-name ever ſince (or with ſmall interruption) the old Sir-name written Heward, or Hereward in Charters and Records, and Howard in Stories. But deſcend we thro' the Succeſſion of thoſe times to William Haward, Chief Juſtice in the Reign of Edward I. Grandfather to Sir John Howard, Admiral of the North Fleet, in the Naval Wars of Edward III; his Son Sir Robert Howard married the Daughter of the 1485. the Lord Scales, and Sir John Howard (who liv'd in the time of Henry IV. and died Anno 16. Henry VI.) had two Wives, Margaret Daughter and Heir of Sir John Plais Knight, by whom he had Eliza: an only Daughter, married to John de Vere Earl of Oxford, who brought him a goodly part of the Howards Lands: Her Heirs were married to Latimer and Winckfield, very fruitful Families. His second Wife was the Daughter and Heir of Sir William Tendering of Stoke-Nayland in Suffolk, by whom he had Sir Robert Howard his eldest Son, who married Margaret Mowbray, Daughter of a Cadet of the House of Lancaster, who became Co-heir with her Sister the Lady Berkeley, Wife to Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk, dead in Venice, and left his Son Henry Howard Heir to Haward and Mowbray; and John Howard, the Son of John Howard, was created Earl of Norfolk by King Richard III. in the right of his Mother Mowbray, he married the Daughter of the Lord Moulines, and by her had Thomas Howard, the first Howard Earl of Surrey; this is he who survived the Danger of Bosworth Field, and became afterwards Duke of Norfolk, from whom all the Howards now living are Descended, whose Family hath been so fruitful to furnish this Kingdom with four Dukes, many Earls, Viscounts, and Barons, three High Treasurers, six High or Great Marshals, ten High Admirals, with some Honourable Custos of the Privy-Seal, and sundry Chamberlains of the King's House; and one lately lived who had born the Offices of High Constable, Lord Lieutenant, Lord high Steward, Marshal and Admiral of England, Lord Chief Justice in Oyer of the better Part of this Kingdom, and Chamberlain of the Royal House, a Man honourable in his Deportments, and fortunate in his Undertakings; as at the great Marine Battels against all the Naval Powers of Spain, the Pope, and Princes of Italy, Anno Dom. 1588. and in the Siege of Gadys, An. Dom. 1596.

Sir Charles Howard.

And this is the Grand-Child of that Thomas Lord Howard, who for his better Distinction and perpetual Honour is stiled Triumphator Scotorum.

Camden in Oltad.

I have stray'd into this Digression, as a grateful Tender of an Acknowledgment I owe to that Illustrious Family, for their Noble Patronage and Favour to my Ancestors, especially to that Unfortunate Bucke and his Children, who wither'd with the white Rose, (bearing an Ancient and Hereditary love to the House of York, and stood in good Credit and Favour with the King his Master) nor let this Remembrance of him, and his obscur'd Family, seem Ostentation or Vain-glory, whilst I say no more than what other Histories dictate; which give him an able Character. Master Camden Clarentius (in his Immortal Brittannia,) deriveth this Sir John Bucke, from Sir Walter de Bucke of Brabant and Flanders, who had that Sir-name of great Antiquity from the Castle de Bucke in Lisle, a City and Frontier Town in Flanders, where the ancient Earls were accustomed much to reside; the Ruins of this Castle remained in the late time of Lodwicke Guicciardine, who saith, He saw the Carcass thereof: And this Walter Bucke was a Cadet of the House of Flanders, employ'd and sent by the Prince (then Duke of Brabant and Earl of Flanders) to King John, with Auxiliary Troops: Roger Wondover saith, Walter Bucke, Gerard de Scottigni, and Godescalius, venerunt in Angliam cum tribus legionibus Flandrensium & Brabantianorum militum, &c. and he did the King excellent Service here (as many of our Historians report, for which the King bountifully rewarded him with Lands in Yorkshire and Northamptonshire: And in Yorkshire (where he made his Seat) he found an ancient Family of the Sirname of Bucke of Bucton, in the Wapentake of Bucrosse, where that Family had anciently been, (for the Name is a Saxon or Dutch word, and signifieth a Beech Tree, or Beech Wood) here Walter contracted Alliance, and married Ralph de Bucke his Eldest Son, to the Daughter and Heir of Gocelinus de Bucke, Grandchild to Radolphus de Bucke, who was a Part Founder and Benefactor to the Abbey of Bredlington, (as is mention'd in the Charter of Henry I. made for the Foundation of that Monastery) and from this Walter descended John Bucke Knight, who married a Strelley, and was so constant in his Affection, that (altho' she died in his best Age) he made a Religious Vow, and became a Knight of the Rhodes, his Arms are yet to be seen in the Ruins of the Hospital of St. John's near Smithfield, and in the Church of Alhallows at the Upper-end of Lumbard-street, which was repair'd and enlarg'd with the Stones brought from that demolish'd Cænoby: He liv'd sub rege Edvardo filio Regis Henrici: as I have seen by the Date of his Deed in Herthill, Anno 1 Ed. 1. & Anno 22 Ed. 1.

Lodow. Guicci. du Paes. Baess. The Ancientry of Buck.

From this Knight of the Rhodes descended Sir John Bucke, who for his too much forwardness in Charging a Fleet of Spaniards (without the Leave of the Earl of Arundel Lord Admiral) was committed to the Tower, (testified by the Records there) Anno 13. Richard II. Lawrence Bucke his Son, follow'd Edward Plantagenet Duke of York, and was at the Battel of Agincourt with him, when he was Slain: John Bucke Knight, the Son of this Lawrence, married a Daughter and Heir of the House of Stavely, out of which are descended the Barons Parres of Kendall and Rosse, Queen Katharine (the last Wife of King Henry VIII.) the Lord Parre Marques of Northampton, and the Herberts Earls of Pembroke and Montgomery.

M. Paris. M. Westminst. Radulphus de Cogeshall. Tho. Walsing.

These Buckes residing for the most part at West-Stanton, and Herthill in Yorkshire, and match'd into the Families of Strelley or Stirely of Woodhall, Thorpe, Tilney, (then of Lincolnshire) and Savill, by which we have much noble Kindred; Sir John Bucke for his Service to the House of York, especially at Bosworth, lost his Head at Leicester; He married the Daughter of Henry Savill, by whom he had Robert Bucke and other Children, who were brought into the Southern Parts by Thomas Duke of Norfolk, where they have remain'd ever since; for the Children (being Orphans) were left in miserable Estate by the Attainder of their Father; But the Duke bestow'd two Daughters in Marriage, one with the Heir of Bucke, the other, with the Heir of Fitz-Lewis, very ancient Families, from which Matches divers Honourable and Noble Persons are descended. The Sons were, one a Souldier, the other a Courtier, the third, a Priest; afterward the Duke bestow'd Robert Bucke, the Eldest Son at Melford-Hall in Suffolk, and married him into the Families of Higham and Cotton, as also did the Blounds of Elwaston, the Talbots of Grafton, from whom the Barons of Monjoy, and the late Earls of Shrewsbury descended; one of the Daughters of this Bucke married to Frederick Tilney of Shelley-Hall in Suffolk, his neareſt Kinsman by the Dutchess his Mothers side.) But some perhaps must call this my Vanity, I shall but answer them, that I think my self bound (by all the Blood and Memory I claim from them,) to pay them my best Relations and Endeavours, acknowledging with the great Consular Philosopher, Parentes charissimos habere debemus, quod ab 1485. iis vita, patrimonium, libertas, Civitas tradita eſt. And I ſhould think there is none, who hath an intereſt in the quality of Gentile or Noble, (for all is one) but looks back (with ſome delight) to their firſt Commemoration; and finds a ſtrong Engagement due to the Vertues and Worth of their firſt Fathers; for that expreſs Charge to Honour Father and Mother, is not to be underſtood, only of our Parents ſuperſtits, and living here with us, but our Forefathers: that is, beyond our great Grandfather, for we have no proper word for them above that degree (but Anteceſſors, vulgo Anceſtors) whom the Romans called Majores, and comprehendeth all our Progenitors departed ſooner or later) for the Words Pater and Mater, as alſo, Parens & Parentes, extend very largely, and reach up to the higheſt Anceſtors. The ancient Roman Juriſconſults, deliver in their Law for an Axiom, that Appellatione Parentum omnes in infinitum majores utriuſque ſexus ſignificantur; and the word Parentes yet ſpreadeth further, comprehending all Kinsfolks and Coſins, of our Blood and Linage, being uſed in that ſenſe by Ælius Lampridius, by Julius Capitolinus, and other the beſt Writers in the Times of the declined Empire, as Iſaac Caſaubonus hath well obſerved in his Annotations. 1485.

The Italians, Spaniſh and French, (whoſe Language is for the moſt part Romanzi (Mongrel Latin) and broken and corrupted Roman Language (uſe Parenti, Parentes and Parents for all their Kinsfolks and Gentilitious Coſins.

We Engliſhmen (being more preciſe) follow the Ancient and Claſſick Latin Writers, holding Parent ſtrictly to the ſimple Signification of Pater and Mater, the preſent and immediate Parents. But the uſing of the word Parentes, as thoſe Imperial Hiſtorians uſe it; ſerveth better for our purpoſe here: And I could (moſt willingly) imitate the Pious Gentlemen of Italy, Spain, and France, in their Religious and Charitable Endeavours, to advance the Happineſs of their Parents defunct, if thoſe Deſires could beſteed them. But where I ſhould crave Pardon, I become more Guilty and Extravagant; it is time therefore to know good Manners, and return home to our proper Task, which will be to refell the groſs and black Calumnies thrown unjuſtly upon the Memory and Perſon of King Richard, And falls within the Circle of the next Book.

BOOK III.

The ARGUMENT of the Third BOOK of the LIFE and REIGN of RICHARD III.

The Defamations of King Richard examined and anſwered. Dr. Morton and Sir Thomas Moore malevolent to the Houſe of York, Their frivolous Exceptions againſt his Geſtures, Looks, Teeth, Shape and Birth, his Vertues depraved. The Death of King Henry the Sixth, and his Son Edward Prince of Wales. The Actors therein. The Offence of Killing an annointed King. Valiant Men hate Treacheries and Bloody Acts. King Richard not Deform'd. The Slanders of Clarence tranſlated to King Richard. The Cauſe of Clarence's Execution. How the Sons of King Edward came by their Deaths. King Richard Exculpable thereof. The Story of Perkin Warbeck compared with Don Sebaſtian, King of Portugal, who are Biothanati. Counterfeit Prince detected, Young Prince marvellouſly preſerved. Many Teſtimonies for the Aſſertion that Perkin Warbeck was Richard Duke of York; his honourable Entertainment with foreign Princes Vox populi. Reaſons why it is not Credible King Richard made away his two Nephews; the force of Confeſſion. The Evil of Torture, the Guilt of attempting to Eſcape out of Priſon, what an Eſcape is. The Earl of Oxford ſevere againſt Perkin, and his End. The baſe Son of King Richard the Third ſecretly made away. The Son of the Duke of Clarence put to Death. The Power of Furies, Demones & Genii. Apollonii Majeſtas.

Quod tibi non vis alteri ne feceris.

THERE is no Story that ſhews the Planetary Affections and Malice of the Vulgar more truly than K. Richard's: and what a tickle game Kings have to play with them; tho' his Succeſſor Henry VII. play'd his providently enough (with help of the Standers by) yet even thoſe Times (which had promiſed the happieſt Example of a State, and beſt of a King) both groan'd and complain'd; but had not the ſting and infection of King Richard's Adverſaries, who did not only as the Proverb ſaith, cum larvis luctare, contend with his immortal Parts, but raked his Duſt, to find and aggravate Exceptions in his Grave; having learnt their Piety from the Comical Paraſite, obſequium amicos, veritas odium parit, and finding it as well guerdonable as grateful, to Publiſh their Libels and Scandalous Pamphlets, (a piece of Policy and Service too) to the Times, (and an offence to reſent any thing good of him) they gave their Pens more Gall and freedom, having a Copy ſet by Doctor Morton, who had taken his Revenge that way, and written a * Book in Latin againſt King Richard, which came afterward to the Hands of Mr. Moore (ſometime his Servant) ſo that here the Saying of Darius, (which after became a Proverb) hath place

Eraſmus in Chiliad.

Terentius in Adelph.

* This Book was lately in the hands of Mr. Roper, of Eltham, as Sir Edward Hoby, who ſaw it told me.

Hoc

1485. Hoc Calceamentum consuit Histiæus, induit, autem Aristagoras.

Dr. Morton (acting the Part of Histiæus) made the Book, and Master Moore like Aristagoras set it forth, amplifying and glossing it, with a purpose to have writ the full Story of Richard the Third (as he intimateth in the Title of his Book;) but it should seem he found the Work so melancholy and uncharitable, as dull'd his disposition to it; for he began it, 1513. when he was Under-Sheriff, or Clerk to one of the Sheriffs of London, and had the Intermission of Twenty two Years (which time he took up in Studies, more Natural to his Inclination, as Law and Poetry, * for in them lay his greatest fancy) to finish it before he died, (which was in 1535. but did not yet lift himself so happily into the Opinion of Men, that his Commendations had more Fortune than Observation:) and past him under the Attributes of Learning and Religion; tho' in both he came short of what was ascribed to him; for if he understood the Latin and Greek, (then held great Learning) yet was he so far under the desert of an excellent Scholar, as the learned censured him a Man of slender Reading, and Germanus Brixius, Irruditus, i. unlearned; for the Sanctity of his Life, John Balæus, who took not up his Knowledge of him an Age off, (as some of his Admirers,) but from the Original, thus gives us his Draught.

* He wrote many Poems and Epigrams, sundry pretty Comedies, and Enterludes, often times personating with the Actors, as his loving and familiar Friend Erasmus reports. Brixius Antimore.

Joan. Balæus de scriptoribus. Brit. Cent. 8. cap. 69.

Hoc nos probe novimus qui eramus eidem Thomæ Moro viciniores, quod pontificum, & pharisæorum crudelitati ex avaritia subserviens omni tyranno truculentior ferociebat, imo insaniebat in eos qui aut Papæ primatum, aut purgatorium, aut mortuorum invocationes, aut imaginum cultus aut simile quiddam diabolicarum impostturarum negabant, a vivifica Dei veritate ita edocti. Consentire hic Harpagus noluit ut Rex Christianus in suo Regno primus esset, nec quod ei liceret cum Davide, Salomone, Josaphato, Ezechia, & Josia Sacerdotes, & Levitas rejectâ Romanensium Nembrodorum tyrannide in proprio ordinare dominio, &c.

In English thus.

" This we, who were no Strangers to the " said Thomas More, very well know, that, for " covetous Ends ministring to the Cruelty of " the Priests and Pharisees, he raged more " fiercely than any Tyrant; yea, was transported even to Madness against those, who " instructed by the Life-giving Truth of God, " denied either the Supremacy of the Pope, or " Purgatory, or the Worshipping of Saints or " Images, or such other diabolical Impostures. " This Man of Avarice would not agree that a " Christian King should be Supreme in his own " Kingdom, nor permit him with David, Solomon, Jehoshaphat, Ezechiah, and Josias, rejecting the Tyranny of the Roman Nimrods, to " order the Priests and Levites in his own Dominions, &c.

Rich. Grafton saith, he died mocking and scoffing as he lived.

Adding the Attribute of tenebrio, of veritatis evangelicæ perversissimus osor, of obstinatus Calophanta, of impudens Christi adversarius; and saith of his end that decollatus fuit in Turre Londinensi sexto die Julii, Anno Dom. 1535. Capite ad magnum Londini pontem (ut proditoribus fieri solet) stipiti impositto, & nihilominus a Papistis pro novo Martyre colitur.

That is, " He was Beheaded in the Tower of " London upon the Sixth day of July, in the " Year 1535. his Head, (as is usual to be done " with Traytors,) being fix'd on a Pole upon " the Bridge of London; notwithstanding of " which he is by the Papists adored for a new " Martyr. 1485.

Thus he became a Martyr and a Saint; but we shall find other Cause of his Condemnation by his own Testimony; for when he stood at the Bar arraigned, some Exceptions having been urg'd against him, for seeming to uphold and maintain the Pope's Supremacy in England; his Reply was, he could not see quomodo laicus vel secularis homo possit vel debeat esse caput status spiritualis aut ecclesiastici; yet insinuated, that this Opinion was taken hold of but for a Pretext to supplant him; the greatest cause of the King's Displeasure being for his withstanding the Divorce, between him and Katharine of Castile his Wife, and his second Marriage with the Lady Anne Bullen Marquesset of Pembroke: And his own words (spoken to the Judges, as they were set down by his dear Friend, George Courinus, in a short Discourse upon his Death) are, non me pudet quamobrem a vobis condemnatus sum (videlicet) ob id, quod nunquam voluerim assentiri in negotium novi matrimonii Regis, which uttered after Sentence of Condemnation, (when no Evasion or Subterfuges would avail) must proceed surely from his Conscience; and before this, he wrote a Letter to Mr. Secretary Cromwell, (which I have seen) wherein he protested, he was not against the King, either for his second Marriage, or for the Churches Supremacy: But wisheth him good Success in those Affairs, &c. which renders him (well look'd upon) not so stout a Champion for the Pope, as many of his partial Friends and Romanists supposed; Neither so found in his Religion; for I have seen amongst the multitude of Writings, concerning the Conference about the Alteration of Religion, and suppressing of Churches and religious Houses, that his Connivance and Consent was in it; nor could he excuse it, with all his Policy and Wisdom, neither had the K. ever attempted it, had not the Pope and his Agents opposed that second Marriage, an Error and Insolency Rome hath ever since repented. But it prov'd a happy blow of Justice to this Kingdom, cutting off him and his Authority, which else had hazarded the best Queen that ever was, the Sacred and eternally honour'd Elizabeth, to whose growing Glory and Virtue Mr. Moore became an early and cruel Adversary, even before she was in rerum natura. To know him further, let me refer you to the Ecclesiastical History of Mr. John Fox, in the Reign of Henry VIII. who describes him Graphically; for his Historical Fragment, it shews what great Pains he took to item the Faults and sad Fortunes of King Richard III. and how Industrious he was to be a Time-observer, it being the most plausible Theme his Poetical Strain could fall on in those Times, and could not want Acceptance nor Credit, well-knowing in what Fame he stood, and that the weaker Annalysts and Chroniclers, (of mean Learning and less Judgment) would boldly take it upon trust from his Pen; who tanquam ignotum & servum pecus, have follow'd him step by step without Consideration, or just Examination of their Occurrents and Consequents. And the Reputation of him and Dr. Morton (being both Lord Chancellors of England) might easily mislead men part blind, who have dealt with King Richard, as some trivial clawing Pamphleters, and Historical Parasites, with the magnificent Prelate Thomas Wolsey Cardinal and Archbishop of York, a man of Courinus.

In scriniis div. Ro. Cotton.

1485. very excellent Ingredients and without Peer in his time; yet his Values had the sting of much Detraction, and the Worth of his many glorious good Works interpreted for Vices and Excesses; to such it must be said, quod ab ipso allatum est, id sibi relatum esse putant. And if their Injustice suffer under the same lash, they must know this doom hath the credit of an Oracle, quale verbum dixisti tale etiam audies.

Terent. Phorm.

Iliad. 20.

But so much Gall and Envy is thrown upon King Richard's Story, as cannot possibly fall into the Style of an ingenuous and charitable Pen; all his Virtue is by a malicious Alchymy substracted into Crimes, and where they necessarily fall into mention, either scornfully transmitted or perverted, with injurious Constructions, not allowing him the Resemblance of Goodness or Merit: If his Disposition be Affable and Curteous, (as generally it was, which their own Relations cannot deny) then he insinuates and dives into the Peoples Hearts: so where he expresses the Bounty and Magnificence of his Mind, it is a subtle Trick to purchase Friendship; let him conceal the Knowledge of his Injuries, and his Patience is deep Hypocrisie; for his Mercy and Clemency extended to the highest Offenders, (as to Fogge the Atturney, who had made a Libel against him, besides the Counterfeiting of his Hand and Seal) they were but palliated, and his Friendship merely a Court Brow. They have yet a more captious and subtle Calumny, reproaching the Casting of his Eyes, Motions of his Fingers, Manner of his Gesture, and his other natural Actions.

The Virtues of King Richard maliciously censured.

Cicero de Offic. lib. 1.

I confess with Cicero that status, incessus, sessio, accubatio, vultus, oculi, manuum motio, have a certain kind of Decorum; but he makes it not a Vice to erre in any of them, nor that any Errour committed in them was a Vice; altho' in him it must be so defined by the Laws of Utopia: Nay, they will dissect his very Sleeps, to find Prodigious Dreams and Bug-bears, (Accidents frequent to themselves) which they dress in all the Fright and Horrour Fiction and the Stage can add, who would have sung Peans to his Glory, had his Sword brought Victory from Bosworth Field: But now, their Envy is born with him from his Mother's Womb, and delivers him into the World with a Strange prodigy of Teeth; altho' (I am perswaded) neither Dr. Morton, nor Sir † Thomas Moore ever spake with the Dutchess his Mother, or her Midwife, about the matter.

But if true; it importeth no reason why those early and natalitious Teeth should presage such Horrour and Guilt to his Birth; when we shall remember those many Noble and Worthy Men who have had the like, (without any imputation of Crime) as * Marcus Curius Sirnam'd thereupon Dentatus, Cu. Papiene, King of the Epirots (a Prince much renown'd for his Victories and Virtues) Monodas Son of Prusias King of Bithynia, born with an intire Semicircular Bone in their Mouths, instead of Teeth: then they aggravate the Pangs of the Dutchess in her Travail with him: which had not been sufferable without Death, if so extream and intolerable, as they would have them thought for, 1485. This Dutchess of York died about the 11th of K. Hen. 7. at Berkhamsted, and was buried at Totheringam, John Stow. Seneca.

Quod ferri potest leve est; quod non, breve est.

What can be born is light; what cannot, short.

But she overcame them and lived almost Fifty Years after; others have died in that Bed, yet the Children not made Guilty of Murther; Julia the Daughter of Julius Cæsar, Wife to great Pompey, Juliola the dear Daughter of Marcus Cicero, Wife of Dolabella, and Junia Claudilla the Empress, and Wife of Caligula, died all of the Difficulties and Extremity of their Child-bearing; so did Q. Elizabeth Wife of King Henry VII. and since the Mother of that most towardly and hopeful Prince Edward VI. in travail of his Birth; with many Thousands more, whose Deaths (much less their Pains) were never imputed to their Children.

The next Objection is somewhat of more regard, (but as far without the certainty of a Proof) which is the pretended Deformity of his Body, controverted by many; some peremptorily asserted he was not deformed, of which Opinion was John Stow, a Man indifferently inquisitive (as in all their other Affairs) after the verbal Relations and Persons of Princes, and curious in his Description of their Features and Lineaments, who in all his Inquiry could find no such Note of Deformity in this King: but hath acknowledged vivâ voce, that he had spoken with some ancient Men, who from their own Sight and Knowledge affirmed he was of bodily Shape comely enough, only of low Stature, which is all the Deformity they proportion so monstrously; neither did John Rouce who knew him, and writ much in his Description, observe any other: And Archibald Whitlaw, Ambassador unto this King from Scotland, in his Oration says, he had corpus exiguum; not otherwise; so (to my conceit) Philip de Comines and the Prior de Croyland (who had seen and known this Prince) seem to clear him implicatively; for in all their Discourses of him, they never directly nor indirectly, covertly or apertly, insinuate this Deformity which (I suppose) they would not have passed: And by his sundry Pictures which I have seen, there was no such Disproportion in his Person or Lineaments, but all decently compacted to his Stature, his Face of a warlike Aspect, (which Sir Tho. Moore calleth a crabled Visage) of all the Children being said to be most like his Father in favour and composition of Shape, who tho' not tall was of an even and well-disposed Structure.

K. Richard not deform'd.

Rot. in an. 2 R. 2.

And Sir Thomas Moore himself, doth not certainly affirm the Deformity, but rather seems to take it as a Malitious Report; for, saith he, King Richard was deformed as the Fame ran by those that hated him; habemus reum confitentem, and surely it had been a strange kind of Confidence and Reason in Dr. Shaw, || to disclaim a thing which must be so palpable, openly in the

Sir Thomas Moore apud Harlington.

Dr. Shaw.

* Pliny, Livy, Valer. Maximus, Plutarch.

† Sir Thomas More describes him thus: He was little of Stature, ill-featur'd of Limbs, Crook-back'd, his Left Shoulder much higher than his Right, hard favour'd of Visage, the Dutchess, his Mother, had so much ado in her Travel, that she cou'd not be Deliver'd of him uncut; he came into the World with his Feet forward, and not Untooth'd.

Holinshead's Description of him is much the same: He was small and little of Stature of Body greatly deform'd, the one Shoulder higher than the other; His Face was small but his Countenance Cruel, and such as at the first aspect a Man wou'd judge it to savour and smell of Malice, Fraud and Deceit.

|| Mr. Buck cannot avoid erring; there is no mention even in Dr. Shaw's Speech of King Richard's being like his Father in the Body, 'tis said in the Face only. His Words were, "The very Noble Prince, the Special Pattern of "Knightly Prowess, as well in all Princely Behaviour as in the Lineaments and Favour of his Visage, representing the "very Face of the Noble Duke of York, his Father. Hol. p. 728. Sir Thomas Moore writes, That the People instead of Applauding this Harangue, stood amaz'd at the Preacher, who for mere Shame hid himself, and not long after pin'd away to Death. Hist. of Edw. V. and Rich. III.

Pulpit

1485. Pulpit at St. Paul's Cross, whilst the Protector was present, before many Hundreds of People, (who had seen and known him before) and might then better view and note him; In these words, 'The Lord Protector is a very noble Prince, the 'special Pattern of Knightly Prowess, as well in 'all Princely Behaviour as in the Lineaments of 'his Body and in the Favour of his Visage, re-'presenting the very Face of the Noble Duke 'his Father; this is the Father's own Figure, this 'is his own Countenance, the very sure and un-'doubted Image and express Likeness of that 'Noble Duke.

Socrates, Æsopus, Epictetus, Galba a great and excellent Captain of the Romans, all of deformed Stature.

Now, what can Malice extract out of this, to upbraid or stigmatize his Honour; if Men of blemish'd Persons may contain a Wise, Valiant, Learned, Liberal and Religious Soul, and be in every Part most absolute, exampled to us in many famous Men; and at our Home (as well in this present Age as in the more ancient) we have had Men of a harsh Fabrick, most nobly furnisht in the Compositures of their Minds.

But because these Cavils could not fetch Blood from him, they will make him guilty of other Men, and first of King Henry VI. whose Murther they say (and very favourably) his Brother Edward contrived, but wrought him to act it; an Accusation of very harsh Credit, that either King Edward, so truly noble and valiant a Prince, should put a Prince and his own Brother, upon so horrid a Thing, or he indure to hear it. Sir Thomas Moore holds King Edward would not engage his Brother in so butcherly an Office, there being many Reasons that he durst not, neither do his Adversaries charge him directly by any credible Author of that Time, † or discover by whom this Murther was; only the Prior of Croyland maketh it somewhat suspicious.

Chron. Croyland. Hoc tempore inventum est corpus regis Henrici sexti exanime in turre Londinarium. Parcat Deus, & spatium pœnitentiæ ei donet quicunque sacrilegas manus in Christum Domini ausus immittere, unde & agens tyranni & patiens glorioſi martyris titulum mereantur.

That is, "At this Time the Body of King "Henry VI. was found Dead in the Tower of "London. May God spare, and give time of "Repentance to him, who hath dared to lay "Sacrilegious Hands upon the Lord's Anointed, "whence the Actor hath merited the Title of "a Tyrant, as the Sufferer that of a Glorious "Martyr.

Tyrannus in the proper Construction, being Rex, for whosoever is Rex is Tyrannus, according to the ancient Signification; for amongst the Greeks Τύραννος was used for a King simply, good or bad, and this (some hold) makes against King Edward; Richard being Duke of Glouceſter then, yet so doubtfully as may be refelled by good Authority; for it is the Opinion of very grave Men, Henry VI. was not murther'd, but died of natural Sickness, and extream Infirmity of Body.

Idem Croyland. Rex Henricus sextus, ab annis jam multis ex accidente sibi ægritudine quandam animi incurreret infirmitatem, & sic æger corpore & impos mentis permansit diutius; i. e. "King Henry VI. for many Years, by reason of a Sickness which had "befaln him, had contracted a certain Weak-"ness of Mind, and so remain'd for a long time "both diseased in Body and distempered in "Mind. This consider'd with the Aggravation of his Grief and Sorrow, ‖ in the loss of his Crown and Liberty (being then a Prisoner) the Overthrow of all his Friends and Forces in the Battel of Tewkesbury, but (above all) the Death of his Son the Prince, might master a stronger Heart and Constitution than his, in a shorter time; which Opinion is receiv'd and alledged by a learned and discreet Gentleman. 1485.

Anonymus. M. S. The occasion of the Murther of King Henry VI. hath no other Proof but the malicious Affirmation of one Man; for many other Men more truly did suppose that he died of mere Grief and Melancholy, when he heard the Overthrow of his Cause and Friends, with the Slaughter of the Prince his Son: And Johannes Majerus saith it was reported, King Henry VI. died of Grief and Thought. Concerning the Slaughter of the Prince his only Son, it is noted to be casual, and made sudden by his own Insolence, not out of any pretended Malice or premeditated Treachery, and so it cannot be called Wilful Murther; for the King demanding him why he invaded his Kingdom, his Reply was, he might, and ought to do it, in defence and preservation of the Right, which the King his Father and his Heirs had in the Crown; and maintain'd this lofty Answer so peremptorily and boldly, the King in rage struck him with his Fist, (as some say armed with a Gantlet) and instantly the Noblemen attending, as George Duke of Clarence, Marques Dorset, the Lord Hastings and others, drew their Swords upon the Prince and killed him; which they would make the particular fact of Duke Richard.

Rex H. 6. in custodia ut alii referunt gladio, & alii mœrore periit, Joan. Majerus, Annal. Flandr. lib. 17. The Slaughter of the Pr. Son of H. 6.

Polidor. Virgil. lib. 24.

Chron. in quarto M. S. apud Dom. Regis. Rob. Cotton.

But to the contrary, I have seen in a faithful Manuscript Chronicle of those times, † That the Duke of Glouceſter only of all the great Persons, stood still and drew not his Sword; the Reasons to credit this are, first it might be in his mere Sense of Honour, seeing so many drawn upon him, there was no need of his, or in his respects to the Prince's Wife, who (as Johannes Majerus saith) was in the Room and near a-kin to the Dutchess of York his Mother, and to whom the Duke was also very Affectionate, (tho' secretly) which he soon after demonstrated in marrying her; nay, this Duke bore such a Sense of noble Actions in his Bosom, that misliking the obscure and mean Burial of Henry VI. this Prince's Father, he caus'd his Corps to be taken from Chertsey, and to be honourably convey'd to the Royal and Stately Chappel of Windsor, ordain'd for Kings.

Anna, uxor Ed. filii Reg. H. 6. capta est cum marito Joan. Majerus in Annal Fland. l. 17.

And Sir Thomas Moore saith further, He was suspected to have the contriving Part in the Duke of Clarence his Brother's Death, yet confesseth it was commonly said Richard opposed himself against the Unnatural Proceedings of the King, both privately and publickly; and the truth is, it was the King's own immoveable and inexplorable Doom who thought it justly and necessarily his due; for Clarence stood Guilty of many Treasons and great ones, and by

Richard not guilty of the D. of Clarence.

† Edward Hall writes, "Richard Duke of Glouceſter as the constant Fame ran, (to the intent that his Brother King "Edward might reign with more Surety) murder'd King Henry with a Dagger.
Sir Thomas Moore, "He slew with his own Hand King Henry VI. being Prisoner in the Tower, as was constantly said, "without Commandment or Knowledge of the King. Ibid.
The Lord Bacon, speaking of the Ignominy offer'd his Corps at Leiceſter, "No Man thought it unworthy Him who "had been the Executioner of King Hen. VI. that Innocent Prince with his own Hand. Reign of Hen. VII.
‖ This, says Holinshead, is recorded by some Persons altogether favouring the House of York.
† Edward Hall affirms he was murder'd by George Duke of Clarence, Richard Duke of Glouceſter, &c.
* The Lord Bacon says, He was the Contriver of the Death of the Duke of Clarence his Brother.

his

1485. his Ingratitude had ſo forfeited himſelf to the King's Diſpleaſure, that no Friend durſt move in his Behalf; this the King did afterward acknowledge with ſome Diſcontent, when his Wrath had cooled, as we may gueſs in this Expreſſion of his: O infælicem fratrem, pro cujus ſalute nemo homo rogavit; yet Polidor Virgil doth not rightly underſtand here as I conjecture by the Sequel; but let us interpret that a little, and take up another Accuſation which puts into the way.

Polidor. Virgil.

That Richard Duke of Glouceſter ſhould ſcandal the Birth of the King his Brother with Baſtardy, and alledge it for a ſpecial Matter in Dr. Shaw's Sermon, that he ſhould fame King Edward IV. a Baſtard, and that the Dutcheſs, his Mother had wanton familiarity with a certain Gentleman; this he might erroneouſly ſcatter in the Pulpit, and take it upon the like Intelligence, by which (in the ſame Sermon) he call'd her (to whom King Edward was betrothed before his Marriage with the Lady Grey) Elizabeth Lucy, whoſe Name was for a certain Ellenor Butler alias Talbot, ſo call'd by King Richard, and written in the Records.

Errour of Dr. Shaw.

That the Duke of Glouceſter raiſed not the ſlander againſt the Dutcheſs his Mother, nor of his Brother's Baſtardy.

This Drift had been too groſs for King Richard, to lay an Imputation of Whoredom upon his own Mother, (a Virtuous and Honourable Lady) being it caſt alſo a Shame and Baſtardy upon himſelf; for if ſhe offended in one, ſhe might as likely offend in another, and in the reſt.

And to quit him of it, Sir Thomas Moore, Richard Grafton, Mr. Hall, ſay that King Richard was much diſpleaſed with the Doctor, when he heard the Relation, which the Duke of Buckingham alſo affirmed in his Speech to the Lord Mayor of London. That Dr. Shaw had incurr'd the great diſpleaſure of the Protector for ſpeaking ſo diſhonourably of the Dutcheſs his Mother.

That he was able of his own knowledge to ſay, he had done wrong to the Protector therein, who was ever known to bear a reverend and filial Love unto her: and to cut off all farther Doubt and Queſtion, it was proved and is teſtified upon Records that George Duke of Clarence only rais'd this Slander in an extreme Hatred to the King his Brother, (many Jarrs falling between them) by which the King had a juſt cauſe to take notice of his Malice.

Viſus eſt dux Clarentiæ magis, ac magis a regis præſentia ſe ſubtrahere, in conſilio vix verbum proferre, neque libenter bibere aut manducare in domo Regis. i. e. "The Duke of Clarence was obſerved more and more to withdraw himſelf "from the Preſence and Converſation of the "King, to keep Silence in the Council, ſcarcely "uttering one Word, and willingly neither to "Eat nor Drink in the King's Houſe.

* Anno 10. Edward 4.

(a) Lib. M. S. in quarto. apud Dom. Rob. Cotton.

(b) Chronicle, Croyland.

(c) Loyalty bindeth Me. Father Allie. Quod vulgo & corrupte Father in Law dicitur.

When Richard even in that calamitous Time Henry VI. had overthrown King Edward in a Battel, * recover'd the Kingdom, and proclaim'd Edward an Uſurper; ſo faithful was his Brother, that (a) he was proclaim'd Traitor for him; and (b) when Queen Margaret beſieg'd the City of Glouceſter with the King's Power, the Citizens ſtood at defiance with her Army, and told her it was the Duke of Glouceſter's Town, who was with the King, and for the King, and for him they would hold it; his Loyalty bearing a moſt conſtant expreſſion in this Motto (c) Loualto me lie; which I have ſeen written by his own Hand and Subſcribed, Richard Glouceſter. The other was as conſtantly undermining at him, after confederated with the Earl of Warwick his Father Allie, who had turn'd Faith from the King, and went into France, ſolliciting for Force againſt England; which they brought in, fought with the King and overthrew him, and ſo fiercely purſuing the Victory, that the King was forc'd to fly out of the Land: Clarence not ſo ſatisfied, (unleſs he might utterly ſupplant him) ſtudied that Slander of Baſtardy, to bring in himſelf an Heir to the Crown, which was proved and given in expreſs Evidence againſt him, at his Trial and Attainder by Parliament, amongſt ſundry other Articles of High Treaſon. 1485.

Videlicet, That the ſaid Duke of Clarence had falſly and untruly Publiſh'd King Edward a Baſtard and not Legitimate to reign, that himſelf therefore was true Heir of the Kingdom, the Royalty and Crown belonging unto him, and to his Heirs; theſe be the very words of the Record, and enough to tell us who was the Author of that Slander, and what important Cauſe the King had to quit himſelf of Clarence: a bitter Proof of the old Proverb, fratrum inter ſe iræ acerbiſſimæ ſunt; and all the Favour Clarence could at his end obtain, was to chooſe it, (as John de Serres reporteth it) ſo that it was not the Duke of Glouceſter, but the King's implacable Diſpleaſure for his Malice and Treaſons that cut him off, who could not think himſelf ſecure whilſt he liv'd: Witneſs Polidor Virgil, Edvardus Rex poſt mortem fratris ſe a cunctis timeri animadvertit, & ipſe jam timebat neminem. That is, "King Edward the Sixth after his "Brother's Death, perceiv'd that he was feared "by all, and himſelf now feared no Man.

In Parliament, An. 17 Ed. 4. Ju. Stow, vidit & legit.

Eraſmus Chiliad.

Joan. de Serres Invent.

Next, for the Murther of the two Sons of King Edward IV. Edward V. King in hope, and Richard of Shrewsbury Duke of York and Norfolk his younger Brother, they alledge it in this manner.

Who made away the Sons of K. Edw. the Fourth.

That King Richard, being deſirous to rid thoſe two Princes his Nephews out of the World; imploy'd his truſty Servant John Green to Sir Robert Rrackenbury Lieutenant-Conſtable of the Tower, about the executing of this Murther; and by reaſon that Plot took no effect, (Sir Robert not liking it) the Protector ſuborn'd Four deſperate Villains, John Dighton, Miles Forreſt, James Tyrrell, and William Slater to undertake it, who, (as they further alledge) ſmother'd them in their Beds; which done, they made a deep Hole in the Ground, at the foot of the Stairs of their Lodging, and there buried them, hiding the place under an heap of Stones (not after the ancient manner of tumulus teſtis). Others vary from this, and ſay confidently, the Young Princes were Imbarked in a Ship at Tower-Wharff, and convey'd from thence to Sea, ſo caſt into the Black Deeps; others aver they were not Drown'd, but ſet ſafe on Shore beyond Seas. And thus their Stories and Relations are ſcatter'd in various Forms, their Accuſations differing in very many and material Points, which ſhakes the Credit of their Suggeſtion, and makes it both fabulous and uncertain, one giving the Lye to the other, their Malice having too much Tongue for their Memories, and is worth the noting how oppoſite (and as it were) ex Diametro repugnant they are.

In vulgus fama valuit filios Edwardi Regis aliquò terrarum partem migraſſe, atq; ita ſuperſtites eſſe. Polidor Virgil, l. 2. 6.

Thus Polidor, with which Dr. Morton and Sir Thomas Moore agree in one place: The Man (ſay they) commonly called Perkin Warbeck was as well with the Princes as with the People, Engliſh and Foreign, held to be the younger Son of Edward IV. and that the Deaths of the young King Edward and of Richard his Brother, had come

Dr. Morton, Sir Th. Moore.

1485. come so far in question, as some are yet in doubt whether they were destroy'd or no, in the days of King Richard; By which it appears they were thought to be living after his Death. And as the act of their Death is thus uncertainly disputed, so is the manner of it controverted.

For Sir Thomas Moore affirmeth (as before reported) they were smother'd in their Beds with Pillows; but Pollidor saith peremptorily it was never known of what kind of Death they dy'd.

Another Author, and more Ancient, agreeth with them.

Prior Croyland. Vulgatum est Regis Edwardi pueros concessisse in fata, sed quo genere interitus ignoratur; one reason of this may be that they who held Perkin Warbeck and Richard Duke of York to be all one, give another Account of his Death, whereas if it had been certain these four before named for Assassines had murder'd them, then the Place, Time and Manner had been easily known upon their strict Examination, they living freely and securely, (and without question) long after this Murder was said to be done. * Therefore there can be no Excuse for this Neglect of Examination, much less for the suffering such to go unpunish'd and at liberty, which methinks maketh much for the clearing of King Richard. 1485.

As for the burying of their Bodies in the Tower †, if that be brought in Question, certes, the Affirmative will be much more hard to prove than the Negative.

---

* Sir James Tyrrell when he had murder'd the two Young Princes, rode in great hast to King Richard, and shew'd him all the manner of the Murther. The King gave him great Thanks, and as some say, Knighted him. Sir Tho. More's Hist. Edw. V. and Rich. III.

The Lord Bacon affirms of King Richard, "He was the Murderer of his two Nephews (One of them his Lawful King "in the Present, and the Other in the Future failing of him.) Hen. VII.

Habington in his History of Edward IV. p. 229. writes, "His two Sons were Inhumanely murder'd, and as ob- "scurely Buried.

† The Truth of this Burial of the Princes is now past Dispute; since the Bones of them have of late Years been found. For when, in the time of Chichester Master of the Ordinance, great heaps of Records of Bills and Answers lying in the Six Clarks Office were removed thence, to be reposited in the White Tower, and a new Pair of Stairs were making into the Chappel there, for the easier Conveyance of them thither, the Labourers in digging at the foot of the old Stairs came to the Bones of consumed Corps, cover'd with an heap of Stones; the Proportion of the Bones being answerable to the Ages of these two Royal Youths. The News of this Discovery, being brought to K. Charles II. he was so well satisfy'd that these must be those Princes Bones, that he caused them to be translated, and decently and honourably interred in Henry the Seventh's Chappel among their Royal Ancestors, the Kings and Princes of this Land. And this Discovery that Time hath made, makes it very probable, that the bloody Part of this commonly received History is true. They are reposited near two other Royal Children, Mary and Sophia the Daughters of King James I. And the Monument for them made of white Marble hath this Inscription in Capital Letters, Viz.

H. S. S.

"RELIQUIÆ EDWARDI V^ti. Regis Angliæ, & RICHARDI Ducis Eboracensis.
"Hos fratres germanos turre Londinensi conclusos, injectisq; Culcitris suffocatos, abditè & inhonestè
"tumulari jussit Patruus RICHARDUS perfidus Regni prædo. Ossa desideratorum diu &
"multùm quæsita, post annos CXC & I. Scalarum in ruderibus, (Scalæ istæ ad Sacellum Turris
"Albæ nuper ducebant) altè defossa, indiciis certissimis sunt reperta XVII die Julii, Anno
"Dom. MDCLXXIIII. CAROLUS II. Rex Clementiss. acerbam sortem miseratus inter
"avita Monumenta Principibus infelicissimis Justa persolvit, Anno Dom. MDCLXXVIII.
"Annoq; Regni sui XXX. J. S.

And it adds a great Suspicion to K. Richard's Guilt of these Princes Bloods, that after the Queen Dowager had delivered her Son Duke Richard out of her own Custody, she still kept the Sanctuary in the Abby with her Daughters; and that for many Months after his Usurpation of the Crown. For there she was in the Month of March, which was Eight Months after, and could not as yet be perswaded to leave the Place. Which must needs be out of the Fear and Dread she had of K. Richard, and of some further Mischief to befall her and the rest of her Family. He in the mean time, thinking her Abiding here, might continue odious Reflections upon him from the People, laboured all he could to remove her thence. Insomuch that for her better Confidence and Satisfaction, I find in an Original Journal wherein the Transactions of his Reign are entred, that he solemnly Swore upon the Gospels, before an Assembly of Lords Spiritual and Temporal (as it seems in Parliament time) the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London present, That if she would come from Sanctuary, she should be provided for by an Honourable Allowance; and that her Daughters should have no harm done to their Persons, nor be put into the Tower, but that he would marry them to Gentlemen. And further he caused all this to be drawn up in a Form in perpetuam rei Memoriam: Which was to this Tenor;

"Memorandum, That I Richard by the Grace of God, King of England and of Fraunce, and Lord of Irland, in the "presence of you my Lordes Spirituell and Temporell, and the Maior and Aldermen of my Cite of London, promitte "and swere verbo Regis, upon these holy Evangelies of God by me personelly touched, that if the Doughters of Dame "Elizabeth Gray late calling her self Quene of England, that is to wit, Elizabeth, Cecill, Anne, Katerin, and Briggit, "woll come unto me out of the Sanctwarie of Westminster, and be guyded, ruled and demeaned after me; than I "shal see that they shal be in Suertie of their Lyffes; and also not suffre any maner hurt by any maner persone or "persones to them or any of them, in their Bodies and Persones, to be done, by wey of Ravishment or defouling, "contrarie to their Willes. Nor them, or any of them, emprisone within the Toure of London, or other prisonne; "but that I shal put them in honest places of good name and fame, and them honestly and curtesly shal see to be "founden and entreated; and to have al thynges requisite and necessary for their exhibicion, and findinges, as my "Kynneswomen: And that I shal do marie suche of them as now ben mariable to Gentilmen borne, and everiche "of them geve in mariage, Landes and Tenements, to the yerely valewe of CC Mark for terme of their Lyves; "and in likewise to the other doughters, when they come to lawful age of Mariage, if they lyff. And suche Gen- "tilmen as shal happen to marie with them, I shal straitly charge from tyme to tyme lovyngly to love and entreate "them as their Wiffes and my Kynneswomen, as they woll advoid and eschue my displeasur. And over this, that I "shal yerely from hensfurth content and pay, or cause to be contented and paied, for the Exhibicion and finding "of the same Dame Elizabeth Gray, during her natural liff, at four termes of the Yere, that is to wit, at Pasche, Mid- "somer, Mickilmesse, and Christenmesse, to John Nesfelde, one of the Squieres for my body, for his finding to attend "upon her, the Summe of DCC Mark of Lawful Money of England, by even porcions.

"And moreover I promitte to them, that if any surmyse or evyl report be made to me of them, or any of them, "by any persone or persones, that than I shal not geve therunto faith ne credence, nor therefore put them to any "maner ponishement, before that they, or any of them, so accused may be at their lawful Defence and answer. In "witnesse whereof to this Writing of my Othe and Promise aforesaid, in their said Presences made, I have set my "Signe Manuel, the first Day of March the first Yere of my Reigne.

It may also be taken notice of what extraordinary Gratifications the King granted to Tyrril, that common History reporteth to be the great Deviser, Procurer and Manager of this bloody Business, and to Brackenbury the Lieutenant of the Tower that was to conceal it. To this later were given the Manors of Mote Merden, Detling and Newenton, of Crawthorne, and Cokered, and other Lands in Romney Mershe; all the Lands and Tenements in the County of Kent, and elsewhere, lately belonging to the Earl Rivers, the Cheynies, and Walter Roberts, of the value of 117 l. 11 s. 4 d. And also the Manor of Mawdelyn near Berkhamsted in Bucks; And the Manor of Glassenbury, value 22 l. 5 s. 3 d. The King 1485. King appointed him also Receiver, for his Truth, Sadness and Discretion (as the Letters ran) of the King's Issues, Profits and Revenues of his Lordships of Middleton and Merden in Kent. He had also, with the Constableship of the Tower, the Office of Master and Operator of the Monies, and Keeper of the Exchange within the Tower during his Life. He had also the Keeping of the Lions, with the Fees. 1485.

Sir James Tyrril who was Knight of the King's Body, had the Office of Steward of the Lordships of Lanemtherry Lanthesant, Newport, Wenloke, and Kevoeth Meridith in Wales, and the Marches, for the term of Life; with the Wages, Fees, &c. accustomed, and to make Officers under him: He was also Chief Governor of Glamorganshire. He had also granted him (with one Richard Gold) the Ward and Marriage of Rob. Arundel Treryse, Son and Heir of John Arundel Treryse, Esq; with the Keeping of the Lands, Tenements and Manors, &c. during his Minority. He appointed him the Rule and guiding of the Castle of Guisnes: to have and occupy the said Charge during Pleasure, and in the Absence of the L. Mountjoy Lieutenant there. And a Commission was made to the Lieutenant, Coroner, Knights, Esquires and other Officers of the Shires of Glamorgan and Morgannok; to accept the same Sir James as their Governor and Leader, as he had been heretofore, notwithstanding the King sent him to Guisnes: and they to be ready with Horses and Harness and Money, for Men to attend upon his Deputies, to do the King's Service, when they should be called. This was dated in January, Anno 2do. The King also sent him to Flanders for divers Matters concerning greatly the King's Weal. As the King thus gratified him with Gifts, and honoured him with Places and Offices of Trust, so he kept him as much at a distance as he could. He put him in great Trust in Wales against the Duke of Buckingham, and the Disturbances there. Richard Vinors Esq; the Chamberlain of Carmarthen, had order to content him Wages for Sevenscore Soldiers, being of Sir James's Retinue; that is, to each after the Rate of 6 d. a Day: And to pay him 100 Mark Sterling, which he spent in the King's Service at his late being in those Parts by the King's Commandment. And lastly, I find him one of the Commissioners, with the Earl of Huntirgton, Morgan. Kidwelly, and others, to enter into all the Castles of the Principality of Wales, Earldom of March, and Dukedom of Buckingham, and other Traitors, in North and South Wales, and the Marches, and to seize all the said Traitors Goods and Castles. And a certain Livelihood in the Counties of Devon and Cornwal, being in Travers and Controversy, between Sir James Tyrril and Sir Tho. Arundel; who being now a Traitor, the King sends to Sir Piers S. Albyne, committing unto him full Power and Authority to seize and enter upon the said Livelihood and Appurtinences, to the use and behalf of the said Sir James his full trusty Knight.

John Grene, one of the Yeomen of the King's Chamber, commonly said to be the King's Messenger to Tyrril, to recommend this black Work to him, was made Receiver of the Lordship of the Isle of Wight, and of the Castle and Lordship of Portchestre.

John Dighton, Tyrril's Horse-Keeper, that is said actually to assist at the Smothering of the Princes, had, by the King's Gift, the Bailifship of Aiton in the County of Stafford, with the Wages accustomed, during his Life.

Further, it is a Circumstance that makes this King look like an Usurper, and one that came wrongfully to the Crown, that he was jealous of the Affection and Obedience of the People. Which appears in his altering the common Form of the Oath of Fealty: and in the room thereof requiring the Oath to be taken in these Words, Viz.

" I A. become true and feithful Liegeman unto my Soverein Lord Richard the Third by the Grace of God King " of England, &c. and to his Heirs Kings of England, and to him and them my feith and trouth shal bere during my life " natural; and with him and in his cause and quarrel, at al times shal take his part, and be redy to leve and dy ayenst " al earthly creatures; and utterly endevour me to the resistance and suppressing of his Enemies, Rebels and Traitors, " if I shal any know, to the uttermost of my Power; and nothing concele that in any wise may be hurting to his noble " and royal Persone. So God me help and these holy Evangelies. J. S.

For true it is, there was much diligent Search made for their Bodies in the Tower: All places open'd and digg'd that was suppos'd, but not found. Then it was given out a certain Priest took up their Bodies and buried them in another Secret place not to be found; hereunto (but with better Decorum for the more Credit of this Assertion) they might have added it was done sub sigillo confessionis, which may not be revealed.

Moore, Hollingshed, Grafton, Hall, Stow.

Sir Thomas Moore, seeing the Absurdities and Contrarieties of these Opinions, (as a Man puzzled and distracted with the Variety and Uncertainty thereof) concludeth their Bodies were bestow'd God wot where, and that it could never come to light what became of them; † Hall, Hollingshed, Grafton and the rest, confess, the very Truth hereof was never known: And (if there be a strict Inquiry into the Mystery) we shall discover, that they were neither buried in the Tower nor swallow'd in the Sea; for the Testimony and Relation of sundry grave and discreet Persons (and such as knew the young Duke of York) will resolve us how he was preserved and secretly convey'd into a foreign Country; also alive many Years after the Time of this Imaginary Murder; to which may be added strong Authorities having laid down some Conjectures that may Answer the Inquiry after the other. And first, whereas it is said the Lord Protector before his Coronation procur'd this Murder; to refel and contradict that, there be certain Proofs, that the Princes were both living in the Month of February following the Death of their Father, which was ten Months after; for King Edward died in April before, and this is plain in the Records of the Parliament of Anno 1 Rich. 3. where there is mention made of this Prince, as then living; and Sir Thomas Moore confesseth that they were living long after that time before said; But I conjecture Edward the eldest Brother liv'd not long after, but died of Sickness and Infirmity, being of a weak and sickly Disposition, as also was his Brother, which the Queen their Mother intimated in her Speech to the Cardinal Bourchier; and the weak Constitutions and short Lives of their Sisters may be a natural Proof to infer it probable enough this Prince died in the Tower; which some Men of these Times are the rather brought to think, certain Bones like to the Bones of a Child being found lately in a high desolate Turret, supposed to be the Bones of one of these Princes; Others are of Opinion it was the Carcass of an Ape kept in the Tower, that in his old Age had happen'd into that place to die in, and having clamber'd up thither, according to the light and idle manner of those wanton Animals, after when he would have gone down, seeing the Way to be steep and the Precipice so terrible, durst not adventure to descend, but for fear stay'd and starv'd himself; and although he might be soon miss'd and long sought for, yet was not easily to be found; that Turret heing reckon'd a vast and damn'd place for the height and hard access, nobody in many Years looking into it.

But it is of no great Consequence to our purpose, whether it were the Carcass of a Child or of an Ape, or whether this young Prince died in the Tower or no; for whereso'ever he died, why should it not be as probable he died of a natural Sickness and Infirmity, as for his young Cousin-german the Son and Heir of King Richard? many Reasons conducing why the qualities and kind of their Death might be the same, and near one Time, being even Parallels almost

† Philip de Commines in his 6th Book says, Il avoit fait Mourir les deux fills du Roi Edoard Son frere. He caus'd the two Sons of King Edward, his Brother, to be murder'd.

1485. almoſt, and in their Humane Conſtitutions and Corporal Habitude ſympathizing, of one Linage and Family, of one Blood and Age, of the ſame Quality and Fortune; therefore not unlikely of the ſame Studies, Affections, Paſſions, Diſtemperatures, ſo conſequently ſubject to the ſame Infirmities, to which may be added equal and common Conſtellations, the ſame compatient and commorient Fates and Times, and then there is Reaſon and Natural Cauſe they might both Die of like Diſeaſes and Infirmity, and were not Βιαθάναλοι, taken away by Violence, Secret, or Overt: For it may with as much Argument be ſuſpected the Son of King Richard, (being in the like Danger of ſecret Violence for the ſame Cauſe as his Couſin was) might ſuffer ſo.

But to open the Circumſtance a little nearer; What Danger could the Lives of thoſe two Princes be to Richard? who was accepted King by a juſt Title, and his Nephews declared Illegitimate by the High Court of Parliament, and whilſt they were reputed ſuch by ſo Great and General a Concluſion, why ſhould he be leſs Secure of them, than Henry II. was of Robert E. of Glouceſter, baſe Son to Henry I? or Richard I. of his baſe Brother Geoffrey Plantagenet? So although John of Gaunt left baſe Sons, aſpiring enough, yet they were of no Danger to the Lancaſtrian Kings; neither did Henry VII. or Henry VIII. ſtand in any Jealouſie of Arthur Plantagenet: And ſurely Richard III. was as Valiant, Wiſe and Confident as any of his Predeceſſors, and had as little Cauſe to dread his Nephews, as they ſtood adjudged, or be more Cruel and Bloody; neither hath my Reading found any Baſtards of France or Spain, who have aſpired ſo publickly, only except Don Eurique E. of Traſtamara, who was drawn into that Action by the violent Rages of the People, and by the Perſwaſions of the revolted States of Caſtile, to put down a Monſter of Sovereignty the hateful and cruel Tyrant Don Pedro. But being Sir Thomas Moore and our beſt Chroniclers make it doubtful, whether theſe two Princes were ſo loſt in King Richard's Time, or no, and infer that one of them was thought to be living many Years after his Death, that might be enough to acquit him; which Opinion I like the better, becauſe it mentioneth the Survivance but of one of them.

Neither do our moſt credible Stories mention the Tranſportation of more than one into Flanders, nor had they reaſon; it will be ſufficient if one of them ſurvived him, more or leſs time: We will follow therefore the Examination of his Story, under the Opinion of thoſe Times, and the Atteſtation of grave and credible Men, becauſe it will be more conſpicuous in the true and ſimple Narration of this one Brother; every Story being fraught with Reports concerning him, and few or none of his Brother, finding no mention of the Elder Brother's being in Flanders; but of the Younger's much, and of his other Adventures: The Prudent and Honorable Care of ſending away his younger Brother, by ſome is aſcribed to Sir Robert Brakenbury, by others to the Queen his Mother, and it may well be the Projection of them both, tho' no doubt there was the Advice and Aſſent of other well-affected Friends. And it is the more credible, the Queen wrought in it; for the Story of Sir Thomas Moore ſaith, ſhe was before ſuſpected to have had ſuch a Purpoſe, which was objected to her by ſome of the Lords; and the Cardinal Bourchier told her the main Reaſon which made the Protector and Nobles ſo urging to have him ſent to his Brother (being then in the Tower) was a Suſpicion and Fear they had ſhe would convey him forth of the Realm. 1485.

So then, it may be clearly ſuppos'd he was ſent into a foreign Country, and that Flanders (as all our Stories teſtify), there commended to a liberal Education, under the Curature of a worthy Gentleman in Warbeck, a Town in Flanders, but kept very privately all the Life-time of his Uncle, his Friends not daring to make him of the Counſel. After his Death, knowing Henry Richmond a cruel Enemy to the Houſe of York, for his better Safety was committed to the Care of † Charles of Burgundy; and his Dutcheſs the Lady Margaret Aunt to the Prince, as formerly the Dutcheſs of York, upon a like Cauſe of Fear and Jealouſy had ſent thither her two younger Sons George and Richard.

The Dutcheſs being very tender to let this young Duke have all Princely and Vertuous Education in Torney in Antwerp, and after in the Court of the Duke of Burgundy, as he had been in Warbeck, &c. And with the greater Circumſpection, becauſe the Dutcheſs of Burgundy had as jealous an Opinion of Henry VII. as the Queen Widow had of Richard III. Therefore, as yet, it was adviſed to conceal his Name and Quality: being not come to the Growth nor Age to have Experience in his own Affairs, much leſs to undertake an Attempt ſo Conſequent and Mighty as the Recovery of a Kingdom: Neither were the Times and Opportunity yet ripe or propitious, to faſhion ſuch an Alteration as was projected and muſt be produced, tho' there was pregnant Hope of an Induction to a Change of Government ſtirr'd by the King's Covetouſneſs and ſome Acts of Tyranny, Grievance and Rebellions in the North and Weſt Parts; not long after (which lent a ſeaſonable Hand to theſe Deſigns) great Unkindneſs fell out betwixt Charles the French King and Henry VII. who ſo far provok'd the French, that he beſieg'd Bulloign with a great Army by Land and Sea, the Quarrel was of good Advancement to the Dutcheſs of Burgundy's Plot, and brought the Duke of York better acquainted with foreign Princes and their Courts; who was ſent into France, into Portugal, and other Places, where he was receiv'd and entertain'd like a Prince. 1485.

In which time ſuch of the Engliſh Nobility as were intereſted in the Secret, and knew where this Prince reſided, found ſome Opportunity to give him Aſſiſtance; and ſent Sir Robert Clifford and Sir William Barley into Flanders, to give him a Viſit and Intelligence of what Noble Friends he had ready to Serve him: tho' their more particular Errand was, to take a ſtrict Obſervance of him, and ſuch private Marks as he had been known by from his Cradle: there had been ſome Counterfeits, encouraged to take upon them the Perſons of Edward E. of Warwick, and Richard Duke of York: But here the certainty of their Knowledge found him they look'd for, by his Face, Countenance, Lineaments and all Tokens familiarly and privately known to them; obſerving his Behaviour, naturaliz'd and heightned with a Princely grace, and in his Diſ-

† This is an Errour, Charles Duke of Burgundy died An. 1477. Six Years before Edward the Fourth, and Duke Richard was in England when his Father King Edward died.

1485. course able to give them a ready Account of many Paſſages he had heard or ſeen whilſt he was in England; with ſuch things as had been done and diſcourſed very privately, ſpeaking Engliſh very perfectly, and better than the Dutch or Walloniſh: By which Sir Robert Clifford and the reſt, found themſelves ſo well ſatisfied, and were ſo well confirm'd, that they wrote to the Lord Fitzwater, to Sir Simon Mountford, and others (who had a good Opinion towards him) the full account of what they had obſerv'd ex certa ſcientia, & ſupra viſum corporis. About this time (to intermix the Scene with more Variety, and fill the Stage) ſome principal Perſons, well affecting the Earl of Warwick, and hoping to get him forth of the Tower, (in purpoſe to make him King) had enticed a handſome young Fellow, one Lambert Simonel of Lancaſhire, bred in the Univerſity of Oxford to become his Counterfeit, and ſo inſtructed him in the Royal Genealogy, that he was able to ſay as he was taught; maintain'd and abetted, chiefly, by the Viſcount Lovel, the Earl of Lincoln, Sir Thomas Broughton, and Sir Simon Preiſt, &c. who being preſented to the Duke and Dutcheſs of Burgundy, and by them honourably entertain'd, drew to him in Flanders, one Martin Swartz, a Captain of very eminent Fame, and ſome Forces, with which he made over into Ireland, where they receiv'd him as Edward Earl of Warwick, as he was of many here at home: And when the Deceit was diſcover'd, the Excuſe was, Thoſe Lords but uſed this Counterfeit of the Earl for a Colour, whilſt they could get him out of the Tower to make him King. But the Veil is eaſily taken from the Face of ſuch Impoſtors, Examples giving us light in many; for tho' ſome Men may, all cannot be deceiv'd: So Pſuedo-Agrippa in the Time of Tiberius, was ſoon found to be Clemens the Servant of Agrippa, tho' very like to him; and Pſuedo-Nero in Otho's Time, who took upon him to be Nero reviv'd, was quickly unmask'd.

Dion, Tacitus, Suetonius. Counterfeit Princes.

Valerius Paterculus telleth of a certain ambitious Counterfeit in Macedonia, who call'd himſelf Philip, and would be reputed the next Heir of the Crown, but was diſcover'd and Nicknam'd Pſuedo-Philippus: Alſo in the Reign of Commodus One pretended to be Sextus Claudianus, the Son of Maximus; with many ſuch that are obvious in old Stories; and many of the like ſtamp have been here convicted in England; which bred the greater Jealouſy of this Richard, when he came firſt to be heard of; tho' thoſe Jealouſies proceeded not from the detection of any Fraud in him, but of the late Impoſture of the ſaid Lambert, the Shoemaker's Son, and the Abuſe of the Complotters; for the Kingdom having been abuſed with thoſe Pſeudo-Clarences, had reaſon to be doubtful of every unknown Perſon which aſſumed the name of Greatneſs; in regard whereof, many ſhrunk in their Opinions from this Perkin, or Richard; many others ſuſpecting their Belief, were very curious to inform themſelves, who the further they enquired, were the more confirm'd, that he was no other but the ſecond Son of Edward IV. againſt whom, thoſe of the harder Credulity, objected it as an Impoſſibility, that this young Duke cou'd be convey'd out of the Tower, ſo long, and ſo conceal'd; which the wiſer ſort could eaſily anſwer by many ancient Examples, which give us divers Relations of Noble Children preſerv'd more admirably. And this young Duke himſelf, in his own behalf, when ſuch Objections were made againſt him, did alledge to James King of Scotland, the Hiſtory of Joab, mention'd in the Book of the Kings, and that moſt ſpecial one of Moſes:

Its written by the old Hiſtorians that King Harold was not ſlain at the Battel of Haſtings by the Conquerors; but that he ſurvived and went to Jeruſalem, &c. But it not importeth whether he were the true Harold or Pſeudo-Harold; becauſe he never came to claim any thing in England.

Which the Dutcheſs his Aunt, Siſter German to his Father, was ſtrongly confirm'd in, giving him all anſwerable and honourable Accomodation; ſo did the chief Nobility of thoſe Parts, and as an Heir of the Houſe of York, there was render'd him the Title of La-Roſe-Blanch, the proper and ancient Device of the Houſe of York; withal, a gallant guard of Souldiers was allowed him for Attendance, and much was he favour'd by the Arch-Duke Maximilian, King of the Romans, by Philip his Son Duke of Burgundy, Charles the French King, the King of Portugal and Scotland, by the chiefeſt of Ireland, and many Perſonages in England, who at extreme Peril and Hazard, avow'd him to be the ſecond Son of Edward IV. 1485.

The Princes aforemention'd, readily ſupplying him with Coin and Aſſiſtance towards his Atchievements. King Henry actively apprehends what it threatned, and beſtirs himſelf to take off their Inclinations, diſpatching Dr. William Warkam (after Archbiſhop of Canterbury) with Sir Edward Poynings, a grave and worthy Knight, to under-rate his Credit with thoſe Princes; and ſuch ſtrong Perſwaſions were uſed, that Philip Duke of Burgundy (for his Father Maximilian was before return'd into Auſtria) utterly declines himſelf and his Subjects from his firſt Engagement, but excepted the Widow Dutcheſs of Burgundy, over whom he had no Power of Command, becauſe ſhe had all Juſtice and Juriſdiction in thoſe large Signiories, whereof her Dowry was compoſed.

The Practice of H. VII. with the Duke of Burgundy.

And thus Richard was ſupplanted here; what hope of Aid he had, or did expect by his Voyage into Portugal, I cannot ſay, tho' his Entertainment there was honourable: But by reaſon of the diſtance of the Country, it may be thought he was to build little upon any from thence, his chief Confidence and Refuge being in England and Ireland, where he had a good Party, and ſail'd with a pretty Fleet into Ireland; there he was welcom'd and receiv'd as the ſecond Son of King Edward; ſome of the Geraldins and other Great Lords in Ireland, purpoſing to make him their King: To overtake him betimes there too, Dr. Henry Deane, Abbot of Lanthory (a very wiſe able Man) was ſent and made Chancellor of Ireland; with him went the ſaid Sir Edw. Poynings, who ſo actively beſtir'd themſelves, that in ſhort time they drew the Iriſh from Perkin, ſo that now he muſt return Home; but by the Way, was encouraged to apply himſelf to James King of Scotland, whither forthwith he directs his Hopes, and found his Entertainment anſwerable to them; the King receiving him very nobly by his Title of Duke of York, calls him Cozen, with Promiſes to give him ſtrong Footing in England, and (in earneſt of his better Intents) beſtow'd in Marriage upon him the moſt noble and fair Lady Katharine Gordon his near Kinſwoman, Daughter of Alexander Earl of Huntly. This came home very ſharply to King Henry, who knew King James to be a Prince ſo wiſe and valiant, that no eaſy Deluſion cou'd abuſe him.

The Means uſed by H. VII. to prevent the Practices of Perkin in Ireland.

This Lady was ſo rarely fair and lovely that K. H. VII. wondred at her Beauty, and was enamour'd of her ſending her to London to be ſafely kept till his return out of the Weſt-Countries, where he then was and firſt ſaw her. ‖ K. Hen. was not of an amorous Complexion:

And true it is, King James was very preciſe in his Conſideration of this young Duke; but very clearly confirm'd before he would acknowledge him. King Henry is very ſtudious how to thwart the Event of this Scene and unfaſten the King, but caſts his Confidence again upon the fortune of his Judgment, and ſends many Proteſtations, with rich Promiſes to King James for Perkin (for ſo we ſhall now call him with the Times) which took ſmall effect at firſt; but King Henry (being a Man pregnant to find any Advantage, and One whoſe Providence would

1485. The Practice of H. VII. to the K. of Scots and of Castile to get or supplant Perkin.

wou'd not let it die) remembers the strong Affinity and Friendship betwixt King James and Ferdinando King of Castile, one of the most Noble Princes then living. At that time too, it happen'd so happily, there was a Treaty and Intelligence betwixt Henry VII. and Ferdinando, for proposition of a Marriage of Arthur the Prince of Wales and Katharine Daughter of King Ferdinando. This Occasion no sooner offer'd it self to his Consideration, but a Post was dispatch'd to Castile, with Letters and Instructions, to give the King to know what had pass'd between him and King James of Scotland, urging him to use the Power and Credit he had with him, for the Delivery of Perkin to himself: Which Ferdinando undertook, and sends Don Pedro Ayala (not one Peter Hialas, or Peter Hayles) as our vulgar Stories have (a wise and learned Man, and of a very Noble House) who so ably used his Brain in this Employment, that King James pass'd to him his Promise, to dismiss Perkin to his own Fortunes, but would by no means deliver him to the King.

Don Pedro Ayala.

Thus Perkin was again supplanted Virtute vel dolo, and of necessity driven into Ireland, where he was formerly receiv'd and entertain'd; Whilst they were agitating their first Plot of setling him King, Charles the French King sends to him Lois de Laques and Estiene Friant to offer him his Friendship and Aid: With this good News Perkin hasten'd into France, where he found his Welcome very honourable, as befitting a Prince, a Guard appointed to attend him, of which Monsieur Congre-Salle was Captain. Before this King Henry had threatned France with an Army, but now upon a better View and Deliberation, foreseeing what this had in it, he propounds very fair Conditions for a Peace with the French King, which the French King was willing to entertain, and so it was concluded. Perkin after this began to think the King shorten'd his Respects, and look'd upon him (as it were) but Imagine luscа, with half a Countenance; and fearing there might be some Capitulation in this new League, that might concern his Liberty, privately quits Paris, returning to his Aunt of Burgundy. Altho' Perkin was thus shorten'd in his Foreign Expectations, he had those both in England and Ireland, that much favour'd him and his Cause, making another Voyage into Ireland, but return'd with his first Comfort; for though they stood constantly affected and were willing, the King's Officers curb'd them so, they could not stir.

Hall in H. VII.

From Ireland he sail'd into England, landing at Bodmin in Cornwal, the Cornish and Western Men thereabouts receiving him very gladly, proclaiming him King of England and of France, &c. by the Title of Richard the Fourth (as he had been proclaim'd before in the North Parts of England, by the Council and Countenance of the King of Scots). Out of Cornwal he marches into Devonshire to Exeter, to which he laid Siege, having then about 5000 Men in his Army; but the King's being at hand and far stronger, he was forc'd to rise from the Siege; upon which those few Friends he had left (finding his Want, and the King with greater Strength approaching) forsook him to provide for themselves. Thus abandon'd, no way before him but Flight, and being well mounted, with a Train of some Forty or Fifty resolute Gentlemen, recovers the Abbey of Beanely in Hampshire, where he took Sanctuary, from which the King's Party who pursued him, wou'd violently have surprised him; Which the Abbot and Religious Persons wou'd not indure as a thing too foul against their Priviledge. The King after sends to him Proffers of Favours and Mercy, with Promises of such Honour and Condition as drew him to the Court, where the King look'd upon him with a very gracious and bountiful Usage as a Noble Person: But his prompting Jealousies and Fears soon cast a dulness over this first Favours and Promises; then a Guard must be set upon Perkin and his usual Freedom restrain'd: These were harsh Presages (he thought) which so justly moved his Suspicion and Discontent that he thought Sanctuary again must be his best Safety, and passing by the Monastery of Shrene, he suddenly slips into it from his Guard, whither the King sends unto him with Perswasions of the first courtly and honourable Tincture; but Perkin that had discern'd the Hook, was not easily to be tempted with the Bait this second time.

1485. Perkin's Entertainment in the Court.

Then the King dealt with the Prior for him, who would not yield him, but upon faithful promise from the King to use him with all Favour and Grace, which was protested, although Perkin no sooner came into his Power again but he was sent to the Tower, where his Imprisonment was made so hard and rude, that it much dejected and troubled him, oftentimes in private and with peircing Groans, having been heard to wish himself born the Son of any Peasant; and indeed, every one could tell he fared the worse for his Name, it being an Observation of those Times, that there was Three Men most fear'd of the King, Edward Plantagenet Earl of Warwick, Perkin, alias Richard Plantagenet, and Edmond de la Poole, Son of King Edward's Sister, all of the Family of York, but most of all Perkin, being of a more active Spirit, so more sensible of his Wrongs than the other, and cost the King more Consultation and Treasure in the working him into his Hands; therefore answerably aggravated his Miseries and Disgraces which now began to exceed; for he was not only sharply restrain'd in the Tower, but the Fame was the Question or * Gehenne was given him: † Sometimes he was taken forth and carried in most ignominious manner abroad to be set in the Pillory, otherwhile in the Stocks; after all these bitter and cruel Punishments (to pull down his Stomach) there was sent some unto him of purpose to perswade his Submission to the King's Mercy; and by renouncing his Blood, Birth and Title, to confess himself no other but Perkin Warbeck, the Son of a base Flemming; which he scorning and denying, his Sufferings were made more rigorous, and he lodg'd poorly and basely, as meanly fed, worse clad, until at length by Torments and Extremities he was forc'd to say any thing, and content to unsay what they would have him, to accuse himself by a forc'd Recantation of his Family, Name, and Royal Parentage; this must be compel'd too under his Hand, then to be brought by the Officers unto the most publick Places of London and Westminster, to suffer as before related, and with a loud Voice to read the same, which might pass at present with the Multitude for current, who knew not how it was forced from him; nor had Judgment enough to know and consider, that Racks and Tortures have made very able Men accuse themselves and others unjustly. Seneca telleth of a Man who being suspected of Theft, was inforced by Torture to confess the Theft and his Fellow Theives; but having none, he accused the good and just Cato, to avoid the Torture; nay, (which is a thing of more horror) it maketh Men by false Oaths to blaspheme God; therefore St. Augustine inveigheth sharply against the cruel Use of it, and amongst many other Sins which he findeth in it, this is one,

* Rack.
† The Ld. Verulam says he was only set in the Stocks.

The Force and Mischief of Torture.

1485. Augustin. in Civitate Dei.

Tortus si diutius volet sustinere Tormenta, quod non commisit, se commisisse dicit.

The tortured gladly doing this the sooner to exchange those Torments with Death, as the far less Pain.

And therefore this young Man may be excusable in what he did against himself, his Youth being ignorant of these high Points of Honour, and could not yet be confirm'd in any brave and firm Resolution, nor happily in Religion, and the worse also by the reason of his long Imprisonment and heavy Trouble, having no Counsel to strengthen him, nor so much as in Charity to comfort him, but left a miserable desperate forlorn Man, and fear'd to be so for ever, and at the best. And if learned grave Men, Men of Grace, having large Talents of Spirit and Science, for fear of such Punishments, have denied some chief Points of Christian Faith, yet have been excused for the Torture sake, (of which we have testimony in Ecclesiastical Stories) what may a tender and unexperienc'd Youth do? For which just Causes, the best Doctors of the Civil Law, and also of Theology, condemn and abhor the use of Torture, as having a further Mischief in it, and is Arcanum Gehennæ a secret of Torture or of Hell.

The French call Torture la Gebenne.

For when the Prisoner's Body by extreme Torment is brought into any mortal State or Symptom of Death, or made incurable and deadly, then to avoid the Imputation of Murder, the Prisoner by a short and private Process is condemn'd of some capital Crime, and presently executed, whilst there is yet some Life in him; and to that Censure Perkin at last came; for nothing could serve but his Blood, his Confession being only extorted from him to perswade the People he was an Impostor; and because they could not lay hold of his Life by the Course of Law or Justice (being not attainted nor condemn'd of any capital Crime). This Scruple being a little consider'd, there was found out a way to remove that, and Matter enough to make him guilty of a capital Offence: For which purpose it was devised there shou'd a practice of Escape be offer'd him; and because the Case of Edward Plantagenet Earl of Warwick was like unto his, and as well wish'd, being not attainted of any Crime, he also must desire to escape, that Device being the only matter of Guilt or capital Crime which was wanting, and might be (as it were) created for them the more colourably to effect their Executions; there not wanting Instruments for that purpose, to betray their innocent Confidence, whose Imprisonment had lain so heavily and cruelly upon them, that they were easily perswaded to catch at any hope of Liberty.

Some say the Earl of Warwick at his Arraignment was charg'd with perswading the other to make his Escape, but sure it is, they both gladly hearken'd to the Motion of it, and were soon after accused as guilty of Practice and Conspiracy to escape out of the Tower, so for the same arraign'd and condemn'd to Die; tho' great difference was put in their Process and Execution; for the Earl of Warwick was try'd by his Noble Peers, and had the Supplice of a Nobleman, in an honourable Place, the Tower of London: Perkin, alias Richard, by a Common Jury, who are Men (many times) of little Honesty, and to suffer at the common and infamous Place, Tyburn, by the Name of Perkin Warbeck, to confirm the People he was what they condemn'd him for: For his Nick-name was supposed to have utterly disnobled him, and (as it were) divested him of all his Noble Blood and Titles, the Condition of an Impostor serving best for a Cloak against that Purple Shower, which was at the Fall and Cruel Usage of this miserable Prince *.

York and Warwick Parallels.

It may be thought the Earl of Warwick had as shamefully suffer'd, if the Wit and Malice of the Cardinal could have reach'd to have made him a Counterfeit: But all Men knew, he was not only a true and certain Prince, but free from all Practice, (b) yet he was restrain'd of his Liberty, and a Prisoner the most part of his Life, from the time of his Father's Attainder until he suffer'd; this was after they had surviv'd King Richard their Uncle about Fifteen Years.

1485.

Now for their Offence, the learned Judges will tell us of what Nature and Quality it is call'd in Law.

Some holding an Escape to be but an Error, a natural dislike of Bondage, or a Forfeit of Simplicity, proceeding from a natural and very tolerable desire of Liberty, which Opinion is contingent to Right; and the Cause of these two Princes may also be the better receiv'd, if it be well consider'd, that this Plot of their Escape was not projected by themselves, but cunningly propounded to them by proper Instruments (being young and unexperienced) to entangle them in some capital Offence, and so of Death, of which kind of Offences they stood clear before, not once accused, having never been indicted or attainted of any thing Capital. Therefore now their Innocence must be made guilty; and in this I say no more than all our Historians or others say, who agree in one Opinion, That the King could not take away the Lives of Perkin Warbeck and the Earl of Warwick, until this Practice of their Escape was laid to them, and they made guilty thereof. Therefore they were not Traytors before, neither was Perkin now to be thought a Counterfeit, but a Prince of the Blood, claiming the Crown; for otherwise, he was Perkin of Flanders, a base Fellow and a most culpable and notorious Traytor; then what need they look further for a Crime to put him to Death? And if he were not a Traytor, surely it was a Tyranny to make, of an innocent and guiltless Man, a guilty Felon, and by Trains and Acts to forge an Offence out of nothing. For doubtless an innocent and true Man may seek Freedom, and purpose an Act of Escape, also commit it, and yet be still an Honest Man, and a Faithful Good Subject; for Nature and Reason teacheth and alloweth all Men to eschew Injuries and Oppression.

The French word Escape is to seek to be free; and the French Men translate Escape into the Latin Salvus, Escape what.

Besides this Practice of those Young Men, to escape, was found (as Polidore well observeth) Crimen Alienum, and not Crimen proprium; then how much greater was the wrong, to take away their Lives.

But however it may be laid upon them, it was nothing but a Desire of Liberty out of Durance, in which they were kept for a small, or no Offence.

---

* He openly read his Confession, and took it upon his Death to be true, that he was an Impostor. Ld. Verulam, Hen. VII.
Hollinshead relates, That He and John a Water, Mayor of Cork, took it on their Deaths to be true, what they had confest, and ask'd the King's Pardon.

(b) A notorious Falsity; He was Tried for endeavouring to escape with Perkin, and to raise Sedition and destroy the King; to which Indictment he pleaded guilty. Ld. Verulam Hen. VII.

The

1485. The Civil Law holdeth Suspicion of Flight or Escape to be no Crime. Suspicio fugæ quia, non solet detrimentum, reipublicæ adferre, non censetur crimen; so Ulpian. And by the Laws of England, if a Prisoner do escape, who is not imprison'd for Treason or Felony, but some lesser Fault of Trespass, according to the Old Law of England.

Fust. Stanford in pleas de la Corone, lib. 1. cap. 26. 27.

Escapæ non adjudicabitur versus eum, qui Commissus est Prisonæ, pro transgressione. Escape shall not be adjudged for Felony or other Crime, in one who is committed for Trespass.

For the Offence of the Escape is made in the Common Law, to be of the same Nature and Guilt with the Crime whereof the Prisoner is attainted: And certainly, neither the Earl of Warwick, nor Richard, alias Perkin were attainted of Treason or Felony, &c. before.

But to close this Dispute and Tragedy, not long after, some of the Instruments that betray'd them into this, as Walter Blunt, Thomas Astwood, Servants to the Lieutenant of the Tower, finished at Tiburn, because they should tell no Tales.

And to this succinct Relation, there can be no better Testimony than the Hands of those Witnesses, who have seal'd their Confession and Knowledge with their Bloods: Men of all Conditions and Estates, all maintaining at the last Gasp, that Perkin was the true Duke of York; whose Affirmations I will produce, give me but leave, by the way, to answer one Objection or Cavil brought against this Duke, call'd in scorn Perkin Warbeck. A new Writer affirming him to be an Impostor, whose Learning may be as much mistaken in this as other things, tho' he laid a great pretence to Knowledge, especially in the History of England and other Countries. Indeed his Judgment and Reading are much expresst alike in his Pamphlet, which he calls [The History of Perkin Warbeck,] wherein he forfeits all his Skill, to make him a Parallel in adverse Fortune and supposed base Quality, to the unhappy Don Sabastian late King of Portugal, who he also protests an Impostor. And to arrive at this huge Knowledge, he wou'd have us think, he took much pains in the sifting of Authors; and indeed I think he did sift them, concerning his Ignorance in the Case of Don Sebastian (if he be not too wise to be inform'd) I will urge some Reasons on Don Sebastian's side, who was King of Portugal; and invading the Kingdom of Barbary, Anno Dom. 1584, was overthrown in a fierce and bloody Battel in the Fields of Alcazer, by the King of Morocco, where it was thought he was slain, but escaped and fled secretly traverstite or disguised; traveling in that manner through many parts of Africa and Asia some Thirty Years; in which Time and Travel he suffer'd much, liv'd in Captivity and Misery, but at last got away into Europe, with purpose to have got into Portugal (if possible) to repossess the Kingdom.

Whether Don Sebastian of Portugal were a Counterfeitor not.

In his Return he came to Venice, there discover'd himself, and desires aid of the Venetian States: They entertain'd him as a Prince distress'd, gave him Good Words, but durst not lend him Assistance, fearing the King of Spain; yet the chief Senators and many of the wisest of the Signiory made no doubt of him.

Among them Signieur Lorenzo Justiniano of the Senators Order (a Man of wise and great Abilities) was appointed by the States, a Commissioner (with others) to hear and examine this Cause of Don Sabastian, in which they took much
162. pains. And this Signieur Lorenzo (being lieger Ambassador in England) affirm'd and protested solemnly, he and all the other Commissioners were clear and very confident he was Don Sebastian King of Portugal, notwithstanding they durst not give him Aid, but counsel'd him for France, where the King favour'd right, without fear of another's Displeasure. But taking Florence in his way, in the Habit of a Fryer, he was observ'd and discover'd by some Spies which the Grand Duke of Tuscany had set upon him from Venice; who to insinuate with the King of Spain, Philip the Second, and for some other commodious Considerations, deliver'd Sebastian to the Governour of Orbattello (a Spanish Port in Tuscany) from thence sent him by Sea to the Count De la Mos, Vice-roy of Naples, who convey'd him into Spain: There for a while his Entertainment was no better than in the Gallies: What other Welcome he had I know not, but the fame went certainly he was secretly made away after Philip the Third was King. The said Vice-roy of Naples confess'd in secret to a Friend of his, he verily believ'd his Prisoner was the true Sebastian King of Portugal; and was induced to be of that opinion, by the strong Testimonies and many strange and peculiar Marks, which some honourable Portugueses did know him by, all found about the Body of this Sabastian. And the French King Henry IV. it should seem, was perswaded no less: For when the News was told him the Duke of Florence had sent this Sebastian to the King of Spain, he told the Queen what an Ill Deed her Uncle had done, in these words, Nostre Uncle a fait un act fort indigne de sa Persone.

1485. Hic legatus hæc domino Baroni Darcey retulit.

Dr. Stephen de Sampugo, in a Letter to Joseph Texere, Counsellor and Almoner to the most Christian King, writes thus, "The King, Don "Sebastian, is here in Venice, &c. So soon as he "arriv'd here (where he hoped to find support) "the Ambassador of Castile persecuted him ve"ry cruelly, perswading the Signiory that he "was a Calabrois, &c. I swear to your Father"hood, By the Passion of Jesus Christ, this "Man is truly the King Don Sebastian; he hath "all the Marks on his Body, without failing in "any one, as he had in his Infancy, only the "Wounds excepted, which he receiv'd in that "Battel of Africk; he gives the reason of his "Life, and account of all his Passages, &c. He "is known and re-known by the Conciergres, by "the Judges, by the greater part of the Senate, "and by his own Confessor, &c. and a great deal more of him upon Knowledge he justifies: As much witnesses John de Castro Son to Don De Alvaro de Castro, one of the Four Governours that ruled the Kingdom conjunctly with the King Don Sebastian, who in his Letter to the same Man says thus; "The King Don Seba"stian (whom the Enemies call a Calabrois) is "the very same which is detain'd here, as cer"tainly as you are Fryer Joseph, and my self "Don John. He departed alive from the "Battel, but very sore wounded; GOD "having so delivered him with some other of "his Company, amongst whom was the Duke "Anegro, &c. As for the Exterior Marks of his "Body he wants not one of them; he is wound"ed on the Brow of the Right Eye, and on the "Head, as many witness'd when they saw him "in the Africk Battel: His Hand-writing is "still the same, observing the very same Me"thod, as is very well remembred by divers.

There might be much more instanced in the behalf of this Sebastian, but this may serve for better Intelligence; to whom I may add, That Men experienced in the Affairs and Policy of State, know it a rare thing to find in any History, 1485. story, the Examples of a Prince, being seiz'd and possess'd of any Signiory or Principality (how unlawfully soever) who hath resign'd them, or any part to the true Heirs. Have we not Instances at Home, where the Son hath taken the Kingdom from the Father, and would not let it go again, but rather endeavour'd to haste his Father's Fate? Much after that manner, when Henry Duke of Lancaster had got the Kingdom, he held it and would not resign to the Right Heir Richard the Second, nor after his Death to the Earl of March, tho' these were no Impostors, neither was Edward Earl of Warwick; yet King Henry would not let his Hold go: And the Cardinal Favourite, finding he could not compass his Aims one way, contrived it another. By the Machiavilian Advice he gave to Ferdinand K. of Castile, not to conclude the Treaty of the Marriage between Prince Arthur and his Daughter Katharine, until this Earl and Perkin were disposed of, which Ferdinando follow'd and urg'd the King, pretending it the Security of his Estate and Issue. In brief, it is not possible to perswade a Private Man, tho' wrongfully possess'd to acknowledge the true Proprietary hath a better Title than he.

Edw. II. and Edw. III.

How unjustly have the Kings of Spain detain'd sundry Signiories and Principalities from the lawful Heirs? Yet if the Wrong done by such another disseising Lord, be put to this former Usurper, Mala fide (as the Imperial Jurisconsults will term him) his Sentence will be, Such a rapinous Prince doth wrong.

But let us now take a more particular View of those Witnesses who stood for Perkin. And having formerly mention'd Sir Robert Clifford, a Knight of the Noble Family of the Barons Cliffords, I will proceed with that which may be the more remarkable in him, because he was of a Family that long hated the House of York, from the Battel of Wakefield, when and where they resolved an Enmity so deadly, as was not to be reconciled or satisfied whilst one of them remained; yet became Followers again of the White Rose Family; and this Robert Clifford served King Edward very near, and in good Credit, so could not but have an assured Knowledge of the King's Sons; and was therefore the more particularly sent to certify his Knowledge; who certainly affirm'd him to be the younger Son of Edward IV. and confirm'd many with him; such as had likewise served King Edward, and had been acquainted with the Prince's conveying beyond Sea, though much was done to alter Sir Robert's Opinion. The Lord Fitz-Walter was of the same Belief, and avow'd Perkin the true D. of York most constantly unto Death: As resolute was Sir William Stanley, though he were Ld. Chamberlain to Henry VII. and in great favour; with Sir George Nevill, Brother to the Earl of Westmorland, Sir Simon Mountford, Sir William Daubeny, Father to the Lord Daubeny, Sir Thomas Thwaits, Sir Robert Ratcliffe of the House of the Baron Fitz-Walter, Sir John Taylor, Sir Thomas Chaloner, Thomas Bagnal, with many other Gentlemen of Quality, all maintaining him to be the Duke of York, Son of Edward the Fourth, and sundry of the Clergy, who had been Chaplains to the King his Father, or otherwise occasion'd to attend the Court, as Dr. Rochford, Dr. Poynes, Dr. Sutton, Dr. Worsley Dean of St. Paul's, Dr. Leyborn, Dr. Lesly, with many other learned Professors of Divinity, who would not endure to hear him call'd Perkin. The Lord * Fitz-Water, Sir William Stanley, Sir Simon Mountford, Sir Robert Ratcliff, Sir William Daubeny (as Martyrs of State) confirm'd their Testimony with their Bloods. So did the King's Serjeant Ferrier, who left the King's Service and apply'd himself to Perkin, for which he was executed as a Traytor: And one Edwards, who had served this Duke Richard, was cut in pieces for the same Cause; also Corbet, Sir Quinton Betts, and Gage, Gentlemen of good worth, with 200 more at least, put to Death in sundry Cities and Towns, particularly in Kent, Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk, and about London, for their Confidence and Opinions in this Prince. 1485.

Moor, Hollinshead, Stow, Gainsford.

Idem Autor.

* He was the Noble Progenitor of the Earls of York.

There were some Great Men (tho' they made no profession of their Knowledge of him) cou'd whisper it one to another, which in general words is confess'd by all our better Writers; who say, That as well the Noblemen, as others, held the said Perkin to be the younger Son of K. Edward the Fourth. Hollingsh. Grafton, Hall, Stow.

And Sir Thomas Moor, after Dr. Morton, thus writeth; The Man, commonly call'd Perkin Warbeck, was as well with the Prince, as with the People, held to be the younger Son of K. Edward the Fourth. John Morton, Thom. Moor, Grafton.

Richard Grafton affirmeth the same; In Flanders (saith he) and most of all here in England, it was receiv'd for an undoubted Truth, not only of the People, but of the Nobles, that Perkin was the Son of King Edward the Fourth: And they all swore and affirmed this to be true. The learned and famous Mr. Cambden averreth, There were many wise, grave, and Persons of good Intelligence, (who lived in that Time and near it) that affirmed confidently, This Perkin was Second Son to King Edward: Then both the Brothers were not made away by King Richard; and surely it was little Reason or Policy, to cut off the One and spare the other; neither indeed was there ever any Proofs made by Testimony, Argument, or Presumption, nor by Reason, Honour, or Policy, that this Crime could be his, tho' many to the contrary; for he not only preserv'd his Nephew, the young Earl of Warwick, but in his Confidence (a special Note of his Magnanimity) gave him Liberty, Pleasure, and the Command of a stately House of his own. Mr. Will. Cambden.

Now if he had been so ambitious and bloody, he would have provided otherwise for him, knowing his Title was to take Place, if his Blood had not been attainted in his Father; in regard whereof, K. Richard, when his own Son was dead, caused his Nephew John de la Poole, eldest Son of the Duke of Suffolk, and of the Dutchess his Sister, (then the next lawful Heir to the Crown) to be proclaim'd Heir apparent; an Argument of Respect to his Kindred and next Title to the Crown, in whomsoever it was; which other Men regarded not so much as the unhappy Sequel shew'd; and there was an impious Necessity in that, for whilst the Prince of York surviv'd, (especially the Males) no other Titular Lord, or Pretender, could be King by his own Right, or by colour of Right, nor by any other Means, unless he had married a Daughter, and the eldest Daughter of King Edward the Fourth. Some think he died unnaturally.

And altho' the Deaths and Manner of taking away these Princes (the Sons of King Edward) is held, by our Writers, uncertain and obscure, it is manifest (at least for the general Manner of their Death) to be either by the Publick Sword, that is, the Sword of Justice or of Battel, as were King Richard, the Children of the Duke of Clarence and the Duke of Suffolk, &c. or by the Private Sword; that is, by secret and close Slights, Treachery, (which the Romans call'd Insidiæ dolus) by Smothering, Strangling, Poison, Sorcery, &c. And that the Sword was used against the Family of York, there is more than Con- Publick Sword. Private Sword. The Arts of Treachery.

1485. Conjecture, both by Testimony of Writers and Records, King Edward himself, (as credible Authors report) died of Poison.

In the Parliament, Anno 1 Richardi Tertii, there was accused and attainted of Sorcery and such other Devilish Practices, Dr. Lewis, Dr. Morton, William Knevit of Buckingham, the Countess of Richmond, Thomas Nandick of Cambridge, Conjurer, with others: There was also an Earl accused of the same Hellish Art; and an old Manuscript Book which I have seen, says, That Dr. Morton and a certain Countess, contriving the Death of King Edward and others, resolv'd it by Poison. Which are Conjectures and Proofs more positive and strong against them, than any they have against King Richard; but it was a great Neglect in their Malice, making King Richard so politick and treacherous as they did, not to charge him also with these Prince's Sisters; for it would not serve his Turn, to rid away the Brothers and not them, who were capable of the Crown, and had their Turn Royal before any Collateral Males. Then he had the Children of his elder Brother George Duke of Clarence, Edward Plantagenet Earl of Warwick, and the Lady Margaret his Sister, after Countess of Salisbury, to make away; for they without their Father's Corruption of Blood (which might easily have been salved by Parliament, the Lords and Commons affecting them) had a Priority of Blood and Precedency of Title before the Protector.

Reasons why King Richard should not destroy his Nephews.

I would ask the Reason too, Why King Richard might not endure his Nephews (being by Parliament held and adjudged Illegitimate) as well as the Kings Henry VII. and Henry VIII. endured Arthur Plantagenet, the Bastard of the same King Edward their Natales and Cases being alike; or why Sir Thomas Moor and Dr. Morton, should in one place say, It was held in doubt, when, or how they were made away; and in another place to aver, That Tyrrel and Dighton, being examin'd, confess'd plainly, the Murther of them and all the Manner of it.

These be Contraries, which with a great Disadvantage, draws their Allegation into another Argument, Bicorne, or Crocodilites: For in revealing the Confession of these Men, it is implicatively granted, their Fault was not then to be punish'd, and so it appears no Fault, or not worth the consideration; the Confession of a Man being the greatest Evidence can be produced against him. Then, in regard the Confession of those was such as might not be open'd, nor the Crime call'd in question (as the same Authors acknowledge) it was but a feign'd Confession, and they had done better not to have mention'd such a thing, which begot but a Jealousy in the Falsity thereof, or privity of some Great Ones in it, and a just imputation of Injustice upon the Magistracy: For if Dighton, Tyrrel, Forest and Slater confess the Murder in Act and Manner, King Richard being dead (who was said to subborn and protect 'em) necessarily, and in due course of Justice, (especially in the Act of so high a nature and notice as this was) the Punishment should have been expected with all extremity. But being for some unknown Causes deferr'd, and after a while quite omitted and pardon'd, it may be thought such strange Clemency and Impunity proceeded from a singular high Indulgence, or else, those Examinations and Confessions were but Buzzes and quaint Devices to amaze the People, and entertain them with expectation of a Justice, to be done in some more convenient time (which was never). This was after the Death of King Richard: All that was done before, was to make him the Author of that horrible Crime, and no Body else; for Dighton and the rest were in Security and Liberty, yet it stood in good stead with the Lancastrians, to draw the Peoples Hate upon King Richard; not unlike that Story of Great Alexander; and a Noble Man in his Court, who stood so high in the Favour of his Nobles and People, that the King grew jealous and fearful of his Popularity, studying how he might decline it and him to Contempt, but could find no Colour or apt Occasion, because he was so strongly fix'd in the Peoples Liking, and was a Man of so great a Desert that no Crime could be charg'd upon him. The King unbosoming himself to the Counsel and Care of a Friend, one Medius, (of his Country, as I think) had this Advice,

1485.

Other Great Ones privy to the Deaths of those Princes, especially of K. Edward's Sons.

" Sir, (quoth he) Let not this Man's Great-
" ness trouble you, cause him to be accused of " some Heinous Crime, (tho' falsly) and we will " find Means to make him guilty, so formally
" and firmly, that the Brand of it shall stick
" upon him for ever; Which he delivered in these Terms, tho' divers, yet the same in effect; Medeatur licet vulneri, qui morsus, aut dilaniatus est, remanebit tamen Cicatrix. And it is truly approved by an ancient Christian Poet, thus;

Paulum distare videntur,
Suspecti verèque rei. Ausonius.

The guilty and suspected Innocent,
In Men's Esteem are little different.

For there is no more dangerous or fatal Destiny to Greatness, than to be intangled in the Multitude's Contempt, Odium & Contemptus, being the Two Evils that overthrow Kings and Kingdoms; the One, that is, Contempt, proceeding from the Vanity and Obstinacy of the Prince, the Other, from the Peoples Opinion of him and his Vices, and then he must neither reign nor live any longer. Ennius said with Cicero, Quem oderunt perisse expetunt: And so all that was practised upon the Fortune, Fame and Person of King Richard was by this Rule; (tho' in the Judgment and Equity of the most knowing in those Times) their cunning Translatio Criminis could take no Hold of him; neither appears it probable, that the Earl of Richmond himself (when he had got all Justice and Power in his Hand) did hold King Richard guilty of the Murther and Subornation of those Fellows, nor them the Assassins: For doubtless then, being so Wise and Religious a Prince, he would have done all Right to the Laws Divine and Humane, and that, I believe, in the extreamest and publickest way of Punishment, to make it more satisfactory and terrible to the People and Times: But they freely enjoy'd their Liberty with Security to natural Deaths, without any Question or Apprehension, Tyrrel excepted, who suffer'd for Treason not long after committed by him against King Henry himself. Neither was John Green (named a Party in this Murther) ever call'd in question; nor do the Historians of those Times (tho' mere Temporizers) charge him with this Practice against his Nephews, until after his Coronation, (some say, they surviv'd King Richard) and giving this respite of time, there was no Cause, why after that he should make them away, being then secure in his Throne and Title, and they long before pronounced uncapable; First, by the Ecclesiastical Judges, then by the Barons and Parliament: And where was the cause

Ennius apud Ciceronem Offic. lib. 2.

Sir Thomas Moor, Edw. Hall, Ralph Hollinshead, Joh. Stow, &c.

1485. cauſe of fear? But if King Richard had been of that bloody Conſtitution, the Man whoſe Life could be moſt prejudicial unto him was the Earl of Warwick lawful Son of George Plantagenet Duke of Clarence, Elder Brother to King Richard: Now there was a Neceſſity for the Lancaſtrian Faction (if they muſt have a King of that Family) to take thoſe Princes away; not to leave King Richard or his Son, nor yet any Legitimate Iſſue of Lancaſter, for all thoſe were before any of the Houſe of Beauforts, in the true order of Succeſſion, and ſtood in their way; ſo did the Progeny of Brotherton, of Woodſtock, of both the Clarences, Glouceſter, &c. Tho' they fear'd few, or none of thoſe Titular Lords, being modeſt Men, not affecting Sovereignty, but content with their own private Fate and feudal Eſtate, when all was one with the Lancaſtrians, who were ſo vehement in their royal Approaches, that beſides King Edward IV. and his two Sons, King Richard and his Son, the Prince of Wales, there was afterward (and as occaſion ſerved) The Earl of Warwick and Duke of Suffolk, and others, both Male and Female of that Princely Family, laid in their cold Urns, and it muſt be ſo, elſe there could be no place for the Beauforts and Somerſets, their turns being laſt (the Kings of Portugal, of Caſtile, and other being before them, if not excluded by Act of Parliament.)

In this Tragedy there was a Scene acted by John de Vere Earl of Oxenford, which may be worthy of our Obſervation for Example ſake, and makes not againſt the cauſe of Perkin.

The E. of Oxon Perſecutor of Perkin.

This Earl of Oxenford much affected and devoted to King Henry VII. was a great Enemy to this Richard (alias Perkin) and I think the only † Enemy he had of the great Nobility, how this diſlike grew I cannot ſay, whether out of Ignorance or Incredulity, or out of Malice, hating King Edward, and all that had a near Relation to that Family, or elſe to apply himſelf to the Honour of the King; but he and the Cardinal are ſaid to be the chief Urgers of Perkins Diſpatch, and he, being High Conſtable, pronounced the Sentence againſt the young Earl of Warwick, (which much diſtaſted the Country) and near to Heveningham Caſtle, (that was his chiefeſt Seat) there lived in the Woods an old Hermit (a very Devout and Holy Man as the Fame of thoſe Times admit him) who ſeem'd much troubled to hear this News, for the love he bare to the ancient and noble Family of Oxenford, of much Anguiſh of Spirit, ſaying, the Earl and his Houſe would repent, and rue that guilty and bloody Purſuit of the innocent Princes; for the Event of which Phrophecy this hath been obſerv'd.

(a) This Earl John died Anno 4 H. 8. 1512. Dominus de Arundel viva voce.

Not long after, the Earl was arreſted for an Offence ſo ſmall, that no Man (conſidering his Merit and Credit with the King) could have thought it worth the Queſtion, for which he was Fined at Thirty thouſand Pounds, (in thoſe days a Kingly Sum) (a) after this he liv'd many Years in great Diſcontent, and died without Iſſue, or any Child lawfully begotten by him, and in much ſhorter time than his Life-time, that great and (b) ſtately Earldom of Oxenford, with the opulent and Princely Patrimony, was utterly diſſipated, and como ſal in agna (as the Spaniard ſaith in the Refran) yet this Earl was a very Wiſe, Magnificent, Learned and Religious Man in the Eſtimation of all that knew him, and one more like to raiſe, and acquire a new Earldom. (c) But it thus fell and was waſted, the Caſtles and Mannors dilapidated, the Chappel wherein this John de Vere and all his Anceſtors lay Intomb'd with their Monuments quite defaced to the Ground, their Bones left under the open Air in the Fields, and all this within leſs than Threeſcore Years after the Death of the ſaid Earl John. About the ſame time theſe unhappy Gentlemen ſuffer'd, there was a baſe (d) Son of King Richard III. made away, having been kept long before in Priſon. The Occaſion as it ſeemeth, was the Attempt of certain Iriſh-men of the Weſt and South Parts, who would have got him into their Power and made him their Chief; being ſtrongly affected to any of the Houſe of York, were they Legitimate or Natural, for Richard Duke of York's Sake, ſometimes their Viceroy: And thus much in brief of that.

(b) I may call it a ſtately Earldom, for the E. of Oxenford, when he came to the poſſeſſion of it, was offered by ſome 12000 l. per Ann. and leave to his Occupation all Mannors, Houſes, Caſtles, Parks Woods, Forreſts, and all the Demeſn Lands thereto belonging, which might be more worth by yearly value than many Earldoms in this Age.

1485.

(c) The Mathematicians that calculated the Nativity of this Earl Edward, told the Earl his Father, that the Earldom would fall in his Sons time.

(d) Baſtards of K. Richard. Grafton & Chron. MS. in quarto apud Dn. Rob. Cotton.

(e) Now to reſolve a Queſtion, why the King deferred ſo long the Death and Execution of the Earl of Warwick and Perkin, and took ſo much deliberation after he had reſolved it; one Reaſon and the chiefeſt brought by ſome, is, That in regard Perkin was an Alien, and in the Allegiance of a foreign Prince, therefore he could not be Condemned, nor executed for Felony, nor Treaſon by our Laws: which is a ridiculous Evaſion, for we have frequent Examples in our Stories, That the natural Subjects of France, of Scotland, Spain, Portugal, Germany, and Italy, have had Judgment and Execution by our Laws, for Felony and Treaſon, as Peter de Gaveſton a Frenchman, Sir Andrew Harcley a Scot, and lately Dr. Lopez a Portugal; therefore apparently that was not the Cauſe the King ſo doubtfully, and (as it were) timerouſly deferred their Arraignments and Executions. The Heathens perhaps would have defined it ſome inward Awe or conceal'd Scruple, ſuch as they call'd Eumenides and Erynnies, and believ'd haunted thoſe Men that had purpos'd or acted a Wickedneſs: Upon which the Poet ſaid well:

(e) Why the Publick Juſtice deferred the Death of the Princes.

Dæmones Genii.

——Patiturque unos mens ſaucia Manes.

And aſſign'd to every Man his protecting Spirit, whom the Greeks call'd Dæmones, the Latines Genios; concluding, that when the Genius of him againſt whom the Miſchief aims, is Stronger and more Active than his who is to act it, there the Plot hardly taketh Effect.

For example, Produce the mortal Enmity between Octavianus Cæſar and M. Antonius, in which Anthony could never prevail by any Attempt; who conſulting with his Soothſayers, they give the reaſon to be the power of Octavianus's Genius above his. It is reported the great Philoſopher Apollonius had ſuch a ſecret Protection and ſo ſtrong, that the Emperor Domitian had no power over his Life, tho' he ſtudied means to take it; Suidas adding that this Philoſopher in confidence of his Genius when he left the Emperor, added this Verſe,

Plutarch in Anton.

Philoſtrat. in vita Apollon.

Οὐ μεν με κλανεις, ἐπει ἄτοι μοιρημος εἰμι.

Me non occides quia fataliter protectus ſum: which is that Flamius Vopiſcus calleth Majeſtatem Apollonii (as I gueſs) and with it the Profeſſors of Chriſtian Religion agree in the Effects, not in the Cauſes; for thoſe whom the Hea-

Vopiſcus in Aureliano.

† What were the Duke of Bedford, the Earl of Eſſex, the Lord Dawbeney, the Earl of Rich. the Lord Abergavenny, the Lord Cobham, who all were in Arms to oppoſe him.

then

1485. Angels good and bad.

then call Δαίμονες Dæmones, &c. Genios, the Christian Theologues call Angels or Spirits, whereof they hold good and bad.

But to return to the Matters further Allegate and Probate. The industrious Antiquary Master John Stow, being requir'd to deliver his Opinion concerning the Proofs of this Murther, affirmed it was never prov'd by any credible Evidence, no not by probable Suspitions, or so much as by the Knights of the Post, that King Richard was guilty of it. And Sir Thomas Moore (being puzzled with his Equivocations) says, that it could never come to light what became of the Bodies of these two Princes. Grafton, Hall, and Hollinshead * agreeing in the same report, that the Truth hereof was utterly unknown. Then where is their far seeing Knowledge, that will have them transported into foreign Countries or Drowned, or their Gigantick Proofs, that say peremptorily, they were both Murthered and Buried in the Tower by those Four nam'd before: If so, we need go no further for the Truth. But these are Splenetick Reaches, and the Parachronism is too gross as the Comœdian said,

Terentius in Phormio.

Quod dictum, indictum est,
Quod modo ratum, irritum est,

What was said, is unsaid again;
What was prov'd, revers'd.

Besides, if Perkin were not the second Son of King Edward, he must be nothing; for the Flemish, French, and Walloons acknowledged no such Noble young Man to be Born in Warbecke, or in Tourney ‖; but make honourable mention of a young Son of the King of England, who was brought to the Dutchess of Burgundy his Aunt, being then in Flanders, and how he was in France and in other Kingdoms. And surely so many Noble and Discreet English, if they had not known him to be the same by most certain Tokens, and Evidence, would not so confidently have laid down their Lives to confirm their Knowledge of him, or hazarded their Judgments and Honours upon an Imposture, or Vanity, especially those who had Places of Quality and Eminency near the King then living; and were in favour at Court. Therefore I would be resolv'd from our Anti-Richards, what Aim those Noblemen could have, in averring him the Son of Edward IV. by the hazard of their Lives and Estates (if the King pleased) and how could they expect less; for tho' they were enough to justifie it a Truth, they were too few to maintain it against him, there could be no Aim or Hope to super-induce young Richard to be King: but merely I am perswaded in point of Truth and Honour, as they thought themselves bound to do, they freely tendred their Lives to make good what their Conscience and Knowledge witnessed, for it would be an Imposture of a miraculous Deception, so many worthy and wise Persons both of the Nobility and Clergy, some of them having served the King his Father and himself, that they all in their particular and general Intelligence and Understandings, should be Mistaken and Cheated. I say, it was a strange Delusion if it could be so; but indeed those that would have it so, leave it in Question, and know not well what to make of their own Relations, or how to resolve his History; and if we mark Sir Francis Bacon in the Life of Henry VII. (tho' his Speculation be tender, and as favourable as he can that way) touching the History of this young Duke, he gently slides from it. 1485.

* Holinshead, as well as Sir Thomas Moor, says, Sir James Tyrrel, order'd them to be Buried under the Stairs, and when he brought word to King Richard what he had done with them, the King dislik'd the place of their Burial, because they were King's Sons; upon which Sir Robert Brackenbury's Chaplain removed their Bones to another place that was not then found out.

‖ The Lord Verulam in his reign of King Henry VII. gives a full Account of his Pedigree from John Osbeck, a Convert Jew of Tournay, which Perkin in his Confession acknowledges. Hol. p. 786.

BOOK IV.

The ARGUMENT of the Fourth BOOK of the LIFE and REIGN of RICHARD III.

Upon what Occasion the Sentence of Bastardy was given upon the Children of King Edward the Fourth, and why. The sundry Loves, Wooings, Contracts and Marriages of King Edward IV. His divers Concubines, His Device of the Fetterlock, and the Faulcon. His Wooing the Lady Elianor Talbott alias Butler, the Lady Bona of Savoy, and the Lady Elizabeth Gray Widow, and his Marriage with her. His former Marriage or Contract with the said Elianor, her Wrongs and her Death. Kings must not marry the Daughters of their Vassals, nor other without the consent of their Barons. Dr. Stillington Bishop of Bath Imprison'd for speaking of King Edward's Marriage with the Lady Elianor Talbott, Spuria vitulamina. How King Edward might have salved those Errors and prevented all the Mischiefs following them. The Children of King Edward IV. declared and adjudged Illegitimate. King Edward's Death suspected by Poison; the Mortality of the Plantagenets. The Authority of Parliament; Parliaments how so called and derived; Parliaments against Parliaments. The first Parliament of King

1485. King Henry VII. What Treaſon is; Whether Sovereign Princes may be ſaid to commit Treaſon againſt their Subjects; The Treaty of Marriage between King Richard III. and the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, and chiefly ſought by her ſelf and the Queen her Mother; The Entertainment of the Lady Elizabeth at the Court; the firſt Libel of Divorce; The Scruples of the Lady Elizabeth; King Richard never meant to marry her. The Marriages of Nieces allowed by the Pope, and uſual; The true Cauſe of Sir Thomas Moore's Condemnation and Execution. 1485.

THE Title King Richard III. had to the Crown, accrued to him by the Illegitimacy of the Children of King Edward IV. and the Attainder of the Duke of Clarence, with the Corruption of his Blood, and Forfeiture of the Title in him and in his Heirs, of which there was no Queſtion: But of the Forfeiture and Diſheritage of the Sons of Edward IV. there hath been much. The true Cauſe hath not nor cannot be well known, without the Narration of King Edward's ſundry Loves and Wooings, ſpecially his Contracts and Marriages.

How extreme his Deſires were, you may ſee in the Speech of the D. of Buckingham, ſet down by Sir Thomas Moor.

I ſhall not need to intimate how Amorous and Wanton this King was, his many Miſtriſſes or Amaſia's he kept, in ſeveral private Places; whereof the moſt famous was Katharine de Clarington, Elizabeth Wiatt alias Lucy, Jane Shore, the Lady Elianor Talbot. And it is worth the remembring (in the Concourſe of ſuch Matters as theſe) there was another fair Creature ſo dear unto him, that his too much Affection begat Suſpition; of which he gave her a Kind Expreſſion, by a quaint Device ſent unto her in a rich Jewel, faſhion'd much after the manner of the trivial Hierogliffs us'd in France, and call'd Rebus de Picardy. The Device was, A Faulcon encompaſs'd with a Fetter-lock: The Mott, Au Faulcon Serrure. The Caution lying in the Ambiguity and double ſenſe of Faulcon: which being whole and proper, ſignifieth a Hawk; but divided, hath an obſcene Signification, and ſo Faulcon becometh an æquivoque.

The King afterward was ſo affected with this Device, that he would have it carv'd and painted, in many of his Royal Works yet to be ſeen at Fotheringhay and elſewhere.

Yet altho' the King's Jealouſie was thus particular to her, his Affection was as general to others; being a frank Gameſter, and he that would caſt at all, fairly ſet. Above all, for a time he was much ſpeld with Elianor Talbot, Daughter of John Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury (called in the Act of Parliament 1 Rich 3. The old Earl of Shrewsbury) her Mother was the Lady Katharine Stafford, Daughter of Humphrey Stafford Duke of Buckingham, and ſhe the Widow of Thomas Lord Butler Baron of Sudeſley. Her Beauty and ſweetneſs of Diſpoſition drew his Deſire ſo vehemently, and with ſuch reſpect, that he was ſuddenly Contracted, and after Married by Dr. Thomas Stillington Biſhop of Bath, Councellor of State (one much favour'd by the King, and often employ'd by him in great Affairs.) This is witneſſed by our Engliſh Writers, and veritable Philip de Comines, in theſe words: Le Eveſque de Bath (lequel avoit eſte Conſeillier du Roy Edward) diſoit que le dit Roy avoit promis foy de Mariage a une Dame de Angleterre, & qu'il avoit nommè, & que le Roy avoit fait la promiſe entre les mains dudict Eueſque, & dit auſſi c'eſt Eueſque, qu'il avoit apres eſpouſè, & n'y avoit que luy & ceux deux †. Philip de Comines in Lud. 11. Cap. 112. & 122.

In Engliſh thus:

The Biſhop of Bath, a Privy Councellor of King Edward ſaid, That the King had plighted his Faith to marry a Lady of England, whom the Biſhop named the Lady Elianor Talbot; and that this Contract was made in the hands of the Biſhop, who ſaid that afterwards he married them, no Perſons being preſent but they twain and he, the King charging him ſtrictly not to reveal it.

Which Contract and Marriage are related in the Act of Parliament aforeſaid, where it is diſertly called a former Marriage, and the King had a Child by her. But where Deſires are unlawful, they will be unlimited. We are ever young enough to ſin; never old enough to repent: never conſtant, never ſatisfied in our neareſt Deſires. Though to Morrow ſhew us the Sting of to Day, the third ſhall betray us again; and we are taken (like Children in a Shop of Trinkets) by the Eye, liking all things, from one to another, until Pleaſure dull Pleaſure, and we grow weary of them. As in the Dotages of this King, who had now received others into the boſom of his Fancy; eſpecially the Fame (which was then in every Courtier's Ear and Mouth) of an excellent Lady in the Court of France, with the Queen Charelits, Wife of King Lewis XI. and Siſter to this Lady whoſe Name was Bona the Daughter of Lewis Duke of Savoy. And ſo ſuddenly and ſtrongly had he taken fire and apprehenſion of her Report (the bent of his affection being merely wanton to every new Object, thinking Love a cold Compoſition, without the Privilege of Variety) that he ſtraight falls into terms of engagement and capitulation of Marriage; to which purpoſe the great and renowned Richard Nevil Earl of Warwick and Salisbury, and Captain of Calais (then in the Eſteem of his beſt and moſt truſty Friend) had a Commiſſion of Treaty, and with all ſpeed was ſent Ambaſſador into France; who, with all Honour and Magnificence to his Wiſh effects it; The great Earl of Warwick.

† This is a patch'd Quotation out of the 5th Book of Phil. de Comines; Let the Reader ſee a true one out of the 6th Book of the ſame Author.

Le duc de Glocestre avoit fait Hommage a ſon neveu comme a ſon Roi & Souverain Seigneur & incontinent apres commit ce cas & en pleine Parlement d'Angleterre feit degrader deux Filles du Roi Edóuard & declarer baſtardes, ſous couleur de quelque cas qu'il prouva par un Eveſque de Bas en Angleterre, qui autre fois avoit eu grand credit avec le Roi Edouard, & puis le deſapointa & vint en Priſon & le rancoma d'Une Somme d'Argent; Lequel Eveſque diſoit, que Ledit Edouard avoit promis foi de Mariage a Une Dame D'Angleterre qu'il nommoit (pour ce qu'ille eſtoit amoreux), pour en avoir ſon plaiſir & en avoit feit la promeſſe entre les mains du dit Eveſque, & ſur cette Promeſſe coucha avec elle & ne le faiſoit que pour la Tromper.—The Duke of Glouceſter had done Homage to his Nephew, as his King and Sovereign, and a little after did this thing by him and his Brother. (avoit fait mourir, kill'd them) and had King Edward's two Daughters baſtardis'd in full Parliament, pretending the Biſhop of Bath prov'd that when he was in favour with King Edward, who afterwards impriſon'd him, The ſaid King Edward had Promis'd Marriage to a certain Engliſh Lady, whom he nam'd, on purpoſe to have his Will of her; That he gave her this Promiſe before him the ſaid Biſhop, upon which he lay with her and deceiv'd her. Ce Mauvais Eveſque, continues he, garda cette vengeance en ſon cœur, &c. This wicked Biſhop kept Revenge in his Mind 20 Year.

with

1485. with the more noble and easy dispatch, the Earl of Warwick being a Man eminent through all the Parts of Europe, for his Valour, Wisdom, and Heroical Vertues. Expecting a Welcom at his Return answerable to the period of his Employment, but finds an Alteration not only of the King's Affection, but of his Countenance: for in the interim he had (in an instant or particle of time as it were) wooed and wedded the Lady Elizabeth Gray, Relict of Sir John Gray, Daughter of Sir Richard Woodville, and of Jaquetta, sometime Dutchess of Bedford, and the Daughter of the Earl of St. Poole. Her Husband was one Gray a Knight of Grooby, who became a very vehement Lancastrian, revolting from the House of York, and therefore the more hateful to those of that Family, and the Well-wishers thereof (so to the Earl of Warwick.) He was Slain at the Battle of St. Alban's: Of whom, and of this Lady his Wife, as of this Marriage, Philip de Comines relates something, which I shall leave to the Interpretation of the better knowing, and desire not to understand it in the words: Or depuis le dict Roy Eduart espousè la fille d'un Chevallier de Angleterre femme veufue, qui avoit deux filz & aussi per Amorrettes.

The Lady Bona was afterward married to John Galeazo Sforza, Duke of Millain el Ruesour.

But neither the despised state of Widowhood, nor the meanness of her Quality and Condition, the earnest Disswasion of the Dutchess his Mother and best Friends, could make him withdraw his Affection, so deeply and obstinately he was surprized with her Beauty: yet if he could have enjoy'd his Longings otherwise, he had not married her. But she was of so pregnant and reserv'd a Wit, (seconded by the Caution and Counsel of the Dutchess her Mother) that his highest Temptations and sweetest Batteries could not win upon her; protesting never to yield to any dishonourable Parley or unchaste Motion, altho' it might warrant the safety of her Life; and humbly implored his Grace not to think her so exorbitantly and vainly Ambitious to wish her self a Queen, or to have the Hope and Presumption to be any thing higher than what she was, His poor and humble Vassal: Nor was she of so low and lost a Mind, as to violate her Chastity, or be a Concubine to the greatest King.

When the King perceiv'd there was no other Remedy but that he must shift his Sail to that scantling of Wind, he complies with her, and Protests it was his Desire and Suit to marry her, notwithstanding her Inequality: for in his esteem, her Love, her Beauty, and her Vertue, made her Fortunes and Dowry great, and high enough for any King. Nor did he defer it any longer than there was Necessity; but marry her he did, and with such dispatch, that he stay'd not for the Advice of any, either Councellor, Kinsman, or other whatsoever.

Nay, his speed admitted not the approved Ceremony of the Banes asking. And such was the want of Reverend Bishops then, that he was fain to take an ordinary Priest to marry them, in a Chamber too, instead of a Church, and that in a Lodge or Forrest-House; no body being present but the Dutchess, and some few of her Company. So where he first saw her (and by chance) there at the next Interview he married her; an Act of as high Exception as Improvidence. For his Barony thought it a most unworthy and unequal Match, distasting it the more, as done without their Consent, which they asfever'd the King ought to have by their ancient Privileges: and were the more exasperated, considering the great Inequality between her Condition and the Imperial Majesty of England, being the Relict but of a poor Knight, his mortal Enemy too. Above all, the Earl of Warwick took it for an high Indignity and Scandal to his Honour, which stood so far engaged in France to the Lady Bona and her Princely Friends; knowing the French would be as sensible of the Scorn, besides the great Charge he had been at, to manage the Employment. In the heat of these Disgraces (for transcendent Spirits have their answerable Passions; and it is as dangerous to stand in their way, as in the Reaches of an angry Tide) he forsook the King, and soon after takes up Arms against him; an Induction to those succeeding Evils which pursu'd that inconsiderate Marriage: of which the judicious Polidor (lib. 24.) maketh this Censure.

1485.

This Marriage was in the Forest of Whichwood.

Rex Edwardus mutato Concilio de ducenda in uxorem Bona, filia Ducis Sabaudiæ, Elizabetham viduam Johannis Gray Militis, in Matrimonium duxit; & de eo Matrimonio ob mulieris humilitatem non modo necessarios Principes, verum etiam Richardum Woodvillum Patrem mulieris celat: qua causa cognita cuncti protinus mirari, Principes fremere, Passimque voces emittere indignationis, & Regem non ex sua dignitate feciſſe, easque nuptias se crimini dare & dedecori assignare, quod cæco amore non ratione ductus esset; sed inde initium profectum est simultatis ortæ inter Regem Edwardum & Richardum Comitem Warwici, &c.

L'indignete de ce Marriage du Roy Edw. avec un simple gentile femme, displaisant au Conte Warwick, & aux principaux Seigneurs de Angleterre, & offensa tellement le Roy Lewis 11. qu'ils font confederacon, contre le Roy Eduart, &c. Jean ne Tillet, Part 2.

In English thus:

"King Edward, having changed his Purpose "of taking to Wife the Lady Bona Daughter "to the Duke of Savoy, married Elizabeth the "Widow of John Gray Knight; concealing, upon the Account of the Meanness of her Birth, "what he had done, not only from his Princely "Relations, but even from Richard Woodville "her Father: Which thing when it came to be "known, was matter of Admiration to every "one; The Nobles murmured thereat, and by "their Words every where bewray'd the Indignation of their Heart, that the King had not "acted suitably to his Dignity, and that they "accounted this Marriage blame-worthy and "dishonourable, because he was led thereto by "blind Love, not by Reason. It was this which "gave a Beginning to that Hatred and Enmity "betwixt King Edward, and Richard the renowned Earl of Warwick, &c.

But if you will not give credit to him, you shall hear an English Prelate living in those Times.

Edwardus Rex fretus propria electione cujusdam Militis relictam nomine Elizabeth, inconsultis Regni proceribus clandestino sibi destinavit Matrimonio; postea ipsam in reginam Coronari fecit: quod quidem Regni optimates ægrè tulerunt, quia de tam mediocri stirpe fœminam procreatam ad Regni Consortium secum præpropere sublimaret. That is,

"King Edward, without consulting with the "Nobles of his Realm, and relying solely upon his own Choice, secretly married the "Widow of a certain Knight, by Name Elizabeth; causing her afterwards to be crowned "Queen: By which the Peers of the Kingdom "were highly disgusted, because he had so unadvisedly exalted a Woman so meanly descended to a Partnership in Sovereignty.

Thus this amorous King lost his Honour, with many of his Best and great Friends: yet escap'd well, that he had no more real and present feeling of the Errour; being the first King of England that ever mingled his Royal Blood and Majesty in the Alliance of so private and mean a Family.

1485. The Story of Arragon mentions a King depos'd for marrying the Daughter of his Subject; and King Edward was ſomething near it; for ſoon after, he was expulſed his Kingdom: But being a Man that kept an induſtrious and invincible Courage above his Troubles, he happily recover'd that Loſs, never his Honour and Friends, which he might have preſerv'd, and prevented all thoſe Calamities that overtook him in his Iſſue, by the Advice of the Dutcheſs his Mother, who upon the ſecret Advertiſement of his Love to this Lady Gray, uſed all the Perſwaſions and Authority of a Mother, to return him to the Lady Elianor Talbot his former Love and Wife (at leaſt his contracted) to finiſh and conſummate what he was bound to by publick Solemnity of Marriage; and preſs'd it with ſuch ingenious Engagements, that for the Arguments ſake, I have tranſcrib'd the Paſſage out of Sir Thomas Moor and the reſt of our Engliſh Writers. Thus ſhe diſſwades him.

The Speech of the Dutcheſs of York to K. Edw. IV.

" MY Liege Lord, and my Dear Son; It is very commonly reported you " are purpoſed to marry the Lady Gray, a Wi- " dow and a mean Gentlewoman, which you " cannot but conceive will redound to your " Diſparagement and Diſhonour: All the Wiſe, " Great and Nobleſt Perſons of your Kingdom, " thinking it far more to the Advantage of " your Honour, Profit and Safety, to ſeek the " Alliance of a Noble Progeny, and rather in " a Foreign Country than your own; as well in " regard, thereupon may depend great Strength " to your Eſtate, and great poſſibility to en- " large your Poſſeſſions by ſuch Affinity. Alſo " (if well conſider'd) you may not ſafely marry " any other than the Lady Bona, the Earl of " Warwick having proceeded ſo far in the Cur- " rent of that Match already, that 'tis likely he " will not ſit down contented, if his trouble- " ſome and coſtly Negotiation ſhould be ſo ſlight- " ly blown off and fruſtrated.

" Beſides, Sir, conſider it is not Princely for " a King to Marry his own Subject, (at leaſt no " great and important Occaſion leading him " thereunto, nor Poſſeſſions or other Commo- " dity depending thereupon) but will be leſs " tolerable to all Opinion, than if a Rich Man " ſhould marry his Maid, only for a little " wanton Dotage upon her Perſon; in which " kind of Marriages, many Men commend more " the Maid's Fortune than the Maſter's Diſcre- " tion. Yet there muſt needs be more Honeſty " in ſuch a Marriage, than can be Honour in " this which you affect: For the difference is " not ſo great betwixt a rich Merchant and his " Servant, as you muſt think between the King " and the Widow Gray; in whoſe Perſon (albeit " there be nothing to be miſliked) there is no- " thing ſo excellent, but it may be found in " divers other Women, much more Noble and " many ways Exceeding her, and more compa- " ratively to your Eſtate (thoſe alſo Virgins, " who muſt be thought of a much more honour- " able Eſtimation than Widows) wherefore " the Widowhood only of Elizabeth Gray (tho' " in all other things ſhe were convenient for " you) were not enough to reſtrain you, being " a King, and ſo great a King.

" And it muſt ſtick as a foul Diſparagement " to the ſacred Majeſty of a Prince (who ought " as nearly to approach the Prieſthood in Pure- " neſs and Cleanneſs, as he doth in Dignity) to " be defiled with Bigamy in his firſt Marri- " age.

Thus far the King could with Attention hear the Dutcheſs; but being extremely far gone in Love, or rather in the hot Paſſion of Love, he was reſolute to marry her; and partly in earneſt, and partly in play (as one that well wiſt he was out of the Check of a Mother) yet reverently thus replied; 1485.

The Anſwer of K. Edw. IV. to the Dutcheſs of York his Mother.

MADAM,

" ALtho' Marriage, being a ſpiritual thing, " ought rather to be made according to " the Will and Ordinance of Almighty God, " where he by his Grace inclineth, either Parties " to love mutually and virtuouſly (as I hope and " truſt he doth work in ours) and not for the re- " gard of any temporal Advantage; yet, never- " theleſs, this Marriage (as it ſeemeth to me, being " conſider'd, even after the World's account) " is not unprofitable nor without fruits: For " I reckon not the Alliance and Amity of any " earthly Nation or foreign Prince ſo neceſſary " for me, as the Friendſhip and Love of mine " own Subjects; who, as I hope, will be the " more induced to love me, and acknowledge " mine to them, ſeeing I diſdain not to marry " one of my own Land; when (if a foreign Al- " liance were thought ſo requiſite) I could find " the Means of that much better by other of " my Kin (where all thoſe Parties would be " content) but to marry my ſelf to one whom " I ſhould, peradventure, never love; and for " the poſſibility of more Poſſeſſions, loſe the " Fruit and Pleaſure of this I have already: For " ſmall Pleaſure taketh a Man of all he hath, or " can have, if he be Wived againſt his Appe- " tite.

" And I doubt not but there be (as you ſay, " Madam) other Women in every point com- " parable to the Lady Gray; therefore I " lett not other Men to Wed them, no more " than have they reaſon to miſlike where it " liketh me.

" Nor doubt I my Couſin of Warwick's Love " can be ſo ſlightly ſettled to me, as to grudge " at that which I affect; nor ſo unreaſonable, " to look, that in my Choice of a Wife I ſhou'd " rather be ruled by his Eye than mine own; " that were to make me a Ward, and bind me " to marry by the Appointment of a Guardian; " with ſuch ſervile and hard Conditions I would " not be a King.

" As for the poſſibility you urge of more In- " heritance by new Affinity in ſtrange Lands, " that is not always certain; but contrariwiſe, " it is oftentimes the occaſion of more Trou- " ble than Profit. Beſides, we have already a Ti- " tle and Seiſine ſo good and great, as may ſuffice " to be gotten, and ſo to be kept by one Man, " and in one Man's Days.

" For your Objection, That the Lady Gray " hath been a Wife, and is now a Widow, and " hath already Children; Why, (By God's bleſ- " ſed Lady) I that am a Batchelor have ſome " Children too; and ſo, for our better comfort, " there is proof that neither of us is like to be " barren. And I truſt in God, Madam, you " ſhall live to ſee her bring forth a young Prince, " and your pretty Son, that ſhall be a Joy and " Pleaſure to you.

" For the Bigamy objected, let the Biſhop lay " it hardly in my way, when I come to take Or- " ders of Prieſthood; for I confeſs I underſtand " Bigamy is forbidden to a Prieſt, but I never " wiſt it yet forbidden to a Prince; therefore " I pray you, Good Madam, trouble your ſelf " and me no further in this Matter.

Then

1485. Then she urged his Contract (a) with the Lady Elizabeth Lucy, and his having had a Child by her, (as she said) and thought her self bound in Conscience to charge him with. Mr. Moor, Grafton, Stow and the rest, say, The King utterly denied that Contract, and protested it a Slander; which well and justly he might do, and these Authors may retract what they have written. For the truth is, he was never contracted to her, tho' he loved her well, being of an affable and witty Temper; nor did she ever alledge the King was betrothed to her, but that he had entangled her by sweet and tempting Language: And who knoweth not Credula res Amor est? But true it is, he had a Child by her, which was the Bastard Arthur, called commonly (but unduly) Arthur Plantagenet, afterward made Viscount Lisle by H. VIII.

In this Relation, the Historians have much and foully err'd; not only corrupting the Story, but have injured the Dutchess of York in her Judgment and Knowledge of these Matters; and the tenor of her former Speech, making her to charge the King as contracted to this Elizabeth Lucy (of Birth and Quality much meaner than the Lady Grey whom she conceived so basely of; for Elizabeth Lucy was the Daughter of one Wyat of Southampton, a mean Gentleman, (if he were one) and the Wife of one Lucy, as mean a Man as Wyat. True it is, the King kept her as his Concubine, and she was One of those most famous Three who had peculiar Epithets, being call'd his Witty Leman). For that they would have her say the King was never betrothed to her, it importeth nothing, and therefore, I conceive, it was never extracted from her. But truly to salve the Story and Error of these Writers, we must know, that Lady to whom the King was first betrothed and married, was Elianor Talbot, Daughter of a Great Peer of this Realm, of a most noble and illustrious Family, the Earl of Shrewsbury, who is also called in authentick Writings the Lady Butler, because she was then the Widow of the Lord Butler, (a Lady of a very eminent Beauty and answerable Virtue) to whom the King was contracted, married, and had a Child by her. This is that Lady (not Elizabeth Lucy) the Queen spake of to her Son; and (to note Obiter) the King's Breach with this Lady, was a Cause the subtil Widow would not listen unto him before Marriage, having learned Credulitas damno solet esse puellæ. This Marriage cast the Lady Elianor Butler into so perplext a Melancholy, that she spent her self in a solitary Life ever after: And how she died is not certainly known; but out of doubt, Kindness was not the cause, he having a Kindness for every new Face, and was so become exceedingly fancied to his new Wife the Lady Gray, no Court or Pleasure now, but where she is. In this continuance of his amorous Indulgence, (which was many Years, and rendred a fruitful Issue to him) no question, that Party of her Kindred made their best Advantage from it: Yet the Remembrance of that Pre-contract after a time, moved him by such sensible Apprehensions, he could not brook to have it mention'd; which was the cause of his Displeasure against his ancient Chaplain Dr. Stillington of Bath, because he did what his Conscience urg'd, to God and the Kingdom, in discovering the Marriage, occasion'd by the Lady's sudden Indisposition and pressing Sorrow; who not able to contain her self, had open'd it to a Lady her Sister; or, as some say, to her Mother the Countess of Shrewsbury; she, to the Earl her Husband; he consults it with his noblest Kinsfolks and Friends, as it was a general Scandal to them all: They to inform themselves the better, had Conference with Dr. Stillington, who affirmed the Contract and Marriage, with whom they advise; that as he was a Bishop and a Privy Counsellor, it behoved him to prepare it to the King's Consideration, for some Redress and Satisfaction. But the Bishop (tho' willing) durst not deal with the King in that manner; rather wish'd they would apply it to the Duke of Glouceſter, as the Man most inward with the King; whereof Philip de Comines thus writeth; Cestuy Eueſque d'Bath, mit en avant a ce Dux Glouceſter, que le dit Roy Edouart estoit fort amoreux, d'un Dame, d' Angleterre, & luy promise de l' espouser pour veu qu'il couchat avec illa, elle s'y consentit: & dit ceste Eueſque, qu'il les avoit Espouses, & n'y avoit que luy & eux deux. Philip de Comines.

Elizabeth Lucy.

Ovid.

The Duke of Glouceſter, as they desir'd, press'd it to the King, who became more incens'd against the Bishop, saying, He had not only betray'd his Trust, but his Children; and upon that Heat puts him from the Council-Table under a strict Imprisoment for a long time, which at length he redeem'd himself from by a heavy Fine, as is testified by Dr. Goodwin Bishop of Hereford, in his Catalogus Episcoporum, who writeth thus; Philip de Comines, le Roy Edw. de supposé l'Eveſque, & le tient in prison, & le Ranson de un bon summe d' Argent. Which was taken for a peice of more Passion than Justice; the Bishop not deserving so to suffer in this case, where his Conscience might very well excuse what he did.

Not long after, King Edward died; of what Disease it is doubtfully suggested: Some thought of an Apoplexy or Dead Palsie. Polidor Virgil saith, of a Disease utterly unknown to all the Physicians, which leaves it to a further Construction. The Author of the History of Britain, delivers plainly, that King Edward was kill'd by Poison (as the common Report in France went). Aucuns disoyent que le Roy de Angleterre Edovart, avoit esté Empoisonné au mois d' auril en l' an. 1463. And Euguerrant de Monstrolet writeth, That some said he died of an Apoplexy; others, He was Poison'd in Wine of Creu, which King Lewis the Eleventh sent to him. Philip de Comines, to that purpose, says, Aucuns disent que le Roy Eduart, mourut d'un Catarrhe; that is, Some say that King Edward died of a Catarrhe; for that is their Phrase in France when a Great Man is made away by Poison. Of such a venemous Catarrhe died the young King Edward VI. But by whose Hand King Edward IV. had his Death, it is not said; certain it is, he was generally beloved of all his Subjects, except those of the Lancastrian Faction. As soon as he was dead, the Silence brake into a general Muttering against his Marriage, then into loud and publick Inveighing against it: All Tongues were at liberty, and Pardons were hoped for all Offences; the general and common Opinion being quite against it and the Children. And Dr. Morton affirmed, The Duke of Buckingham, with other Noble Lords, saw and read certain authentick Instruments made and sign'd by learned Doctors, Proctors and Notaries, with the Depositions

How K. Edward died.

Lib. 4. in Hist. Brit.

Monstrolet, Part 3. de ce Chron.

Dr. Morton Sir Thomas Moor, Grafton, Hollinshead, Stow.

(a) Hollinshead says she only caused a Præ-contract to be alledg'd made by him with the Lady Elizabeth Lucy; "But "all Doubts removed, all Things made clear, and all Cavillations avoided, he privily in the Morning married her. Pag. 668.

of

1485. of ſundry credible Perſons, importing and teſtifying the Children of Edward IV. were Baſtards: with which opinion the City of London was alſo poſſeſſed; and Dr. Shaw, Frier Pinke, and other Preachers in the Pulpits declar'd them Spuria vitulamina. To this conſented all the People of the North Parts in their Supplicatory Scroll before-mention'd; which the Court of Parliament adjudged and decreed to be ſo. A fault of Improvidence in their Father, who might have prevented all Quarrels and Queſtions about that and future Claims, repair'd all Flaws and Defects of Titles; alſo have taken away the Errour and Inconveniency of the Poſt-contract, or later Marriage, that gave the imputation of Baſtards to his Children; and ſo have avoided all the inſuing Miſchiefs and Calamities. If firſt he had procured a Divorce of the former Contract with the Lady Elianor from the Pope, who was then held to have all Power both of Heaven and Earth.

How King Edward might have prevented all after-queſtions.

Or if after the ſecond Marriage (and while he flouriſhed, which was by the ſpace of Fourteen Years) he had either by a due Conſideration, or Counſel of his beſt Friends, wrought the Pope's Pardon for breach of the Pre-contract with the Lady Elianor; then, his Apoſtolical Bull of Diſpenſation, for his Poſt-contract, or Matrimony ſuperinducted (as they call it) which might eaſily have been obtain'd at Rome, for Money. And after that, to have ſummon'd a Parliament, requiring the three Eſtates to have ratify'd and confirm'd theſe Bulls, for the Approbation of the ſaid Marriage with the Lady Gray, and the Legitimation of his Children, and made them lawful by Act of Parliament (according to the Pope's Indulgence (which was then a Sacred and moſt Inviolable thing.) Laſtly, to have declared, pronounced and decreed in Parliament, That the ſaid Children of the King, being ſo made Legitimate, were alſo capable of all Honours, Dignities, Eſtates, publick and private, of which the King ſtood ſeiſed, or which were any ways appertaining and proper to the Kingdom of England, and of France. I ſay, If he had done this, he had compoſed all Defects, and prevented all ſucceeding Dangers of Claims and Practices, which might have been done with ſmall or no trouble. A Courſe by another afterward opportunely thought on.

And ſurely (it may be conjectur'd) if this King had not been too Secure, and loſt in his Senſualities, he would by the like Parliamentary Power have rectified thoſe Errours, theſe great, high and difficult Works, being (indeed) proper to Parliaments, and pregnant and ſtrong Proofs of their great and tranſcendent Power, holding in themſelves a juſt Deſert and Claim of ſuch Power and Authority (if aſſembled and held as they ought) being a General Aſſembly and Convocation of the moſt Wiſe, Honourable, Juſt, and Religious Perſons of the Kingdom. Therefore the word Parliament (ſaith one) is compounded of Parium and lamentum, becauſe (as he thinketh) the Peers of the Country did at theſe Meetings complain each to other of the Enormities of their Country. But the better opinion is, That Parliament is ſimply from the French word parler (and that from the Greek παρλειμ, both ſignifying to ſpeak) and ſo by adding the termination, ment (which is common in the French Tongue, as well to many Nouns as Adverbs) do make up Parliament; meaning thereby an Aſſembly of Men called together to ſpeak or confer, &c.

The Authority of Parliament.

Parliament, how ſo called and derived.

Lawrence Valla.

And it may not unfitly be call'd Parliament, for that each Man ſhould parler, lament, ſpeak his Mind. But Laurence Valla miſliketh that Etymology. 1485.

It may be gueſs'd the word Parliament (being tranſported out of France) began ſhortly after the Norman Conqueſt. One of the firſt authentical Reports of that Name, is found in the Statute 3 E. 1. commonly call'd Weſtminſter Parliament; that Aſſembly being ſaid to be Primier generall apres Coronament le Roy. But that is not the firſt word: for in the Statutes call'd Articuli Cleri, publiſh'd 9 E. 2, theſe words are read: Temporibus progenitorum noſtrorum quondam Regum Angliæ Parliamentis ſuis, &c. Which words Progenitorum & quondam, muſt needs reach higher than E. 1. that was but Father to him that ſpake it.

But at what time ſoever after the Conqueſt this Court began to be call'd a Parliament, the ſame was before known to the Saxons or Engliſhmen, by the word Sinoth, and Micell Sinoth; of the Greek συνεδος, now appropriated to Eccleſiaſtical Meetings only; and ſometimes by theſe terms, Micell, Gemote, Witengemott, and Calca Witengemott; that is, the meeting of Wiſemen, or of all the Wiſemen: for witena ſignifieth Wiſe men, Calca, all, and Gemott, a Meeting: Of which laſt words the Names Shiremotts, Eolmotts, and Halymotts; that is, the meeting or aſſembling of the Men of a Shire, of a Town, and of the Tenants of a Hall or Manor, had their beginning alſo.

Now as Sinoth is more uſed in the Parliaments themſelves; ſo Gemott is more familiar to the Hiſtorians.

And this Parliament of Anno 1 Rich. 3. could be of no leſs Power and Vertue; witneſs the many and good Laws made in it, (albeit the ſecond Marriage of King Edward was adjudged unlawful, and the Acts of that Parliament for the moſt part repeal'd and abrogated afterward) yet the Evidence is clear enough, that the Judges and Law-makers of that Parliament, were wiſe and religious Men, and their Laws upright and juſt.

Therefore whatſoever was adjudged by them, was to be received and held as authentick and inviolable (how roughly ſoever it was afterward handled.) And in this caſe of the diſabling of King Edward's Sons, there is leaſt reaſon to ſuſpect them, the Cauſe being ſo new, ſo plain, and notoriouſly known, that no Man could be ignorant therein: Therefore to have given any other Judgment, but according to the truth of Evidence, and certainty of Knowledge, it might juſtly have been cenſur'd an act of Errour and Ignorance, or Partiality and Injuſtice.

For it was not the Opinion of a few, nor raiſed out of a weak Judgment and perverted Knowledge; but a ſtrong and general Evidence, by the ableſt and beſt knowing.

If it be objected, The Caſe was obſcure and doubtful: That cannot be; for the Eſtates had all Subſtantial and ready Means to inform themſelves of the Truth, and every Circumſtance whereby they might be fully ſatisfy'd and clear'd in all the Niceties and Doubts: for all the Witneſſes and Dealers in that Cauſe, and ſuch Perſons as were acquainted with it, were then living; and they muſt and would have truly and certainly inform'd the Court of Parliament: For the ſpecial and reverend Care of this Court is, The advancing of Juſtice and Right. Therefore all Subjects (by Nature or Grace) are bound in their Allegiance, to give Pious and Religious credit to Parliaments, and to believe in their Authority and Power, as the former Times did

in

1485. in Oracles. We must also confidently hold the high and transcendent Quality and Vertue of that Court, to have all Power and Authority: And no question to repeal a good and just Law made in Parliament, is a Wrong and Scandal to that General Council, and to the universal Wisdom, Providence, Justice and Piety of the Kingdom.

In the Parliament 1 H. 7. there is an Act, attainting the King R. III. of High Treason, for bearing Arms against the Earl of Richmond, Intituled, The Sovereign Lord (this was at his proceeding from Milford-Haven into Leicester:) But when he came to fight the Battel, he was then no King, nor Sovereign, but a Chief of such as made Head against their Sovereign. In which Paragraph there appears three gross Faults.

First, Certain it is, Richard during his Reign was a Sovereign, therefore no Subject.

Next, There was no Enemy in the Field who was then a Sovereign, but all Liege Subjects to the Crown.

And Richard being the King and Sovereign, could not be adjudged a Traytor, nor lawfully attainted of High Treason. Then let it be consider'd whether a Person of Sacred Majesty (that is, an anointed Sovereign) may commit the Crime of Treason. Also in this Parliament, all the Barons, Knights and Gentlemen that bore Arms in the Field for the King, were attainted of Treason, their Goods and Lands confiscate: And one Thomas Nandick (a Necromancer and Sorcerer, who with others had been condemned to die, for using that hellish Art) was in this Parliament pardon'd the horrible Things he had committed. And it seem'd he had not then left his Black Trade: for he hath in that Act of Parliament still the Stile of Conjurer: Viz.

Thomas Nandick of Cambridge, Conjurer: which had been a fitter Stile for his Gibbet than his Pardon; although he had not by his Sorcery or Inchantment hurt or destroy'd any Human, yet for his Renouncing and Abjuration of Almighty God: for it is the Opinion of a Learned and Religious Doctor:

Magos & Incantores (saith he) hominum genus indignum, quod vel ob solam Dei, O. M. abjurationem capitali suplicio afficiatur; i. e. Magicians and Inchanters, a wretched sort of Men, that even upon the Account of their Abjuring of Almighty God, deserve to undergo a Capital Punishment.

Other such things there be in that Parliament, which detract it in the opinion of some; those of the Best and Wisest repute.

The Treaty of Marriage between K. R. 3. and his Niece the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet.

Now let us come to examine that Treaty the King had about marrying the Lady Plantagenet; which is censured to be a thing not only Detestable, but much more Cruel and Abominable to be put in Agitation.

Item, That all Men, and the Maid her self most of all, detested this unlawful Copulation.

Item, That he made away the Queen his Wife, to make way for this Marriage; and that he propounded not the Treaty of Marriage, until the Queen his Wife was Dead.

That there was such a Motion for the Marriage of this Lady to the King, is true; and (which is more, and most certain) it was entertain'd, and well-lik'd by the King, and his Friends, a good while; also by the Lady Elizabeth, and by the Queen her Mother; who received it with so much content and liking, 1485. that presently she sent into France for her Son the Marquess of Dorset, that was there with the Earl of Richmond, earnestly solliciting him to renounce the Faction, and return home to the King's Favour and Advancement, which she assured him: and sends † the Lady Elizabeth to Attend the Queen at Court, or to place her more in the eye, so in the Heart of the King. The Christmas following (which was kept in Westminster-Hall) for the better colour of sending her eldest Daughter, she sends her other four thither, who were received with all honourable courtesie by the King and Queen Regent; especially the Lady Elizabeth was ranked most familiarly in the Queen's Favour, and with as little distinction as Sisters. But Society, nor all the Pomp and Festivity of those Times, could cure that sad Wound and Languor in the Queen's Breast, which the Death of her only Son had left. The Address of those Ladies to Court (albeit the feign'd wooing of the King was in a politick and close way) gave cause of Suspicion to the Earl of Richmond's intelligencing Friends, that the King had a Purpose to marry the Lady Elizabeth; which must prevent the Earl both of his Hope to her, and to the Crown by her Title: a Clause that made them mutter very broadly against it (for indeed, what more concern'd them?) therefore the King treats it more privately and coldly; but the Queen-Widow and the Lady stood constant in their Desires and Expectation; only the Objection was, The King had a Wife; as tho' he could not marry another whilst she liv'd; not remembring how usual it was, not only for Kings, but private Men, to put away one Wife and marry another, for venial Crimes, as well as Adultery and Treason. Chronicle Croyland.

The Romans might repudiate their Wives, for conversing with Men that were not of their Kindred, and for going to see Plays and Cirque Spectacles, (their Husbands not being with them) or if the Wife were unquiet or curst of her Tongue, &c. Henry VIII. put away Queen Katharine of Castile, and Queen Anne of Cleve; the one, because she was too old and cold for Pleasure; the other, because she was not fruitful or wanton enough. Sometimes Men have put away their Wives for being Sluts, for having unsavoury Breaths, or some Infectious Disease, without a Necessity of taking away their Lives; and it was lawful for either of them to marry when they would.

Pope Clement VII. so ratify'd the Divorce of King Henry VIII. against Katharine of Castile, as he defy'd all Laws (Divine and Human) that should contradict and impugn his Power and Dispensation, in these words:

Non obstante Jure Divino nec Humano, nec quibuscunque Constitutionibus repugnantibus, aut in contrarium Edictis. That is, "Any Law of God "or Man, or whatsoever Constitutions in- "consistent, and to the contrary, notwith- "standing. Bulla Papæ Clementis 5. apud D. Ro. Cotton.

There was a formal Bill or Libel of Separation prescribed by Moses, with the manner of Divorces and Repudiations, in this tenour, as Andreas Osiander (who translated it out of Hebrew into Latin) affirmeth: which for the Rarity I have here transcribed. Osiander in Annotation. in 4 Evang. Harmon. Evang.

† The King sent the Queen, says Holinshead, divers and often Messengers, and also to her Son the Marquis of Dorset to bring her into a Fool's Paradice. 750.

Die

1485. Die tertia Hebdomadis, 29 die menſis Octobris, Anno ab orbe condito, 4349.

EGo Joachim cognominatus N. filius Nathanis, qui conſiſto hodie in urbe N. in Regno N. Te N. uxorem meam, cognominatam N. filiam N. quæ fuiſti uxor mea ante hac nunc demiſi, & liberavi, & repudiavi te tibi, ut ſis tui juris & domina animæ tuæ; & ad abeundum, ut ducaris abs quolibet viro, quem volueris, & ne vir quiſquam prohibeat, quo minus ſis in manu tua, ito hoc die & in æternum. Et ecce, permiſſa es unicuique viro, & hic eſto tibi à me datus Libellus repudii, & Epiſtola dimiſſoria, & Inſtrumentum libertatis juxta Legem Moſis & Iſraelis.

Which Verbal Latin Tranſlation is thus Word for Word rendred into Engliſh.

" Upon the third Day of the Week and 29th of " the Month of October, in the Year of the " World, 4349.

" I Joachim ſirnamed N. the Son of Nathan, " who at this Day ſojourn in the Town of " N. in the Kingdom of N. have, thee N. my " Wife, ſirnamed N. the Daughter of N. who " haſt hitherto been my Wife, now diſcharged, " and liberated, and repudiated thee to thy ſelf, " that thou may'ſt be in thy own Power and " Miſtreſs of thy own Life, and to depart and " to be married by any other Man, as ſhall " ſeem good in thine Eyes, and that no Man " may hinder thee, from being at thy own " Diſpoſal, Go thou for this Day and for ever. " And behold, thou art permitted to any Man, " and be this a Bill of Divorce, and Epiſtle di- " miſſory, and Inſtrument of Liberty given un- " to thee by me according to the Law of Moſes " and of Iſrael.

But the Anſwer which was made in the Name of the King to the Lady Elizabeth concerning his Queen, was, That ſhe could be no Impediment of long continuance, being a very weak Woman in a Conſumption, and paſt hopes of Recovery; her Phyſicians giving their Opinions, ſhe could not live paſt the middle of February next following: nor gueſſed they much amiſs; for ſhe died in the next Month, March. When the midſt and laſt of February was paſt, the Lady Elizabeth being more impatient and jealous of the Succeſs than every one knew or conceived, writes a Letter to the Duke of Norfolk, intimating firſt, that he was the Man in whom ſhe affied, in reſpect of that love her Father had ever bore him, &c. Then ſhe Congratulates his many Courteſies, in continuance of which, ſhe deſires him to be a Mediator for her to the King, in the behalf of the Marriage propounded between them; who, as ſhe wrote, was her only Joy and Maker in this World, and that ſhe was his in Heart and Thought: withal inſinuating, that the better part of February was paſt, and that ſhe feared the Queen would never Die.

The credit of the Duke of Norfolk with King Richard, and with the Lady Elizabeth; and her Letter to him.

All theſe be her own Words, written with her own Hand; and this is the ſum of her Letter, which remains in the Autograph, or Original Draft, under her own Hand, in the magnificent Cabinet of Thomas Earl of Arundel and Surrey: By which it may be obſerved, that that this young Lady was ignorant that a Man having a Wife living might marry another, and ſuffer her to live. But the truth is, the King had no real intent to make her his Wife, from the beginning; only in Policy entertain'd this Treaty, as it appear'd afterward, when his Queen was Dead, and he had all fit Acceſſes without any Impediment to marry her, yet did not; profeſſing he wooed her not to that end, but for ſome other Cauſes; and made Proteſtation (in the great Hall at Saint Jones near Smithfield, before all the Knights of Malta, and a great Aſſembly of Noblemen; the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and many Citizens being preſent) that he had no purpoſe nor intent to marry the Lady Elizabeth: avowing, Quod ea res (viz.) Voluntas contrahendi Matrimonium cum Conſanguinea Germana ſua, nunquam ei venerat in mentem: that is, 'That this Matter, viz. a Deſign of 'contracting Matrimony with his Kinſwoman 'Elizabeth, had never entred into his Mind. For ſo it is teſtify'd by the Prior of Croyland. Yet it may not be denied, he pretended love to her, and a proffer of Marriage; which he projected in Policy, to divert her Affection from Richmond (whoſe Party the King apprehended privately wrought that way; of which the ſaid Author thus ſaith, Non aliter videbat Richardus Rex regnum ſibi confirmari, neque ſpem competitoris ſui auferri poſſe, niſi in Matrimonio, cum dictâ Elizabeth, contrahendo vel ſimulando. In Engliſh thus: 'King Richard did not ſee how 'otherways the Kingdom could be confirmed to 'himſelf, and his Competitor be deprived of all 'Hope, than by contracting a Marriage with the 'ſaid Elizabeth, or pretending it. And it is moſt likely the King had no other Aim but merely of Prevention: neither was there any Cauſe (had he been ſo wicked) to do it by Blood, nor any juſt Reaſon to frame ſo hard an Argument againſt him, being always ſo affectionately inclined to his Wife, that he was rather thought uxorious than otherwiſe; † which appeared unfeignedly at her Death, in the expreſſion of Sorrow and magnificent Exequies for her. Non eum immorte honore quam Reginam dicunt, as the Prior of Croyland teſtifieth. Let us look therefore with clearer Conſideration upon the Motion or Pretence of this Marriage: to call it Deteſtable and Cruel, is Ignorant and Malicious (tho' ſhe were ſo near of kin to him) for Marriages between Uncles and Nieces, have been very frequent and allowed in other Countries by the Church. In our time, the Daughter and Heir of Duke Infantaſgo in Spain, was married to his Brother Don Alde Mendoza: and more lately, the Earl of Miranda married his Brother's Daughter.

1485. The Cabinet of the Earl of Arundel, now Earl of Surrey too.

Chronicle of Croyland.

Chronicle of Croyland.

The Q. died 11 Mar. 1484.

Prior of Croyland.

In the Houſe of Auſtria, Marriages in this kind have been very uſual, and thought lawful, the Pope diſpenſing with them; for they ſay in Spain, Que el padre ſanto quiere Dios loquire: Therefore how could it be ſo highly unlawful in K. Richard? Or if his Intents had been ſo forward, where was the Bar when his Wife was dead, and he abſolute, unleſs the Lady's Averſeneſs? But that Suggeſtion is anſwer'd by her own Letter and other Teſtimonies. So the Account will be (if rightly ſum'd by what hath been produced) that he had never any ſerious Determination of Marriage; only took the advantage of his Gain, by looking into her Hand; then no cauſe to make away his Queen; which his Ac-

† This is Another notorious Falſhood; he abandon'd her Bed, and ſent her word 'twas out of averſion to her Barrenneſs; if he did not poiſon her, he certainly was not Sorry for her Death. Holinſh.

cuſers

1485. cusers themselves directly and peremptorily charge him not with, but doubtfully say, The Queen (however it fortuned) departed out of this Life the 16th of March, in the Lent Season. But altho' he had the Commendations of a loving and indulgent Husband, I say not he lived always continently; for I find he had some Bastards, two of them I have mention'd; yet peradventure he might have them before his Marriage, aud then the fault was less. So then, let them that affect not blind aud traditory Opinion, more than Justice and Reason, but equally examine his Slanders, they shall find Malice and Ignorance have been the King's greatest Accusers, which can only lay Suspicion to his charge: and Suspicion in Law, is no more Guilt than Imagination: For tho' Suspicion many times, lay a great Blame upon a Man, (Men holding him to be guilty whom Men suspect to be so, tho' injuriously) yet the Law holds it not a Crime, because Suspicion, many times, supposeth those to be culpable which are not: For an Instrument may as easily be condemn'd as a Malefactor, being an Evil grown from the Error of Men. Wherefore Suspicion of it self bringeth no Sentence by Law, Natural or Moral, Civil or Divine, according to that of the old Minographus, Suspicio grave est hominibus malum. And the Divine Chrysostom saith, A Good Man hardly suspecteth another to be Evil; but an Evil Man scarcely supposeth any to be Good; far from the Counsel of this Epigram:

Sir Thomas Moor, Hollinshead.

Suspicio est opinio mali ex levibus signis. B. Th. Aquinas.

Suspicio est actus per quem in dubitationem trahimur.

Culpare in quoquam quæ non sunt nota, malignum est;
Præsertim si quum cognita sint bona sunt.
Non pateant faciles duris rumoribus aures
Quæ nescire juvat, credere non libeat.
Linquantur secreta Deo, qui quicquid opertum est
Inspicit, & nullis indiget indicibus.

Accuse no Man of Faults to thee unknown,
And much less him from whom good Fruits have grown:
Lend not thine Ears to scandalous Reports;
Believe not that, which known, nought thee imports.
Leave secret Things to God, who knows all Hearts,
And hath no need of the Promoter's Arts.

But as Julius Cæsar (who had many excellent Observations) was wont to say, Vir bonus tam suspicione quam crimine carere oportet: That a good Man must be as well without Suspicion as Crime. Yet none so innocent but may fall under the Lash of the Malicious: For such, like the Polypus, will take any Colour, or make any tincture of a Crime to serve their Ends. Of such a Virtue is the never-understanding Vulgar, that like Kites and Daws can digest nought but Stench and Filth; their Ignorance being their Faith, and that drawn from loose Pamphlets, and the Vomit of mercenary and mimick Pens; to which, and their uncurable Fits, I leave them.

Meos tam suspicione quam crimine judico carere oportere. Suet. in vitâ Jul. Cæs.

BOOK V.

The ARGUMENT of the Fifth BOOK of the LIFE and REIGN of RICHARD III.

What a Tyrant is, and how a Tyrant and King Richard differ. The Destruction of the Plantagenets. The Daughters of King Edward how bestow'd. The Death of the Queen their Mother. The Virtues of King Richard the Third. The Elogy of the Three Brothers, King Edward the Fourth, George and Richard. The Magnificent, Publick and Charitable Buildings of King Richard the Third: His good Laws, and other good Works. That to die in the Wars is no Dishonour, but an Honour: Artes Regiæ Crimen regale: His Comparison with other Kings accounted good. King James's gracious Demeanour to his Cousins. A Character and Elogy of King Richard the Third. The Title of the Norman Race and of York defended. The sundry Titles of King James. The Wedding Ring of England. Lapis Regno fatalis. King Richard's Sepulchre and Epitaph. The Author's Scope; Peroratio & Votum.

What a Tyrant is.

WE will next endeavour to understand that Vocable or Term Tyrannus (that is, a Tyrant, or an Evil King) cast upon King Richard; which, indeed, comprehendeth all Scandals and Impieties whatsoever.

Aristot. in Ethic. idem.

Tyrannus est qui suis propriis Commodis studet, & publicis adversatur. And, Tyrannus est qui dominatu crudeliter abutitur. That is,

" A Tyrant is one who endeavoureth only his " own Advantage, and is an Enemy to that of " the Publick. And again, A Tyrant is one " that abuseth his Authority to Cruelty.

A Tyrant is, by another Wise Man, compar'd to a Dragon, who becometh not a Dragon until he hath devoured many Serpents: Of which Conceit this Epigram was wittily framed.

Post plures Coluber Serpentes Draco fit esos,
Gustatâ humanâ carne fit Homo Lupus.

The Dragon which doth many Serpents eat,
Becomes a Dragon of huge shape and strength;
And so the Man which makes his Flesh Man's Meat,
Transformed is into a Wolf at length.

Another Philosopher differeth not much from these, who saith, That of all Tame Beasts the Flatterer is most pernicious; and of all Wild the Tyrant, who forbeareth not for any respect of Good or Ill, but studies Oppressions, Wrongs,

Bias apud Plut. Lib. de adulat. c. 37.

1485. Exactions, Robberies, Sacriledges, Blood-ſhed, Murder, Adultery, Inceſt, Rape, Riot, Gluttony, Luxurioufneſs, Prodigality, and all manner of Exceſſes: Theſe be his Arts of Reigning, and theſe be his Virtues,

Lucan. Invident Tyranni claris forteſque trucidant.

Tyrants with envious Eyes the Brave behold,
And murder in cool Blood the Valiant and the Bold.

Another ſaith,

Seneca. Hercules. Furens. Tyrannus miſerum vetat perire, fœlicem jubet.

They force the Wretch to live, the happy Man to die.

So it was truly ſaid by the famous Orator of Athens,

Demoſth. Liberalitas Tyranni nihil aliud eſt quam tranſlatio pecuniarum à juſtis Dominis, ad alienos idque indignos. That is,

" The Liberality of a Tyrant is nothing elſe
" but the Taking away from the rightful Owners
" that which belongs to 'em, and giving it unto
" others, and thoſe unworthy thereof.

His Thirſt and Covetouſneſs, for his largitious Riots and Luſts, are ſo inordinate, that nothing can quench it.

Claudian. in Ruff. Non Tarteſſiacis illum ſatiaret arenis
Tempeſtas pretioſa Tagi, non ſtagna rubentis,
Aurea Pactoli, totumque exhauſerit Hermum,
Ardebit majore ſiti, &c.

Not Tagus golden Tide can e're aſſwage,
Nor red Pactolus quench his avaricious Rage.
Give him whole Hermus at a Draught; his Thirſt
Inflam'd demands yet more ———

Quicquid conſpicuum pulchrumque ex Equore toto,
Res fiſci eſt, &c.

Theſe may ſerve for the Notions of a Tyrant: to any of which Impieties our King Richard was very little, or not at all obnoxious.

Parliam. Ann. 1 Rich. III. For Firſt, Whereas a Tyrant impoſeth many grievous Taxes and Oppreſſions upon his Subjects, he took away ſuch Grievances, and particularly, by Act of Parliament, a hateful Tax (tho' diſguiſed with the name of a Benevolence) forbearing to impoſe any upon the People.

The D. of Buckingh. ſaid, That the name of Benevolence, as it was taken in the Time of K. Edward IV. ſignified that every Man ſhould pay, not what he of his own good Will liſt, but what the King of his good Will liſt to take. D. Buck. apud. Thom. Moor.

Then, a Tyrant doth not only rapine his Subjects, but ſpoils, and robs Churches and Church-men; but King Richard did many good Things both for the Publick Good, advancing God's Service, and maintainance of his Miniſters and Church-men.

Tyrannum pium eſſe non eſt facile, (as Sophocles well obſerv'd.) And the Oracle pronounc'd, Portæ fœlicitatis ad Tyrannidem clauſæ. Tyrants be cruel and bloody; but this King, by the Teſtimony of his Enemies, was very Merciful and Mild; who confeſs he was of himſelf Gentle and affably diſpoſed. Theſe be their own Words.

Therefore, where tyrannical Acts be objected againſt him, they muſt be conceiv'd done by other Men, or by their Practice, or elſe before he was King; and what he did then, was not, nor cou'd be properly call'd Tyranny.

Amongſt thoſe they impute to him when he was King, which are call'd Tyrannies, the Beheading Henry Stafford Duke of Buckingham was the chiefeſt; yet that Act, the Cauſe and juſt Motives of it being well peruſed, cannot be cenſured Tyranny; rather due and neceſſary Juſtice: For if the King had not put down the Duke, the Duke would have put down the King. 1485.

Then it is objected, he bare a tyrannical Hand over his Nephew Edward Earl of Warwick. True it is, he ſent him to Shery-Hutton, a goodly and pleaſant Houſe of his own in Yorkſhire, where he had Liberty, large Diet, all Pleaſure and Safety; and if that were Impriſonment, it was a Priſon Curtoiſe (as John Froiſard ſaith) yet this muſt not be leſs than Tyranny, according to the Stile of Sir Thomas Moor. When King Henry VII. as ſoon as he had got the Crown, ſent this young Prince to the Tower, and afterwards cut off his Head; yet that was no Tyranny, after Sir Thomas Moor. But our King James (of ever happy Memory) hath thought it an Act of ſo much deteſtation, that particularly he proteſted againſt it, and ſhewed another temper of Juſtice and Power in his Royal Clemency to certain Noble Perſons in one of his Kingdoms, who being Regal Titulars, and pretending Title to the Crown there (as deſcended from ſome King of that Country) his gracious and pious Inclination was ſo far from ſeeking their Ruin (or ſo much as the reſtraining them) that he ſuffer'd their Liberty, with poſſeſſion of what they had.

Comes Arund. viva voce. K. James.

Then they call the Puniſhment of Jane Shore a Tyranny: A common and notorious Adultereſs (as the Duke of Buckingham, who knew her very well, cenſured her) which ſhe deſerv'd ſo juſtly, that it was rather favourable, than ſevere or tyrannous. Jane Shore.

Next, the Death of William Collingborn is made one of his Tyrannies; who (as ſome trivial Romancers ſay) was hanged for making a Satyrical Rhime; when the truth is, he had committed Treaſon, and was arraign'd and condemn'd of High Treaſon, as may be yet ſeen in the Record; and then it was Juſtice and not Tyranny.

Annonymus Furis peritus in Apologia K. R. III.

Another Proof againſt their groſs Paralogiſms, take from this Obſervation made by Demoſthenes: Tyrannus res eſt inimica Civibus, legibus contraria. But K. Richard was ever indulgent to his People, careful to have the Laws duly obſerv'd; his making ſo many good ones, being an evident argument of his love to Law and Juſtice. It is further obſerv'd, that Tyrants contemn good Counſel, are opinionated of their own Wiſdoms, and obſtinate to determine all Matters by themſelves.

Axiom. polit. cap. 219. Sententiæ Arbicæ. The Plaintiffs being call'd by the Greeks Ἰδιοβέλευται, that is, Self-councellors, who ſay they are Natura plerumque occulti & inſidioſi, & Arte, & Aſtu, ea Tegere, & diſſimulare conantur, quæ agunt, non communicantes quicquid de ſuis Conciliis, aut rebus cum aliis, nec ab aliis Concilium petentes, neq; admittentes, ſed tantum ſua Concilia ſequuntur.

That is,

" By Nature for the moſt part ſecret and
" cloſe, and alſo treacherous; and by Deceit
" and Artifice endeavour to cover and diſſemble
" what they do, not communicating any of " their Deſigns or Affairs to others, nor asking
" or admitting of any Advice, but are only
" manag'd by their own Counſels.

Alſo Eraſmus hath this Axiom; Nullo Concilio quicquam magnæ rei aggredi, tyrannicum eſt.

But King Richard neither did, nor would do any thing of importance, without Conſultation with the wiſeſt and nobleſt. And if in any Matters he had deliver'd his Judgment, yet his manner (as 1485. (as his Detractors confess) was, to say in the End and Conclusion; My Lord, this is my mind; if any of you know what may else be better, I shall be ready to change it: for I am not wedded to my own will. Thus Sir Thomas Moor.

Caligula spent 230 Millions of Crowns in less than a Year. Nero said that there was no use of Money but for Riots and prodigal Expences.

Lastly, Largition and excessive Expences are thought Vices proper to Tyrants; the rather, because the Roman Tyrants, for their extreme Excesses, were call'd Monstra & prodigia, & lues Imperii, pestes reipublicæ, &c. As Caligula, Nero, Vitellius, Domitian, Commodus, Heliogabalus, Caracalla, &c.

K. Richard in this was like Julius Cæsar, who knowing by certain intelligence the conspiracy and Conspirators against his Life, also the time and place of Execution, yet he seem'd to slight and not regard it.

King Richard was ever held to be frugal, with the preservation of his Honour; nor can they tax him with Palliardise, Luxury, Epicurism, nor Gluttony, Vices following many Tyrants; but moderate and temperate in all his Actions and Appetites; which is confess'd, and therefore needeth no further Proof. Indeed, it had been Advantage and Safety to him in the Event, if he had been a Tyrant a while; for then he might have preserv'd his Life and Kingdom, and given a timely Check to the Practice of Bishop Morton, the Marques Dorset, Earl of Devon, and his Brother the Bishop, the Lord Talbot, the Lord Stanley, and his Brother Sir William Stanley, with the Countess of Richmond his Wife, and the rest. But his Remisness and Patience bred his Ruin, not his Tyranny; that had been his Protection.

* K. Richard's Virtues.

And now the black Curtain of Malice and Detraction is drawn, let us see this King in his proper Royalty and *Virtues, casting up the general and particular Notions of a good King and happy Government; then peruse what was wanting in him.

Justice Shelly commendeth the Laws of K. Rich. 3. to Cardinal Woolsey. Vide Joh. Stow in H. 8. p. 882. Chron. MS. in Quarto, apud Dom. R. Cotton.

First then, There is necessarily required proper to Empire, Wisdom, Justice, Fortitude, Beauty, Magnificence, Temperance, and Piety.

That he had Wisdom and Prudence, need no other witness, than his wise and provident managing, both of his own private Affairs and Government of the Publick. Also in the military Actions, in which he was try'd, both as a Subject and a King; his Adversaries can allow him to be a wise, prudent, politick, and heroical Prince; his Wisdom appearing with his Justice, very clearly in the good Laws he made, acknowledg'd and honourably predicated by our Reverend and most Learned Professors of the Laws.

For his further knowledge and love of Justice, there can be no fairer Argument than his Desire and Custom to sit in the Courts of Justice, hearing and distributing Justice indifferently to all Men.

And when he made his Progress into Yorkshire, being inform'd there of some Extortioners and foul Offenders, who were apprehended, not tried, he caused the Law to take the just current, giving strict Charge and Commandment to all Officers of Justice, for just Administration to all Men, without Partiality or private Respects.

The Fortitude and Magnanimity of this Prince (tho' low of Stature) were so great and famous, as they need no Trumpet or Præcony, being bred from his youth in martial Actions: And the Battels of Barnet, Exham, Doncaster; the second of St. Albans and of Tewksbury, will give him the reputation of a Souldier and Captain.

Being made General of the King's Armies into Scotland, he prevail'd happily in his Expedition, and particularly recover'd that famous and strong Hold of Berwick, which King Henry VI. had so weakly let go. 1485.

Sir Thom. Moor. Dr. Morton.

And in this you shall hear the Elogy of One that was loth to speak much in his favour, yet occasion forc'd him to speak his knowledge, tho' coldly and sparingly; "King Richard was no "ill Captain in the War; he had sundry Vi- "ctories, and sometimes Overthrows, but ne- "ver by his own Default, for want of Hardiness "or Politick Order. Whereunto he addeth, concerning his Bounty; "Free, was he call'd, "of Dispence, and Liberal somewhat above his "power. To which I will add one Elogy more, above all for credit and authority, recorded in an Act of Parliament, and address'd to him in the name of the whole High Court of Parliament, in these Words; "We consider your Parl. anno R. 3. "great Wit, Prudence, Justice, and Courage; "and we know by experience, the memorable "and laudable Acts done by you in several Bat- "tels for the Salvation and Defence of this "Realm.

Here followeth another general and memorable Testimony of him, and of more regard and honour, because it is averr'd by One that knew him from his Youth, the Duke of Buckingham, who (after Richard was made King, and this Duke became ill affected) acknowledg'd to Bp. Morton, in private Speeches between them, (a) 'That he thought King Richard, from his 'first knowledge even to that time, a Man clean 'without Dissimulation, tractable, and without 'Injury; and that for these Respects he was very 'desirous to advance him, and labour'd earnestly 'to make him Protector. Therefore, whatsoever the Duke said after in reproach of the King, it may justly be thought to proceed from Spleen and Malice.

Morton, Moor. apud Stow, p. 774.

There is this Commendation of his Eloquence and pleasing Speech; which tho' no Regal Virtue, yet it is an Ornament to the greatest Princes and commendable. The Prior of Croyland repeating the Dispute of a Controversie between the two Brothers, George Duke of Clarence and this Richard of Gloucester, at the Council-Table before the King their Brother, sitting in his Chair of State, relates it thus:

Eloquentia Principibus maxime est ornamento. Cic. de finibus.

Post suscitatas, inter Duces Fratres, discordias, tot utrinque rationes acutissimæ allegatæ sunt in presentia Regis (sedentis pro Tribunali in Camera Concilii) quod omnes circumstantes, etiam periti Legum eam orationis abundantiam ipsis principibus in suis propriis causis adesse mirabantur, &c.

That is,

"A Dispute arising betwixt the two Dukes, "being Brothers, so many pregnant Reasons "were adduced by them on either Side, in the "Presence of the King, sitting in his Chair of "State in the Council Chamber, that all who "were there, even such as were well skill'd in "the Laws, did admire that fluency of Speech "which the Princes had in Readiness in their "own Cause, &c.

The Praise of the three princely Brothers.

Then speaking of the excellent Wits, extraordinary Knowledge and Gifts of these three Brothers, maketh this honourable Præcony: Hi tres Germani, Rex, & duo Duces, tam excellenti ingenio valebant, ut si discordare non voluissent suiculus ille triplex difficillime rumperetur. i. e.

(a) His kissing the two young Princes when they were deliver'd up to him by their Mother, and his shewing his wither'd Arm as he wish'd, are no great Proofs of his Sincerity.

1485. "These three Brothers, the King, and the "two Dukes, were of a Wit so excelling, that "if they had not disagreed amongst themselves, "such a threefold Cord cou'd not, without the "greatest difficulty, have been broken asunder.

The good Works of King Richard.

Let us look upon his charitable, religious and magnificent Works.

Joh. Stow, Annal.

He founded a Collegiate Church of Priests in Middleham in Yorkshire; another College of Priests in London in Tower-street, near to the Church call'd Our Lady Berking. He built a Church or Chapel in Towton in Gloucestershire, a Monument of his Thankfulness to Almighty God, for the happy and great Victory his Brother had upon the Partisans of the Family of Lancaster, and the Sons of Henry VI. who before slew Richard Duke of York, King designate, and Father of these two Kings.

Polid. lib. 25.

He founded a College in York, convenient for the Entertainment of an Hundred Priests.

Richard lov'd not Wichwood for his Brothers unhappy Marriage.

He disforested a great part of the Forest of Wichwood, and other vast Woods between Woodstock and Bristow, for the Good and Benefit of the People of Oxfordshire and the Places adjacent.

He built the high Stone Tower at Westminster, (which at this Day is a Work of good use.) And when he had repair'd and fortify'd the Castle of Carlisle, he founded and built the Castle of Penrith in Cumberland.

He manumised many Bond-men.

In Rot. in domo Conversorum, Ann. 1 R. 3.

For the better encouragement of the Easterling-Hanses (their Trade being beneficial and profitable to this Kingdom) he granted them some good Privileges, as Polidor writeth.

Charles the Great instituted the College and Society of Armorists calling them Heralds of Ehr and Halten, (Dutch or Franchish words) and not of Hero's.

He also first founded the College and Society of Heralds, and made them a Corporation; and (as the words in the Charter are) he ordain'd it, Ut sint in perpetuum Corpus Corporatum in re & nomine, habeant Successionem perpetuam, &c. (a taste of his love to Honour, and his noble Care for the conservation of Nobility, Chevalry and Gentry.) Which Corporation this King establish'd by his Royal Charter, and plac'd the Heralds in an ancient fair House, which was call'd Yorkime sometimes, after commonly Cole-harbour, situate upon the Thames; ordaining four Kings at Arms, by the Names and Titles of John Writh, Garter; Thomas Holme, Clarenceux; John Moor, Norway; and Richard Champney, Gloucester.

For Wales, I have seen the Charter wherewith the King created first Richard Champney, Esq; King at Arms, by the Title and Name of Gloucester, dated Anno 1 R. III. at Westminster, in the Month of March, when the Charter of the Foundation was granted.

He further establish'd, That these four Kings at Arms and the rest of the Heralds, who are in the Charter call'd Heraldi & Prosecutores sive Pursevandi, should lodge, live and common together, in that House, where the Rolls, Monuments and Writings (appertaining to the Office and Art of Heraldry and Armory) should be kept; giving also Lands and Tenements for the perpetual maintainiug of a Chaplain or Chantry Priest, to say and sing Service every Day, and to pray for the King, Queen and Prince, and for their Souls when they were dead.

Lastly, He gave sundry good Privileges and Immunities to the said Corporation: Which Charter was kept continually in the Office until within these few Years, but now is in another place: The want of it importeth nothing, being the Duplicate is upon Record in the Archives, kept in the Convert-house, now call'd the Rolls. It was confirm'd by the Parliament, and dated 2°. die Martii, anno Regni primo, apud Westmonasterium, Baron: And underneath was written, Per breve de privato Sigillo, de datu predicto, autoritati Parliamenti. 1485.

He also built or repair'd some part of the Tower of London towards the Thames; in memory whereof, there be yet his Arms impaled with those of the Queen his Wife, standing upon the Arch adjoyning to the Sluce-gate.

He began many other good Works, which his sudden Fate prevented; as Polidor thus witnesseth.

Richardus Tertius multa opera publica & privata inchoavit, quæ immaturâ morte præreptus non perfecit. Which Works and Monuments of Piety shew not the Acts of a Tyrant. Polidor Virgil, being neither Yorkist nor Lancastrian, speaks much in commendation of his pious and charitable Disposition; to which I refer the Readers, and put it to their indifferent Judgments, How many of those call'd Good Kings, have exceeded him in their longer and prosperous Time, being in quiet possession too of their Crown and Kingdoms? Let me add for a Corollary, what that of the worthy Prelate Archibald Qubitlaw (Chief Secretary, and a Privy Councellor of Scotland) in his Oration, when he was One of the Commissioners for a conclusion of a Peace and Marriage between Prince James, eldest Son to the King of Scotland, and the Lady Ann, Daughter to John de la Poole; from whence I have collected these.

Serenissime Princeps,

Pacem & Uxorem neptem Regis petit.

UNA me res consolatur, & juvat, tua (scil.) in omni virtutis genere celeberrima fama per omnem Orbis terrarum ambitum disseminata, tuæ etiam innatæ benignitatis clarissima præstansq; humanitas, tua mansuetudo, liberalitas, fides, summa justitia, incredibilis animi magnitudo, tua non humana, sed pene divina sapientia, te non modo singulis facilem, verum vulgo & popularibus affabilem præbes & quibus virtutibus altâque prudentiâ cuncta & pronunciata & dicta in meliora commutas. Serenissimus Princeps Rex Scotorum, Dominus meus, qui te alto amore prosequitur, te desiderat, tuam, amicitiam & affinitatem affectat, suprâ captum cogitationis meæ; si quid a me erratum erit, tuis & divinis virtutibus, quibus Commercium cum Cœlestibus numinibus & societatem contraxeris, tribuendum putato.

Richardus fuit Statura parva.

Faciem tuam summo Imperio & Principatu dignam inspicit, quam moralis & Heroica virtus illustrat, de te dici prædicarique potest quod Thebanorum Principi inclitissimo Poeta his verbis attribuit.

Nunquam tantum animum natura minori corpore, nec tantas visa est includere vires. Major in exiguo regnabat corpore virtus. In te enim sunt rei militaris, virtus, peritia, fœlicitas, & autoritas, quæ omnia in optimo exercitus principe Cicero requirit.

In te (Serenissime Princeps) præclari Regis & Imperatoris præcepta ita concurrunt, ut nihil ad tuam Bellicam, aut domesticam virtutem cujusquam oratoris virbis apponi possit.

Tu igitur (Serenissime Domine & Princeps) de ineunda inter te & nostrum Principem charitate & amicitia, sic age, ut Angli & Scoti dilectionis respectu nullum penitus discrimen habeatur, sed in unum amoris & benevolentiæ vinculum videantur esse connexi, sic numerabiles commoditates ex tui, & nostri populi delectione, dulci connubio, unione, Matrimonio, & Affinitate consurgent.

In freta dum fluvii current, dum montibus umbræ
Lustrabunt, connexa polus dum sidera pascet.
Dum juga montis aper, fluvios dum Piscis amabit,
Dumque Thymo pascentur apes, dum rore cicadæ,
Semper honos nomenque tuum, laudesque manebunt.

In

1484. In English thus;

Most Serene Prince,

" ONE thing is to me at this time favourable and encouraging, which is your " Majesties most high Renown in every Kind of " excelling Qualities, extended even into the " remotest Corners of the World; also the " most illustrious and surpassing Excellency of " your innate Goodness and Generosity, your " Clemency, Liberality, Truth, great Justice, " Magnanimity surpassing Belief, your not human, but almost divine Wisdom; you shew " your self gentle to all, and affable, even to " the meanest of your People; by which Virtues, and by your great Prudence, whatever is " spoken and pronounc'd is by your Majesty favourably construed and accepted. The most Serene " Prince the K. of the Scots, my Master, out of the " high Love and Esteem he has for your Majesty, is desirous of your Friendship and Alliance, even beyond what I am able to express; " the Faults that I may chance to commit, " they find a Cause as well as an Excuse in your " Divine Virtues, whereby you are become like " unto, and are, as it were, entred into the " Society of, the celestial Inhabitants.

" He beholds in your Face a princely Majesty " and Authority Royal, sparkling with the illustrious Beams of all Moral and Heroical " Virtues. To you may not unfitly be apply'd, what was said by the Poet of a most " renowned Prince of the Thebans;

——So great a Soul, such Strength of Mind
Sage Nature ne'r to a less Body joyn'd.

" For in your Majesty are Military Prowess, " Skill, Success, and Authority; all which are " by Cicero requir'd in an able General of an " Army.

" In you (most Serene Prince) all the Excellent Qualifications of a Good King and Great " Commander are happily united, insomuch, " that to the Perfection of your Military and " Civil Accomplishments, nothing could be " added, even by the highest Rhetorical Flights " of a most consummate Orator.

" You therefore (most Serene Prince) will be " pleas'd in your Royal Wisdom, to take such " Measures, upon your Part, for establishing a " Love and Friendship betwixt you and our " Prince, that with respect to mutual Love, " the Difference betwixt an English and a Scotish Man may not henceforth be remembred, " but both Nations may be united by the Bond " of Love and Benevolence. So, from the " Love, sweet Agreement, Union, Alliance, " and as it were Marriage of your People and " these of ours, unto both innumerable Advantages shall accrue.

" While Flouds to th' Sea do roul, and Moun" tains high
" Cast sable Shades, Stars sparkle in the Sky,
" Wild Boars on Hills, Fish wanton in the " Streams,
" Bees feed on Thyme, at Titan's later Beams
" Locusts on Dew, your high renowned Name
" Shall ever live, and fly on Wings of Fame.

But what is this, or more, to Malice and Detraction, that haunt him to his Death; and after that, making the Catastrophe, or last tragical Act of his Life at Bosworth-field, an immediate Stroke of the Divine Vengeance, for such Offences as they please to particular from Women or superstitious Clerks, whose Natures startle at the noise of War and Martial Trial, to whose Fears and Weakness such Reasons would sound tolerable. But if Bishop Morton and Sir Thomas Moor (altho' they were Men of the long Robe) had consider'd with whom they conversed, and where they most liv'd; how could they forget, that to Die valiantly in the Field, for Country, Life and Friends, was always held a glorious Farewel to the World; or what infinite numbers of virtuous and most noble Captains have fallen so by the Sword and fate of War. 1485. To be slain in War is no evil or unhappy Death.

Lampridius affirmeth, That all the best Men have died violent Deaths: And what higher Quarrel could call any heroical Spirit, than K. Richard's fighting for a Crown, Kingdom, and all his happy Fortunes here? God hath many times taken away Princes, and changed the Government of Kingdoms for the Iniquities of the People; why then should not King Richard's Fate be held in a modest Scale until we can better know or judge it? Nor can it be safe to enquire, or peremptorily to determine further after God's Proceedings in such Cases. He that owes him no Malice (things look'd upon thro' judgment and charity) may with more justice say, He died valiantly and in a just Quarrel, when many of his Enemies fell by Death's more vile, and shameful Executions. Optimos quosq; violenta morte consumptos esse affirmat. Lam. Alexander.

But he that hath but a reasonable pittance of Humanity, will censure no Man's Life by the manner of his Death; for many good and holy Men have suffer'd by violent Deaths; tho' it be this Prince's fortune to fall under the ill Affections of envious Pens, more than many that committed more publick and prov'd Crimes than he, which wanted much of his Virtues and Desert. K. Richard was slain Aug. 22. 1493. when he had reigned 2 years and 5 Months, accounting his Protectorship; and about the 37th year of his Age. K. Hen. 1.

Examine him with Henry I. the good Clerk and learned Prince, but so covetous and ambitious, that he could not be content to usurp in this Kingdom the Right and Primogeniture of his elder Brother Robert Courthose, but by force took the Dukedom of Normandy from him: And to make his Injuries more exact and monstrous, cast him into the Castle of Glouceſter, there kept him in cruel Durance, and caused his Eyes to be put out; so wearied him to most miserable Death.

King John, by the general voice, is charg'd with the Murder of Arthur Plantagenet, the Son of his eldest Brother, and so the next Prince in right of Blood to King Richard I. King John.

And it is written by good Authors, That Edward III. was not only privy and consenting to the deposing the King his Father (a King anointed) but also to his Massacre. And because Edward Plantagenet Earl of Kent, Protector, and his Uncle, moved him to restore the Crown to his Father Edward II. he call'd him Traytor, and cut off his Head at Westminster. K. Edw. 3.

How King Henry IV. caused King Richard II. (the true and anointed King) to be cruelly butcher'd at Pomfret, is too notorious; and this was Scelera sceleribus tueri. K. Hen. 4.

King Edward IV. is accused of the Murder and Death of the King Saint Henry, and of Edward Prince of Wales his Son. (Ut supra) K. Edw. 4. Seneca de Clementia

King Henry VII. (altho' amongst the best of Kings in his general Character) is not thought guiltless of that Crimen sacrum vel regale, in cutting off Edward Plantagenet Earl of Warwick, an Innocent. K. Hen. 7.

Edwardum Filium Ducis Clarenciæ, Puerum & Infantem, in suam, & suorum securitatem capite plexit. Gul. Cambden in Brit. & Corn.

And

1485. And to ſecure his Eſtate, had more than learnt other ſmart Rules of Policy. That reach of State upon Philip of Auſtrich, Duke of Burgundy, King of Caſtile and Arragon, is not the leaſt memorable.

Grafton. Holinſhead. This Prince Philip was by croſs Fortune put into the King's Hands: Purpoſing out of Flanders to go into Spain, with the Queen his Wife, took Shipping at Sluce, and paſſing by the Coaſts of England, was by a Tempeſt forced for his Safety to put into the Port of Weymouth in Dorſetſhire: The Queen being ill, and diſtemper'd much with the Storm, was compell'd to make ſome ſtay there.

Sir John Carew, and Sir Thomas Trenchard (principal Men in thoſe Parts) gave ſpeedy Intelligence of this to the King, who was glad of the Accident, and purpoſed to make good uſe of it, as ſpeedily returning his Command to give them all honourable Entertainment; but not ſuffer them to depart, until he had ſeen and ſaluted them.

The Duke ignorant of this, as ſoon as the Queen and the reſt had recover'd and refreſh'd themſelves, thought he was only to give thoſe Knights Thanks, and take his Leave; which they by way of courteſie and requeſt interpoſe, in behalf of the King's vehement deſire to ſalute him and the Queen: a Motion the Duke much preſt to be excuſed from, as the Neceſſity of his Journey ſtood; but the Intreaty was ſo imperious, he muſt ſtay, and alter his Journey for Windſor, to meet the King, who received him there in a Magnificent manner; and at the height of a Feaſt, propounds a Suit to the Duke for Edmund de la Pool (then in his Dominions) a Pretender to the Crown of England, and not ſo ſoundly affected to him: A Suit of a harſh Expoſition, as the Duke apprehended it, and to the blemiſh of his Honour and Piety, as he nobly urged: but no Argument had Vertue, nor no Vertue Argument enough to excuſe it; the King muſt have him, or the Duke muſt ſtay. Caſt upon this Extream (and foreſeeing what Diſadvantages were upon him, ſome honourable Conditions granted, that he ſhould neither lay Puniſhment nor Death upon him) he gave his Promiſe to ſend him, and the King ſtrictly and religiouſly bound himſelf to the Exceptions.

The Duke accordingly ſent this de la Pool into England; who upon his Arrival was deliver'd to the Tower; but his Life not toucht until the King lay a Dying; then he equivocated his Vow by a Mental Reſervation, enjoyning his Son after his Death to cut off his Head; which was done when he came to be King, and was held ſome taint to them both; though the Son held himſelf acquit and warranted by the Example of King Solomon, who was made the Inſtrument of ſuch another ſubtil Slaughter by his Father David, that thought he kept himſelf by Equivocation: Examples not to be imitated by any Chriſtian Prince, being a Sin; and Sins are to be avoided, not imitated.

The eldeſt Brother of theſe de la Pools, John de la Pool, Heir to the Duke of Suffolk, and Head of this Family, was Slain caſually at the Battel of Stoke; and is he who, as neareſt Kinſman to King Richard III. was Proclaim'd Heir apparent. The Siſter of theſe Princely de la Pools, the Lady Katharine, was kept cloſe Priſoner in the Tower, until Grief and Sorrow bowed her to the Grave.

Grafton. Nor is it much from our Purpoſe to note, that the chief Plantagenets, namely, the Children of King Edward IV. had but cold Influences then; for the Lady Bridget was thruſt into a Nunnery at Dartford, chiefly (as it was thought) that ſhe ſhould live Sterile, and die without Iſſue. The Lady Cecily was married to a baſe Fellow, that ſo her Iſſue might be ignoble and contemptible; the Wrong being the greater, in regard ſhe was offer'd Matches to her Quality; the King of Scotland propounding Prince James unto her; and the French King Lewis demanded her for the Dauphin Charles of France. 1485. Polidor. lib. 4.

It was obſerved too, That this King was but an Unkind and Severe Husband to his Queen (indeed:) they had all but ſhort Lives; and our Stories report he pick'd a Quarrel with the Queen-Dowager-Mother, for an old and venial Errour, becauſe ſhe deliver'd her Son Richard to the Protector; for which there was a Confiſcation upon all her Goods, Chattels and Revenues, and ſhe confin'd to Bermondſey-Abbey, where ſhe liv'd not long, Care and Grief untwiſting the Thread of her ſad Fate. And when Death had ſeized him from all the Glories and Policies of this World, his Son ſucceeds; and then, Reſiduum Locuſtæ, Bruchus comedit; & reſiduum Bruchi comedit Rubigo: for, what remain'd of the Houſe of York, he gave the laſt blow to: and after the diſpatch of the aforeſaid Edmund de la Pool, caus'd the Lady Margaret Plantagenet Counteſs of Salisbury, then Daughter and Heir of George Duke of Clarence, to be Attainted of Treaſon by Act of Parliament, and condemned Unheard being dragged to the Block barbarouſly by the Hair of her Head, tho' above Threeſcore Years in Age, Anno 33 *H*8. Not long after, Sir Henry Pool her eldeſt Son was put to Death, and her Son Reynold Pool was attainted of Treaſon with her (no Man knowing what the Treaſon was) but got ſuddenly out of the Kingdom into Italy, where he became much favoured by the Princes there, and by the Popes afterward made Cardinal, and highly renowned (in thoſe Times) for his Learning, Piety and other noble Merits. Richard Pool, another Son of the Counteſs of Salisbury, fled, and liv'd a baniſh'd Man in foreign Countries; yet at the height of a good Reputation, until he was Slain at the Battel of Pavia.

Altho' the Lady Anne and the Lady Katharine were well married, that may not be alledged here; for they were beſtowed in the Time of Rich. 3. the one to the Lord Haward, after D. of Norfolk, the other to the Earl of Devon. Robert Glover. Joel, c. 1. Dominus Fitz. Baro. Lumley, viva voce.

Theſe be ſad Pauſes, which my Pen but touches at, to note the Partiality of ſome on one ſide, and the Malignity of ſome on the other ſide, who have made King Richard the worſt of all Princes; when other of our own have had as great an Appetite of Empire, whoſe Fames and ſacred Names we gratulate with Honour.

Nor let my juſt and plain Meaning be miſtaken, which urges nothing in Diſlike or Exprobation that King Henry the Seventh had the Crown, whom our Age muſt acknowledge a Wiſe, Provident and Religious Prince, The Reſtorer of the ancient Line of the Britiſh Kings to their Reign and Kingdom, Nephew of King Henry the Sixth by his Grandmother Queen Katharine, Widow of King Henry the Fifth, and Mother of King Henry the Sixth, and of his Brother Uterine Edmund Tudor Earl of Richmond, the Father of this King Henry the Seventh; and ſo he was Nephew alſo to Charles the Seventh King of France. I only conceive he took it by too violent a hand, not ſtaying tempus bene placiti.

And here I may fitly take occaſion to make up a Defect or Brack covertly imputed to the Titles of the Normans, and Princes of York, by our vulgar Hiſtorians and Chroniclers.

The ſundry great Titles of our King to the Crown of England.

And firſt, we are to ſuppoſe, If there be, it grew by the Errour of King Edward's Marriage, by which they hold that Title was weakned (at the leaſt blemiſh'd) but that could have no continuance,

1485. tinuance, being made sound again as soon as King Richard came to reign, and after cured and confirmed by the mighty Power of sundry Parliaments, by which it was made as strong and firm as ever; besides the aid of the Dispensations Apostolical (in those times Sacred and Authentick.) And without that (if need were) our King now reigning hath other Royal Rights, more than funiculus Triplex; some more ancient, authentick and just, therefore more secured, and of more prosperous Hopes than that Norman Title, which was a violent acquest of the Sword, and a Purchase made by Blood, so consequently none of the Best; which was well conceived by that great Macedon, when he said, Non est diuturna possessio in quam gladio inducimur. Neither would it avail in this behalf to cite or avouch the Donation of this Kingdom, which the Confessor is said to have made to William the Conqueror, being to no Purpose, because that Gift or Legacy was disclaimed and disallow'd by the Barons of this Land, and found to be void.

Alex. apud Curtium, lib. 8.

Yet Time now, and Prescription, have also made that Title good; for Prescription hath power to Ratify and Confirm the Titles both of Princes and of Private Men.

But our King is the immediate and sole Lawful Heir of King Egbert, (who first gave the Name of England to this Land, and was absolute Lord of it) from him, by the glorious Kings, Edgar, Edmund, Athelstan, Alfred, and many others, as well Saxons and Angles, as Anglo-Saxons, the Right and Title of this Kingdom is duely descended and devolved to Edmund Ironside King of England, who was Father to the most Noble Clyto, Edward sirnam'd Exul, whose fair Daughter and Heir (a religious Lady) the Princess Margaret of England, was married to Malcom Canmoire King of Scotland; from which Ancient and happy Alliance, the King our Sovereign Lord is directly and certainly descended, and is the true and only Heir to the Rights and Titles which were without flaw; so the most ancient and famous Title, and Right of the first Kings of Britain are in him, being the next Heir of our last British King Henry Teudor, whose Genealogy I have seen derived from the Antick Kings of Britain, and from divers other British Princes. And this Henry Teudor (or the Seventh) to confirm all the Titles of this Kingdom unto his Claim, by the strongest and greatest Authority, procur'd them Decreed to him and to his Issue (so established in himself and his Posterity for ever) by Act of Parliament, in this manner and words.

Clyto, that is a Prince of the Blood.

Anno 1 H. 7. in Parliament in Novemb.

TO the Pleasure of Almighty God, and for the Wealth, and Prosperity, and Surety of this Realm of England, to the singular Comfort of all the Subjects of the same, and for avoiding all Ambiguities and Questions:

Be it Ordained, Established and Enacted by the Authority of this present Parliament, That the Inheritance of the Crown of the Realm of England, and also of France, with all the Preeminencies and Dignities Royal to the same appertaining, and all Liegances to the King belonging beyond the Seas, with the Appurtenances thereunto in any wise due or appertaining, To be, rest, remain and abide in the most Royal Person of our Sovereign Lord King Henry the Seventh, and in the Heirs of his Body lawfully coming perpetually, with the Grace of God, and so to endure, and in no other.

Which is also another Title to our King, Heir to Henry the Seventh.

And this Act was renew'd and firmly esta- 1485.
blish'd, for our Sovereign Lord King James, Anno regni primo.

Yet King Henry the Seventh obtain'd of the Pope another Title, Jure Belli.

All which Titles and Rights (which ever were appertaining to this Kingdom, and to the Empire of Britain) are coalesced and met in our Sovereign King; for he hath not only the Claims of the ancient Kings of Britain, of the Saxons, and Anglo-Saxons Kings, and of the Norman Race; but also the Titles and Rights of the Royal Families of York, of Lancaster, and of Wales, &c.

And (not as the least, in reference with these) he hath in possession also, those singular and particular Monuments of Empire and Reign, by some call'd Fata Regni, and Instrumenta & Monumenta Regno, & Imperio destinata.

The wedding Ring of England. Edwardus Ethelredus d'Rivallis.

One being the Ring of the accounted Holy King Edward, the Son of King Ethelred, which was consecrated and extraordinarily blessed by St. John Baptist in Palestine, and sent back by the King (as old Writers tell) which hath been religiously kept in the Abbey of Westminster, and is (as Tradition goes) the Ring which the Archbishop of Canterbury at the Inauguration and Consecration of the Kings, puts upon their Finger; call'd in our Stories, The Wedding Ring of England.

The fatal Stone.

The other Monument of the British Empire, is the Marble Stone whereupon Jacob laid his Head, when he had those Cœlestial and Mystical Visions mention'd in Holy Writ; which Stone was brought out of Palestine into Ireland, and from thence carried into Scotland by King Keneth; after translated to the City of Scone, and used for the Chair wherein the Kings sate at their Coronation; brought out of Scotland by Edward the First into England, as the best Historians of Scotland and England relate.

Hector, Boetius lib. 4. Et Geo. Buchan. Gul. Cambden.

Cathedram Marmoream Regibus Scotorum fatalem (in qua insidentes Scotorum Reges Coronare consueverant.) Rex Edwardus primus è Scona Londinum transtulit, & in Westmonasterio (ubi hodie visitur) deposuit.

That is, "The Marble Chair fatal to the "Scotish Kings, and in which they used to Sit "when they were crown'd, was by King Ed-"ward I. removed from Scone to London, and "placed in Westminster-Abbey, where it yet re-"mains.

It is set or born in a Chair of Wood, and for a perpetual Honour (upon a Table hanging in the Chappel at Westminster) this is writ:

—Si quid habet veri vel Chronica cana, fidesve
Clauditur hac Cathedra, Nobilis ille lapis,
—Ad caput, eximius Jacob quondam Patriarcha,
Quem posuit cernens numina mirifica;
Quem tulit à Scotis Edwardus primus, &c.

——If old Records say true, this Chair
That noble Stone inclos'd does bear,
On which the Patriarch did his Head recline
When he view'd Scenes all wondrous & divine;
This the first Edward did from Scotland bring.

In hoc lapide fatum regni Scotiæ continetur. Gor. Buchan.

George Buchananus saith, The People are seriously perswaded that in this Stone (which he calleth Lapidem Marmoreum rudem) the Fate of the Kingdom is contained, and that fatum Regni is thus understood; viz. What King of Scotland soever is Lord of that Stone, and Sovereignly possessed thereof, shall be King, and reign in 1485. in the Country where he findeth that Stone: Thus told in a Prophetical Diſtich.

Ni fallat fatum, Scotus quocunque locatum
Inveniet lapidem, regnare tenetur ibidem.

Unleſs old Saws do fail, and Wizzards Wits go blind,
The Scots ſhall have the Rule where e'er this Stone they find.

Scotus primus Rex Scotiæ, ut Anglus Gallus Hiſpanus, &c. pro Rex Angliæ Galliæ Hiſpan. &c.

Which Prophecy was accompliſh'd in King James, when he came firſt into England: for his Titles were not only funiculus triplex qui difficile rumpitur; but alſo funiculus multiplex qui nunquam rumpitur. And may thoſe Titles for ever be eſtabliſh'd in his Loins, according to that of the Heavenly Meſſenger, Regnum perpetuum, & cujus non eſt finis. Amen.

Thus I have led you thorough the various Relations, and Tragical Interchanges of this Prince's Life, to his laſt Act and Place; where, (after Revenge and Rage had ſatiated their barbarous Cruelties upon his dead Body) they gave his Royal Earth a Bed of Earth; honourably, appointed by the Order of King Henry the Seventh, in the chief Church of Leiceſter, call'd St. Maries, belonging to the Order and Society of the Grey Friers; the King in ſhort time after cauſing a fair Tomb of mingled colour'd Marble, adorn'd with his Statue to be erected thereupon, to which ſome grateful Pen had alſo deſtined an Epitaph, the Copy whereof (never fixt to his Stone) I have ſeen in a recorded Manuſcript-Book chain'd to a Table in a Chamber in the Guild-hall of London: which (the Faults and Corruptions being amended) is thus repreſented, together with the Title thereunto prefix'd as I found it. 1485.

Could this King be brought off from the horrid Imputation that lies upon his Memory, of much Bloodſhed, Oppreſſion and groſs Hypocriſy, to gain and keep the Crown, one might judge him a good King. For in ſeveral Paſſages of his Reign, and Publick Declarations by him made, he expreſs'd a Care of the good Eſtate of his People, and a Concern to have Sin and Wickedneſs checked, and carried himſelf with a Regard to Learning and Religion. Here follow a few Inſtances.

Upon the hurting of a Conſtable of Glouceſter in the Execution of his Office, the King taking particular Notice thereof, and of the Occaſion, ſent a Special Letter to the chief Officers there, Viz.

" RICHARD, &c. To the Maior, Sheriffs and Aldermen of our Town of Glouceſter, that now be, or that " hereafter for the time ſhal be, Gretyng. Foraſmoch as we wel underſtond, that by means of Retaindors, and re- " ceyving and wearyng of Lyveries, of clothing Baieux, and other Signes, contrary to the Effects of the Statutes by " our Noble Progenitors heretofore ordeyned and eſtablyſhed in that behalf, grete and manie Divyſions and Incon- " venyences have ryſen and grown in dyvers places within this oure Realme, to the grete troubles and annoyance of " oure Subjects of the ſame: And eſpeciallie now of late among you within our ſaid Towne by evyl dyſpoſed Gen- " telmen, Jamys Gyſſe, John Burdet, Edward Brigge, and others in making Aſſault upon oure Officers, a Conſtable of " oure ſaid Towne, not onely beaten and grevouſly maimed, but alſo partly in dyſpair of his Lyfe, as it is to us " ſhewed, to oure full grete dyſpleaſur. Wherefor We woll and charge you, that if ye have commytted them or any " of them to Priſon, yee do ſurely kepe them there without Bayle or Mainprize, to ſoche tyme as ye ſhal undre- " ſtonde oure further pleaſur in that behaulf. And if No, to endeavour you thereunto. And over thys, that yee in " nowyſe from henceforth ſuffre any Perſon dwellyng among you in oure ſaid Town or Franchiſes, for to uſe or wear " Lyvery of Clothyng bagien, ſigne or other Connizance, of the Gyft of any Maner of Perſon of whate State, De- " gree or Condition ſoever he be, but only Oures. And that upon the Peine of Forfeiturs of their Lyberties, and " Franchiſes. And if ye ſhal know any preſuming, or attempting ſo to do, that yee forthwith without delay com- " myt him in lykewiſe to ſure Priſon, and ſo remayne as above. Fayle yee not to accomplyſh this at your uttermoſt " peryl. Yeven at London the 6th of December.

For the checking of Vice and promoting of Sobriety and Vertue, both in Temporal and Spiritual Men, the King wrote this Circular Letter to the Biſhops.

" Reverend Fadre in God, Right Truſtie and Welbeloved, We grete you wele; Aſcertaynyng you that amonges " othre oure ſeculer beſyneſſes and Cares, oure principal Entent and fervent deſire is to ſee vertue and clenneſs of " Lyving to be avaunced, encreſed and multiplied, and vices and all othre thyngs repugnant to vertue, provoking " the high Indignation and fereful Diſpleaſure of God, to be repreſſed and adnulled. And this perfitely followed " and put in execution by Perſones of high Eſtate, Pre-eminence & Dignitie not oonly enduceth Perſones of lower " degree to take therof example, and to enſue the ſame, but alſo therby the great and infinite Goodneſſe of God is " made placable, and graciouſlie enclyned to the exaudition of our Peticions and Prayers. And foraſmoche as it is nota- " rily knowen, that in every Juriſdiction, as wele in their Paſtoral Cure, as othre, there be many, as wele of the Spi- " rituell Partie, as of the Temporall, delyring from the true weye of vertue and good lyving to the pernicious ex- " ample of othre, and lotheſomneſs of every weledilpoſed Perſone; WEE therefore woll and deſire you, and on " Goddes behalf inwardly exhort and require you, that according to the Charge of your Profeſſion, ye woll ſee, " within th' Auctoritie of your Juriſdiction, al ſuche Perſones as ſet aparte Vertue and promote the dampnable " execution of Sinne and Vices, to be refourmed, repreſſed and punyſhed condignely after their demeryts: not " ſparing for any love, favour, drede or affection; whether th'offendour be Spirituel or Temporell. Wherein ye " may be aſſured we ſhall yeve unto you oure favour, aide and aſſiſtence, if the Caas ſhall ſo require, and ſee to " the ſharpe Punyſhement of the Repugnatours and Interruptours, if any ſuche be.

" And if ye woll diligently applie you to thexecution and perfourmyng of this Matere, ye ſhall not oonly doo " unto God right acceptable pleaſure, but over that we ſhall ſee ſuche Perſones Spirituell as ben undre your Paſto- " rell Cure, noon otherwiſe to be entreated or punyſhed for their Offenſes, but according to the Ordenaunces " and Lawes of holy Churche. And if for the due execution of the Premiſſes any Complaint or Subgeſtion be made " unto us of you, We ſhall remytte the determynation therof unto the Courts of our Couſin tharchebiſhop of Canterbury " Cardinal. And thus proceding to thexecution hereof, ye ſhal doo unto your Self grete honour, and unto us right " ſinglier pleaſure. Yeven, &c. at Weſtminſter the X. day of Marche.

And his Care of the good Government and Eaſe of his Subjects, part of his Proclamation againſt his Rebells in Kent wil ſhew; Viz.

" And over this, the Kinges Highneſs is fully determyned to ſe due Adminiſtration of Juſtice throughout this " his Realme to be had: And to refourme, punyſhe, and to ſubdue al Extortion and Oppreſſions in the ſame. And " for that Cauſe woll, that at his comyng now into the ſaid County of Kent, that every Perſone dwellyng within the " ſame, that fyndeth hym grieved, oppreſſed, or unlawfullie wronged, doo make a Byll of hys Complaynt, and put " it to hys Highneſſe, and he ſhal be heard, and without delay have ſuche convenyent remedie as ſhall accord with " hys Lawes. For hys Grace is utterlie determyned, that al hys true Subjects ſhall lyve in reſt and quiet, & peace- " ably enjoy their Landes, Livelodes and Goodes accordyng to the Lawes of this hys Lande, which they be naturally " born to enherytt. And therfore the King chargeth and commaundeth, that no maner Man of whatſoever Condi- " tion or Degree he bee, trouble, hurt or ſpoyle any of hys ſaid Subjects, in their Bodies or Goodes, upon paine of " Death. And alſo, that no maner Man make ryke, or contrive any Quarrells to either for any old or new ran- " cour, hate, malyce or cauſe, or offre make, upon paine of Death. Nor alſo take Man's meat, Horſe meat, or any " Vittall or Stuff, without he pay truly therefore to the Owner therof, upon paine of leſing of his Horſe harneſſe, " Goods, and his Body to Priſon at the Kynges Wyll. And overthys, that no maner Man trouble or vex any Farmour, " or Occupier of any of the Landes that apperteyned to the abovenamed Rebells and Traitors, otherwyſe than by the " Kynges Commaundement or Authoritie. And that al ſuch Fermours and Occupiers reteyne and kepe ſtil in their " own hand the Revenews and Mony grown, and to grow of the ſaid Landes, unto the tyme they know the Kynges " pleaſure in that behalf. And the Kyng our ſaid Soveraign Lord chargeth ſtrait all his Mynifters, Officers and Sub- " jects within the ſame County, to reſiſt and withſtand al Perſones that woll attempt any thing contrary to thys " Proclamation, and them take and ſurely kepe in Priſon, unto they have from the Kynges Highneſs otherwyſe in " commaundement for their Delivery. F. S.

To

1485. To give you him in his equal Draught and Compoſition: He was of a mean or low Compact, but without Diſproportion and Unevenneſs either in Lineaments or Parts (as his ſeveral Pictures preſent him). His Aſpect had moſt of the Soldier in it; So his Natural Inclination (Complexions not uncertainly expounding our Diſpoſitions) but what wants of the Court-Planet, Effeminate Cenſurers think muſt needs be harſh and crabbed (and Envy will pick Quarrels with an Hair, rather than want Subject). The Judgment and Courage of his Sword-Actions, rendred him of a full Honour and Experience, which Fortune gratify'd with many Victories; never any Overthrows through his own Default, for lack of Valour or Policy. At Court, and in his general Deportment, of an affable Reſpect and tractable Clearneſs. In his Diſpence, of a magnificent liberal Hand, ſomewhat above his Power (as Sir Tho. Moor ſets down). And ſurely the many Churches, with other good Works he Founded, (more than any one former King did in ſo ſhort a time) muſt commend him Charitable and Religious, as the excellent Laws he made, do his Wiſdom and Strain of Government, which all Men confeſs of the beſt. So having (even from thoſe his bittereſt times) the Eſteem of a Valiant, Wiſe, Noble, Charitable and Religious Prince, why ſhould ours deprave him ſo much upon Truſt, and deny Works their Character and Place?

1485. Sir Thomas Moor. Duke Buckingham in his Speech to Mr. Morton.

---

Epitaphium Regis RICHARDI Tertii, Sepulti ad Leiceſtriam, juſſu, & ſumptibus Sti Regis Henrici Septimi.

HIC ego, quem vario Tellus ſub Marmore claudit,
Tertius a juſta voce Richardus eram;
Tutor eram Patriæ, Patrius pro jure Nepotis;
Dirupta, tenui regna Britanna, fide.
Sexaginta dies binis duntaxat ademptis
Ætateſque, tuli tunc mea Sceptra, duas.
Fortiter in Bello certans deſertus ab Anglis,
Rex Henrice, tibi, ſeptime, ſuccubui.
At ſumptu, pius ipſe, tuo, ſic oſſa dicaras,
Regem olimque facis Regis honore Coli.
Quatuor exceptis jam tantum, quinq; bis annis
Acta trecenta quidem, luſtra ſalutis erant,
Anteque Septembris undena luce Kalendas,
Redideram rubræ jura petita Roſæ.
At mea, quiſquis eris, propter commiſſa precare,
Sit Minor ut precibus pœna levata tuis.

Anno Dom. 1484. Die 21 Aug.

Deo O. M. Trino & Uno, ſit laus & gloria æterna. Amen.

Epigramma in RICHARDOS Angliæ Reges, ex vet. lib. M.S. tranſcriptum.

TRes ſunt Richardi quorum fortuna erat æqua,
In tribus æſcariis ſua cujus propria ſors eſt;
Nam Concors horum finis ſine poſteritate
Corporis, atque rapax vitæ modus, & violentus
Interitus fuerat; ſed major gloria primi,
Prælia terrarum qui geſſerat & redeuntem
Tela Baliſtarum feriunt apud extera regna.
Alter depoſitus regno, qui carcere Clauſus,
Menſibus extiterat certis, fame velle perire
Elegit potius, quam famæ probra videre.
Tertius exhauſto ſtatim amplo divitiarum
Edwardi cumulo, proſcribens auxiliares
Henrici partes, poſt annos denique binos
Suſcepti regni, Bello confectus eiſdem
Mundanam vitam, tam perdidit atque Coronam:
Anno milleno; Centum quater octuageno,
Adjunctis quinque, & cum lux Sextilis adeſt,
Undena duplex, dentes apri ſtupuerunt,
Et vindex albæ Roſæ Rubra reſloret in orbe.

Epitaph of Richard III. bury'd at Leiceſter by the Order, and at the Expence of King Henry the Seventh.

I Who am lay'd beneath this Marble Stone,
Richard the Third, poſſeſs'd the Britiſh Throne;
My Country's Guardian in my Nephew's Claim,
By Truſt betray'd I to the Kingdom came.
Two Years and ſixty Days, ſave two, I reign'd,
And bravely Strove in Fight, but unſuſtain'd
My Engliſh left me in the luckleſs Field,
Where I to Henry's Arms was forc'd to yield.
Yet at his Charge, my Coarſe this Tomb obtains
Who piouſly interr'd me, and ordains
That Regal Honours wait a King's Remains.
Th' Year fourteen hundred 'twas & eighty four
The twenty firſt of Auguſt, when its Pow'r
And all its Rights I did to the Red Roſe reſtore.
Reader, whoe're thou art, thy Pray'rs beſtow
T' atone my Crimes, and eaſe my Pain below.

Epigram on the Three Richards, Kings of England; the Latin tranſcrib'd from an Old Manuſcript.

THree Richards did in England wear the Crown;
An equal Fortune in the three was ſhown;
All Childleſs dy'd, and left no Race behind,
Rapacious were their Lives, to Force alike inclin'd;
Their Deaths were violent. The firſt excell'd
The Reſt in Fame, and * Triumphs of the Field,
Returning home, he on a foreign Plain
Was by the fatal Darts of Archers Slain.
The Second was from Sov'reign Sway depos'd.
For ſeveral Months in ſtrict Confinement clos'd,
He choſe to Starve, rather than ſee his Shame,
And bear the Inſults of reproaching Fame.
The Third profuſely ſpent the treaſur'd Store
That Edward rais'd, but when with warlike Pow'r
To cruſh brave Henry's Partiſans he try'd,
Wounded in Fight, he fell himſelf and dy'd.
Thus the Red Roſes, their Oppoſers ſlain,
Reviv'd and flouriſh'd in the World again.

* His Expedition into the Holy Land.

THE LIFE and REIGN OF K. HENRY VII.

By the Right Honourable FRANCIS Lord Verulam, Viſcount S. Alban.

1485. Richard the Third a Tyrant.

AFTER that Richard the Third of that Name, King in Fact only, but Tyrant both in Title and Regiment, and ſo commonly termed and reputed in all Times ſince, was by the Divine Revenge, favouring the Deſign of an exil'd Man, Overthrown and Slain at Boſworth Field: There ſucceeded in the Kingdom the Earl of Richmond, thenceforth ſtyl'd Henry the Seventh. The King immediately after the Victory, as one that had been bred under a devout Mother, and was in his Nature a great Obſerver of Religious Forms, cauſed Te Deum Laudamus to be ſolemnly ſung in the preſence of the whole Army upon the place, and was himſelf with general Applauſe and great Cries of Joy, in a Kind of Militar Election or Recognition, ſaluted King. Mean while the Body of Richard after many Indignities and Reproaches (the Dirigies and Obſequies of the common People towards Tyrants) was obſcurely buried. For tho' the King of his Nobleneſs gave Charge unto the Friers of Leiceſter to ſee an honourable Interrment to be given to it, yet the Religious People themſelves (being not free from the Humours of the Vulgar) neglected it; wherein nevertheleſs they did not then incur any Man's Blame or Cenſure. No Man thinking any Ignominy or Contumely unworthy of him, that had been the Executioner of King Henry VI. (that Innocent Prince) with his own Hands; the Contriver of the Death of the Duke of Clarence, his Brother; the Murderer of his two Nephews (one of them his lawful King in the Preſent, and the other in the Future, failing of him) and vehemently ſuſpected to have been the Impoiſoner of his Wife, thereby to make Vacant his Bed, for a Marriage within the Degrees forbidden. And altho' he were a Prince in Militar Vertue approv'd, Jealous of the Honour of the Engliſh Nation, and likewiſe a good Law-maker, for the Eaſe and Solace of the common People: Yet his Cruelties and Parricides in the Opinion of all Men, weigh'd down his Vertues and Merits; and in the Opinion of wiſe Men, even thoſe Vertues themſelves were conceived to be rather feign'd, and affected things to ſerve his Ambition, than true Qualities ingenerate in his Judgment or Nature. And therefore it was noted by Men of great Underſtanding (who ſeeing his after Acts, look'd back upon his former Proceedings) that even in the Time of King Edward his Brother, he was not without ſecret Trains and Mines to turn Envy and Hatred upon his Brother's Government; as having an Expectation and a kind of Divination, that the King, by reaſon of his many Diſorders, could not be of long Life, but was like to leave his Sons of tender Years; and then he knew well how eaſie a Step it was from the Place of a Protector, and firſt Prince of the Blood, to the Crown. And that out of this deep Root of Ambition it ſprang, that as well at the Treaty of Peace that paſſed between Edward IV. and Lewis XI. of France, concluded by Interview of both Kings at Piqueny, as upon all other Occaſions, Richard then Duke of Glouceſter, ſtood ever upon the Side of Honour, raiſing his own Reputation to the Diſadvantage of the King his Brother, and drawing the Eyes of all (eſpecially of the Nobles and Soldiers) upon himſelf; as if the King by his Voluptuous Life and mean Marriage, were become Effeminate and leſs ſenſible of Honour and Reaſon of State, than was fit for a King. And as for the Politick and wholſome Laws which were enacted in his Time, they were interpreted to be but the Brocage of an Uſurper, thereby to wooe and win the Hearts of the People, as being conſcious to himſelf, that the true Obligations of Sovereignty in him failed, and were wanting. But King Henry in the very Entrance of his Reign, and the inſtant of time, when the Kingdom was caſt into his Arms, met with a Point of great Difficulty and knotty to ſolve, able to trouble and confound the wiſeſt King in the newneſs of his Eſtate; and ſo much the more, becauſe it could not endure a Deliberation, but muſt be at once deliberated and determined.

1485.

Boſworth Battel.

K. Henry's Piety.

The Obſequies due to Tyrants. King Richard's Ignominious Burial.

He murder'd his two Nephews, King Edward's Sons.

His Vices overballanc'd his Virtues.

K. Richard Jealous of his Honour.

Made good Laws to win the Peoples Love.

There were fallen to his lot, and concurrent to his Perſon, three ſeveral Titles to the Imperial Crown; the firſt, the Title of the Lady Elizabeth, with whom, by precedent Pact with the K. Henry's Three Titles to the Crown.

E. Lutterell delin.
P. Vanderbanck Sculp.
KING HENRY THE VII.th

1485. the Party that brought him in, he was to marry. The ſecond, the ancient and long diſputed Title (both by Plea and Arms) of the Houſe of Lancaſter, to which he was Inheritor in his own Perſon. The third, the Title of the Sword, or Conqueſt, for that he came in by Victory of Battel, and that the King in poſſeſſion was ſlain in the Field. The firſt of theſe was faireſt, and moſt like to give Contentment to the People, who by Two and Twenty Years Reign of King Edward IV. had been fully made capable of the Clearneſs of the Title of the White Roſe, or Houſe of York; and by the mild and plauſible Reign of the ſame King toward his later Time, were become affectionate to that Line. But then it lay plain before his Eyes, that if he relied upon that Title, he could be but a King at courteſy; and have rather a matrimonial than a regal Power; the Right remaining in his Queen; upon whoſe Deceaſe, either with Iſſue, or without Iſſue, he was to give place and be removed. And tho' he ſhould obtain by Parliament to be continued, yet he knew there was a very great difference between a King that holdeth his Crown by a Civil Act of Eſtates, and One that holdeth it originally by the Law of Nature and Deſcent of Blood. Neither wanted there even at that time, ſecret Rumours and Whiſperings (which afterwards gather'd ſtrength, and turn'd to great Troubles) that the two young Sons of King Edward IV. or one of them (which were ſaid to be deſtroy'd in the Tower) were not indeed murder'd, but convey'd ſecretly away, and were yet living: Which if it had been true, had prevented the Title of the Lady Elizabeth. On the other ſide, if he ſtood upon his own Title of the Houſe of Lancaſter, inherent in his Perſon, he knew it was a Title condemn'd by Parliament, and generally pre-judg'd in the common Opinion of the Realm, and that it tended directly to the Diſinheriſon of the Line of York, held then the indubiate Heirs of the Crown. So that if he ſhould have no Iſſue by the Lady Elizabeth, which ſhould be Diſcendants of the Double Line, then the ancient Flames of Diſcord and inteſtine Wars upon the Competition of both Houſes, would again return and revive.

The Title of the White Roſe.

The Lancaſter Title condemn'd by Parliament.

As for Conqueſt, notwithſtanding Sir William Stanley, after ſome Acclamations of the Souldiers in the Field, had put a Crown of Ornament (which Richard wore in the Battel, and was found among the Spoils) upon King Henry's Head, as if there were his chief Title; yet he remember'd well upon what Conditions and Agreements he was brought in; and that to claim as Conqueror, was to put as well his own Party, as the reſt, into Terror and Fear; as that which gave him power of diſannulling of Laws, and diſpoſing of Men's Fortunes and Eſtates, and the like Points of abſolute Power, being in themſelves ſo harſh and odious, as that William himſelf, commonly call'd the Conqueror, howſoever he uſed and exerciſed the Power of a Conqueror to reward his Normans, yet he forbare to uſe that Claim in the beginning, but mixed it with a titulary Pretence, grounded upon the Will and Deſignation of Edward the Confeſſor. But the King, out of the Greatneſs of his own Mind, preſently caſt the Die, and the Inconveniencies appearing unto him on all parts; and knowing there could not be any Inter-reign, or Suſpenſion of Title; and preferring his Affection to his own Line and Blood; and liking that Title beſt that made him independent; and being in his Nature and Conſtitution of Mind not very apprehenſive or foreſting of future Events afar off, but an Entertainer of Fortune by the Day, reſolv'd to reſt upon the Title of Lancaſter as the main, and to uſe the other two, that of Marriage and that of Battel, but as Supporters; the one to appeaſe ſecret Diſcontents, and the other to beat down open Murmur and Diſpute; not forgetting that the ſame Title of Lancaſter had formerly maintain'd a poſſeſſion of Three Deſcents in the Crown, and might have proved a Perpetuity, had it not ended in the Weakneſs and Inability of the laſt Prince. Whereupon the King preſently, that very Day, being the 22th of Auguſt, aſſumed the Stile of King in his own Name, without mention of the Lady Elizabeth at all, or any relation thereunto; in which Courſe he ever after perſiſted, which did ſpin him a Thread of many Seditions and Troubles. The King full of theſe Thoughts, before his Departure from Leiceſter, diſpatch'd Sir Robert Willoughby to the Caſtle of Sheriff-Hutton in Yorkſhire, where were kept in ſafe Cuſtody, by K. Richard's Commandment, both the Lady Elizabeth, Daughter of King Edward, and Edward Plantagenet, Son and Heir to George Duke of Clarence. This Edward was, by the King's Warrant deliver'd from the Conſtable of the Caſtle to the Hand of Sir Robert Willoughby, and by him, with all ſafety and diligence, convey'd to the Tower of London, where he was ſhut up cloſe Priſoner: Which Act of the King's (being an Act merely of Policy and Power) proceeded not ſo much from any apprehenſion he had of Doctor Shaw's Tale at Paul's-Croſs, for the baſtarding of Edward the Fourth's Iſſues, in which caſe this young Gentleman was to ſucceed (for that Fable was ever exploded) but upon a ſettled Diſpoſition to depreſs all Eminent Perſons of the Line of York; wherein, ſtill the King out of ſtrength of Will, or weakneſs of Judgment, did uſe to ſhew a little more of the Party than of the King.

Edward Plantagenet Earl of Warwick, Son and Heir of George D. of Clarence impriſon'd.

K. Henry reſolves to depreſs all the Chief Perſons of the Line of York.

For the Lady Elizabeth ſhe received alſo a Direction to repair with all convenient ſpeed to London, and there to remain with the Queen Dowager her Mother; which accordingly ſhe ſoon after did, accompanied with many Noblemen and Ladies of Honour. In the mean Seaſon the King ſet forwards by eaſy Journeys to the City of London, receiving the Acclamations and Applauſes of the People as he went, which indeed were true and unfeigned, as might well appear in the very Demonſtrations and Fulneſs of the Cry: For they thought generally, that he was a Prince as ordain'd and ſent down from Heaven, to unite and put to an end the long Diſſention of the two Houſes; which altho' they had in the Times of Henry IV. Henry V. and part of Henry VI. on the one ſide, and the Times of Edward IV. on the other, lucid Intervals and happy Pauſes; yet they did ever hang over the Kingdom, ready to break forth into new Perturbations and Calamities. And as his Victory gave him the Knee, ſo his Purpoſe of Marriage with the Lady Elizabeth gave him the Heart; ſo that both Knee and Heart did truly bow before him.

Sir Will. Stanley Crowns K. Henry in the Field.

He on the other ſide with great Wiſdom (not ignorant of the Affections and Fears of the People) to diſperſe the Conceit and Terror of a Conqueſt, had given order that there ſhould be nothing in his Journey like unto a warlike March or Manner, but rather like unto the Progreſs of a King in full Peace and Aſſurance.

The Title of Conqueſt unpleaſing to the People.

He entred into the City upon a Saturday, as he had alſo obtain'd the Victory upon a Saturday, which Day of the Week, firſt upon an Obſer-

1485. vation, and after upon Memory and Fancy, he accounted and chose as a Day prosperous unto him.

The Mayor and Companies of the City receiv'd him at Shore-ditch; whence, with great and honourable Attendance and Troops of Noblemen, and Persons of Quality he entred the City; himself not being on Horseback, or in any Open Chair, or Throne, but in a Close Chariot, as One that having been sometimes an Enemy to the whole State, and a proscrib'd Person, chose rather to keep State, and strike a Reverence into the People then to fawn upon them.

Why K. Her. entred London in a close Chariot.

He went first into St. Paul's Church, where not meaning that the People should forget too soon that he came in by Battel, he made Offertory of his Standards, and had Orizons and Te Deum again sung, and went to his Lodging prepared in the Bishop of London's Palace, where he stay'd for a time.

During his abode there, he assembled his Council and other principal Persons, in presence of whom he did renew again his Promise to marry with the Lady Elizabeth. This he did the rather, because, having at his coming out of Brittaine given artificially, for serving of his own Turn, some Hopes, in case he obtain'd the Kingdom, to marry Anne Inheritress to the Dutchy of Brittaine, whom Charles the Eighth of France soon after married; it bred some doubt and suspicion amongst divers that he was not sincere, or at least not fix'd in going on with the Match of England so much desir'd: Which Conceit also, tho' it were but Talk and Discourse, did much afflict the poor Lady Elizabeth her self. But, howsoever he both truly intended it, and desired also it shou'd be so believ'd, (the better to extinguish Envy and Contradiction to his other Purposes) yet was he resolv'd in himself not to proceed to the Consummation thereof till his Coronation and a Parliament were past; the one, least a joynt Coronation of himself and his Queen might give any Countenance of participation of Title; the other, least in the intailing of the Crown to himself, which he hoped to obtain by Parliament, the Votes of the Parliament might any ways reflect upon her.

About this time, in Autumn, towards the end of September, there began and reign'd in the City and other Parts of the Kingdom, a Disease then new; which of the Accidents and Manner thereof, they call'd the Sweating Sickness. This Disease had a swift Course both in the Sick Body and in the Time and Period of the lasting thereof: For they that were taken with it, upon Four and Twenty Hours escaping, were thought almost assured: And as to the Time of the Malice and Reign of the Disease ere it ceased; it began about the 21st of September, and clear'd up before the end of October; insomuch as it was no hindrance to the King's Coronation, which was the Last of October; nor (which was more) to the holding of the Parliament, which began but Seven Days after. It was a pestilent Fever, but as it seemed not seated in the Veins or Humours, for that their follow'd no Carbuncle, no purple or livid Spots, or the like, the Mass of the Body being not tainted; only a malign Vapour flew to the Heart, and seised the vital Spirits; which stirr'd Nature to strive to send it forth by an extreme Sweat. And it appear'd by experience that this Disease was rather a Surprise of Nature, than obstinate to Remedies, if it were in time look'd unto: For if the Patient were kept in an equal Temper, both for Cloaths, Fire, and Sweating Sickness.

Its Cure.

1485. Drink moderately warm, with temperate Cordials, whereby Nature's Work were neither irritated by Heat, nor turn'd back by Cold, he commonly recover'd. But infinite Persons died suddenly of it, before the manner of the Cure and Attendance was known. It was conceiv'd not to be an Epidemick Disease, but to proceed from a Malignity in the Constitution of the Air, gathered by the Pre-dispositions of Seasons; and the speedy Cessation declared as much.

On Simon and Jude's Even the King dined with Thomas Bourchier, Archbishop of Canterbury and Cardinal; and from Lambeth went by Land over the Bridge to the Tower, where the Morrow after he made Twelve Knights-Bannerets. But for Creations he dispensed them with a sparing Hand: For notwithstanding a Field so lately fought, and a Coronation so near at hand, he only created Three: Jasper Earl of Pembroke (the King's Uncle) was created Duke of Bedford; Thomas the Lord Stanley (the King's Father in Law) Earl of Darby; and Edward Courtney Earl of Devon; tho' the King had then nevertheless a Purpose in himself to make more in time of Parliament, bearing a wise and decent respect to distribute his Creations, some to honour his Coronation, and some his Parliament.

Creations of Noblemen.

The Coronation follow'd two Days after, upon the 30th Day of October, in the Year of our Lord 1485; at which time Innocent the Eighth was Pope of Rome; Frederick the Third, Emperor of Almaine; and Maximilian his Son, newly chosen King of the Romans; Charles the Eighth King of France; Ferdinando and Isabella Kings of Spain; and James the Third, King of Scotland; with all which Kings and States, the King was at that time at good Peace and Amity. At which Day also (as if the Crown upon his Head had put Perils into his Thoughts) he did institute, for the better security of his Person, a Band of Fifty Archers under a Captain to attend him, by the Name of Yeomen of his Guard: and yet that it might be thought to be rather a matter of Dignity, after the imitation of that he had known abroad, than any matter of Diffidence appropriate to his own Case, he made it to be understood for an Ordinance not temporary, but to hold in succession for ever after.

K. Henry crown'd.

Yeomen of the Guard first instituted.

The Seventh of November the King held his Parliament at Westminster, which he had summon'd immediately after his coming to London. His Ends in calling a Parliament (and that so speedily) were chiefly Three; First, to procure the Crown to be intail'd upon himself: Next, To have the Attainders of all of his Party (which were in no small number) reversed, and all acts of Hostility by them done in his Quarrel, remitted and discharged; and on the other side to attaint by Parliament, the Heads and Principals of his Enemies. The Third, To calm and quiet the Fears of the rest of that Party by a General Pardon: Not being ignorant in how great danger a King stands from his Subjects, when most of his Subjects are conscious in themselves that they stand in his Danger. Unto these Three special Motives of a Parliament, was added, That he, as a prudent and moderate Prince, made this Judgment; That it was fit for him to hasten to let his People see that he meant to govern by Law, howsoever he came in by the Sword; and fit also to reclaim them to know him for their King, whom they had so lately talk'd of as an Enemy or Banish'd Man. For that which concern'd the Entailing of the Crown, (more than that he was true to his own Will, that he wou'd not endure any mention of the

A Parliament called.

The Crown entailed on K. Henry.

Qui terret, plus ipse timet.

1485. the Lady Elizabeth, no not in the nature of Special Entail) he carried it otherwise with great Wisdom and Measure: For he did not press to have the Act penn'd by way of Declaration or Recognition of Right; as on the other side he avoided to have it by New Law or Ordinance; but chose rather a kind of middle-way, by way of Establishment, and that under Covert and indifferent Words; That the Inheritance of the Crown should rest, remain, and abide in the King, &c. which Words might equally be apply'd; That the Crown should continue to him; but whether as having former Right to it, (which was doubtful) or having it then in Fact and Possession (which no Man denied) was left fair to interpretation either way. And again, for the Limitation of the Entail, he did not press it to go further than to himself and to the Heirs of his Body, not speaking of his Right Heirs; but leaving that to the Law to decide: So as the Entail might seem rather a personal Favour to him and his Children, than a total Dis-inherison to the House of York. And in this Form was the Law drawn and pass'd; which Statute he procured to be confirm'd by the Pope's Bull the Year following, with mention, nevertheless, (by way of Recital) of his other Titles, both of Descent and Conquest: So as now the Wreath of Three was made a Wreath of Five; for to the three first Titles of the Two Houses, or Lines, and Conquest, were added Two more, the Authorities Parliamentary and Papal.

Persons attainted excepted against as Members of Parliament.

The King likewise in the Reversal of the Attainders of his Partakers, and discharging them of all Offences incident to his Service and Succour, had his Will, and Acts did pass accordingly: In the Passage whereof, Exception was taken to divers Persons in the House of Commons for that they were atttainted, and thereby not legal, nor habilitate to serve in Parliament, being disabled in the highest degree; and that it should be a great Incongruity to have them to make Laws, who themselves were not inlaw'd. The truth was, that divers of those which had in the Time of King Richard been strongest and most declared for the King's Party, were return'd Knights and Burgesses for the Parliament; whether by Care or Recommendation from the State, or the voluntary Inclination of the People; many of which had been by Richard III. attainted by Outlawries, or otherwise. The King was somewhat troubled with this: For tho' it had a grave and specious Shew, yet it reflected upon his Party. But wisely not shewing himself at all moved therewith, he would not understand it but as a Case in Law, and wish'd the Judges to be advised thereupon; who, for that purpose, were forthwith assembled in the Exchequer-Chamber (which is the Council-Chamber of the Judges) and upon deliberation, they gave a grave and safe Opinion and Advice, mix'd with Law and Convenience; which was, That the Knights and Burgesses attainted by the Course of Law, should forbear to come into the House, till a Law were made for the Reversal of their Attainders.

Attainder of the Blood reaches not the Crown.

It was at that time incidently moved among the Judges in their Consultation, what should be done for the King himself, who likewise was attainted? But it was with unanimous consent resolv'd, That the Crown takes away all Defects and Stops in Blood; and that from the time the King did assume the Crown, the Fountain was clear'd, and all Attainders and Corruption of Blood discharged. 1485. But nevertheless, for Honour's sake, it was ordain'd by Parliament, that all Records wherein there was any memory or mention of the King's Attainder, should be defaced, cancel'd, and taken off the File.

But on the Part of the King's Enemies, there were by Parliament attainted the late Duke of Gloucester, calling himself Richard the Third; the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Surrey, Viscount Lovel, the Lord Ferrers, the Lord Zouch, Richard Ratcliffe, William Catesby, and many others of Degree and (a) Quality. In which Bills of Attainders, nevertheless there were contain'd many just and temperate Clauses, Savings, and Proviso's, well shewing and fore-tokening the Wisdom, Stay, and Moderation of the King's Spirit of Government. And for the Pardon of the rest, that had stood against the King; the King, upon a second Advice, thought it not fit it should pass by Parliament, the better (being matter of Grace) to impropriate the Thanks to himself, using only the Opportunity of a Parliament time, the better to disperse it into the Veins of the Kingdom: Therefore during the Parliament, he publish'd his Royal Proclamation, offering Pardon and Grace of Restitution to all such as had taken Arms, or been Participant of any Attempts against him; so as they submitted themselves to his Mercy by a Day, and took the Oath of Allegiance and Fidelity to him: Whereupon many came out of Sanctuary, and many more came out of Fear, no less guilty than those that had taken Sanctuary.

A Pardon put forth.

Forfeitures and Confiscations supply the King's Wants.

As for Money or Treasure, the King thought it not seasonable, or fit to demand any of his Subjects at this Parliament; both because he had received satisfaction from them in Matters of so great Importance: And because he could not remunerate them with any General Pardon, being prevented therein by the Coronation Pardon, pass'd immediately before: but chiefly, for that it was in every Man's Eye, what great Forfeitures and Confiscations he had at that present to help himself; whereby those Casualties of the Crown, might in reason spare the Purses of the Subject, especially in a time when he was in Peace with all his Neighbours. Some few Laws pass'd at that Parliament, almost for form sake: amongst which, there was One To reduce Aliens, being made Denizens, to pay Strangers Customs; and another, To draw to himself the Seisures and Compositions of Italians Goods, for not Employment, being Points of Profit to his Coffers, whereof from the very beginning he was not forgetful, and had been more happy at the latter end, if his early Providence (which kept him from all necessity of exacting upon his People) could likewise have attemp'red his Nature therein. He added, during Parliament, to his former Creations, the Innoblement or Advancement in Nobility of a few others: The Chandos of Brittain was made Earl of Bath; and Sir Giles Daubeny was made Lord Dawbeny; and Sir Robert Willoughby Lord Brooke.

The Lord Stafford restored to the Honours and Estate of his Father the late Duke of Buckingham.

The King did also with great Nobleness and Bounty (which Virtues at that time had their turns in his Nature) restore Edward Stafford (eldest Son to Henry Duke of Buckingham, attainted

(a) Amongst whom was John Buck, a Relation of George Buck the Author of the Life of King Richard III. which perhaps was the reason why that Historian, in opposition to other Writers on the same Subject, endeavours to have it believed, That King Richard was both a Great and a Good Man. This John Buck was a Creature of the Duke of Norfolk, a fast Friend to K. Richard III. Buck lost his Head at Bosworth.

in

1485. in the Time of King Richard) not only to his Dignities, but to his Fortunes and Poſſeſſions, which were great; to which he was moved alſo by a kind of Gratitude, for that the Duke was the Man that mov'd the firſt Stone againſt the Tyranny of King Richard, and indeed made the King a Bridge to the Crown upon his own Ruins. Thus the Parliament brake up.

The Parliament being diſſolv'd, the King ſent forthwith Money to redeem the Marqueſs Dorſet, and Sir John Bourchier, whom he had left as his Pledges at Paris, for Money which he had borrow'd when he made his Expedition for England. And thereupon he took a fit Occaſion to ſend the Lord Treaſurer and Mr. Bray (whom he uſed as Councellor) to the Lord Mayor of London, requiring of the City a Preſt of Six thouſand Marks: But after many Parleys, he could obtain but Two thouſand Pounds. Which nevertheleſs the King took in good part; as Men uſe to do that practiſe to borrow Money when they have no need. About this time, the King called unto his Privy-Council John Morton and Richard Fox, the one Biſhop of Ely, the other Biſhop of Exeter, vigilent Men and ſecret, and ſuch as kept watch with him almoſt upon all Men elſe. They had been both vers'd in his Affairs, before he came to the Crown, and were Partakers of his adverſe Fortune. This Morton ſoon after upon the Death of Bourchier, he made Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And for Fox, he made him Lord Keeper of his Privy-Seal, and afterwards advanc'd him by degrees, from Exeter to Bathe and Wells, thence to Durham, and laſt to Wincheſter. For altho' the King lov'd to employ and advance Biſhops, becauſe having rich Biſhopricks, they carried their Reward upon themſelves: Yet he did uſe to raiſe them by Steps, that he might not loſe the Profit of the Firſt-fruits, which by that courſe of Gradation was multiplied.

Fox Biſhop of Exeter, made Ld. Keeper of the Privy-Seal.

Why the King employ'd Biſhops.

1486. At laſt upon the 18th of January, was ſolemnized the ſo long expected and ſo much deſir'd Marriage, between the King and the Lady Elizabeth: † Which Day of Marriage was celebrated with greater Triumph and Demonſtrations (eſpecially on the Peoples part) of Joy and Gladneſs, than the Days either of his Entry or Coronation; which the King rather noted than liked. And it is true, that all his Lifetime, while the Lady Elizabeth liv'd with him, (for ſhe died before him) he ſhew'd himſelf no very indulgent Husband towards her, tho' ſhe was Beautiful, Gentle, and Fruitful. But his Averſion towards the Houſe of York was ſo predominant in him, as it found place, not only in his Wars and Counſels, but in his Chamber and Bed.

1486. K. Henry marries the Princeſs Elizabeth.

† In the 19th Year of her Age.

He hated the Houſe of York.

Towards the Middle of the Spring, the King full of Confidence and Aſſurance, as a Prince that had been Victorious in Battel, and had prevail'd with his Parliament in all that he deſir'd, and had the Ring of Acclamations freſh in his Ears, thought the reſt of his Reign ſhould be but Play, and the enjoying of a Kingdom. Yet as a wiſe and watchful King, he would not neglect any thing for his Safety; thinking nevertheleſs to perform all things now, rather as an Exerciſe, than as a Labour. So he being truly inform'd that the Northern Parts were not only Affectionate to the Houſe of York, but particularly had been devoted to King Richard the Third; thought it would be a Summer well ſpent to Viſit thoſe Parts, and by his Preſence and Application of himſelf, to reclaim and reſtifie thoſe Humours. But the King in his Accompt of Peace and Calms, did much Over-caſt his Fortunes; which proved for many Years together full of Broken Seas, Tides and Tempeſts. For he was no ſooner come to Lincoln, where he kept his Eaſter, but he receiv'd News, That the Lord Lovel, Humphrey Stafford, and Thomas Stafford (who had formerly taken Sanctuary at Colcheſter) were departed out of Sanctuary; but to what place, no Man could tell. Which Advertiſement the King deſpiſed, and continued his Journey to York. At York there came freſh and more certain Advertiſement, That the Lord Lovel was at hand with a great Power of Men, and that the Staffords were in Arms in Worceſterſhire, and had made their Approaches to the City of Worceſter to Aſſail it. The King, as a Prince of great and profound Judgment, was not much moved with it; for that he thought it was but a Rag or Remnant of Boſworth-Field, and had Nothing in it of the main Party of the Houſe of York. But he was more doubtful of the raiſing of Forces to reſiſt the Rebels, than of the Reſiſtance it ſelf; for that he was in a Core of People whoſe Affections he ſuſpected. But the Action enduring no Delay, he did ſpeedily levy and ſend againſt the Lord Lovel to the Number of Three thouſand Men, ill arm'd, but well aſſur'd (being taken ſome few out of his own Train, and the reſt out of the Tenants and Followers of ſuch as were ſafe to be truſted) under the Conduct of the Duke of Bedford. And as his manner was to ſend his Pardons rather before the Sword than after, he gave Commiſſion to the Duke to proclaim Pardon to all that would come in: Which the Duke, upon his Approach to the Lord Lovel's Camp, did perform. And it fell out as the King expected; the Heralds were the great Ordnance. For the Lord Lovel upon Proclamation of Pardon, miſtruſting his Men, fled into Lancaſhire, and lurking for a time with Sir Thomas Broughton, after Sail'd over into Flanders to the Lady Margaret: And his Men, forſaken of their Captain, did preſently ſubmit themſelves to the Duke. The Staffords likewiſe, and their Forces, hearing what had happen'd to the Lord Lovel (in whoſe Succeſs their chief Truſt was) deſpair'd and diſpers'd. The two Brothers taking Sanctuary at Colnham, a Village near Abingdon; which place upon View of their Privilege in the King's-Bench, being judged no ſufficient Sanctuary for Traitors, Humphrey was executed at Tyburn; and Thomas, as being led by his Elder Brother, was pardon'd. So this Rebellion prov'd but a Blaſt, and the King having by this Journey purg'd a little the Dregs and Leaven of the Northern People, that were before in no good Affection towards him, return'd to London.

1486.

The Lords Lovel and Stafford Rebel.

Pardon proclaimed.

Humphrey Stafford executed at Tyburn.

K. Henry goes into the Northern Counties.

In September following, * the Queen was delivered of her firſt Son, whom the King (in Honour of the Britiſh Race, of which himſelf was) nam'd Arthur, according to the Name of that Ancient worthy King of the Britains; in whoſe Acts there is Truth enough to make him Famous, beſides that which is Fabulous. The Child was Strong and Able, tho' he was Born in the Eighth Month, which the Phyſicians do prejudge.

* Holinſhead writes, The Queen was deliver'd at Wincheſter, in Sept. 1488. which is more probable than that ſhe ſhould be deliver'd now; for ſhe was married but on the 18th of January in this Year.

There

1486. There follow'd this Year, being the Second of the King's Reign, a ſtrange Accident of State, whereof the Relations which we have are ſo naked, as they leave it ſcarce Credible; not for the Nature of it (for it hath faln out oft) but for the Manner and Circumſtance of it, eſpecially in the Beginnings. Therefore we ſhall make our Judgment upon the things themſelves, as they give Light one to another, and (as we can) dig Truth out of the Mine. The King was green in his Eſtate; and, contrary to his own Opinion and Deſert both, was not without much Hatred throughout the Realm. The Root of all, was the diſcountenancing of the Houſe of York, which the general Body of the Realm ſtill affected. This did alienate the Hearts of the Subjects from him daily more and more, eſpecially when they ſaw, that after his Marriage, and after a Son born, the King did nevertheleſs not ſo much as proceed to the Coronation of the Queen, not vouchſafing her the Honour of a Matrimonial Crown; for the Coronation of her was not till almoſt two Years after, when Danger had taught him what to do. But much more when it was ſpread Abroad (whether by Errour, or the Cunning of Malecontents) that the King had a purpoſe to put to Death Edward Plantagenet cloſely in the Tower: whoſe Caſe was ſo nearly parallel'd with that of Edward the Fourth's Children, in reſpect of the Blood, like Age, and the very place of the Tower, as it did refreſh and reflect upon the King a moſt Odious reſemblance, as if he would be another King Richard. And all this time it was ſtill whiſper'd every where, that at leaſt one of the Children of Edward IV. was living. Which Bruit was cunningly fomented by ſuch as deſir'd Innovation. Neither was the King's Nature and Cuſtoms greatly fit to diſperſe theſe Miſts; but contrariwiſe he had a faſhion rather to create Doubts than Aſſurance. Thus was Fuel prepar'd for the Spark; the Spark that afterwards kindled ſuch a Fire and Combuſtion was at the firſt Contemptible.

The King hated, and why.

Simon an Oxford Prieſt, ſets up the Impoſtor Lambert Simnell.

There was a ſubtil Prieſt call'd Richard Simon, that liv'd in Oxford, and had to his Pupil a Baker's Son nam'd Lambert Simnell, of the Age of ſome Fifteen Years; a comely Youth, and well favour'd, not without ſome Extraordinary Dignity and grace of Aſpect. It came into this Prieſt's Fancy (hearing what Men talk'd, and in hope to raiſe himſelf to ſome great Biſhoprick) to cauſe this Lad to Counterfeit and Perſonate the ſecond Son of Edward IV. ſuppos'd to be Murder'd; and afterward (for he chang'd his Intention in the Manage) the Lord Edward Plantagenet, then Priſoner in the Tower, and accordingly to frame him and inſtruct him in the Part he was to play. This is that which (as was touch'd before) ſeemeth ſcarcely credible; Not that a Falſe perſon ſhould be aſſum'd to gain a Kingdom, for it hath been ſeen in ancient and late Times; nor that it ſhould come into the Mind of ſuch an abject Fellow, to enterprize ſo great a Matter; for high Conceits do ſometimes come ſtreaming into the Imaginations of baſe Perſons, eſpecially when they are Drunk with News and Talk of the People. But here is that which hath no Apparance; That this Prieſt being utterly unacquainted with the true Perſon, according to whoſe pattern he ſhould ſhape his Counterfeit, ſhould think it poſſible for him to inſtruct his Player, either in Geſture and Faſhions, or in recounting paſt Matters of his Life and Education; or in fit Anſwers to Queſtions, or the like, any ways to come near the reſemblance of him whom he was to repreſent. For this Lad was not to perſonate one that had been long before taken out of his Cradle, or convey'd away in his Infancy, known to few; but a Youth that till the Age almoſt of Ten Years had been brought up in a Court where infinite Eyes had been upon him. For King Edward touch'd with Remorſe of his Brother the Duke of Clarence's Death, would not indeed reſtore his Son, (of whom we ſpeak) to be Duke of Clarence; but yet created him Earl of Warwick, reviving his Honour on the Mother's Side, and uſed him honourably during his Time, tho' Richard III. afterwards confin'd him. So that it cannot be, but that ſome great Perſon that knew particularly and familiarly Edward Plantagenet, had a hand in the Buſineſs, from whom the Prieſt might take his Aim. That which is moſt probable, out of the precedent and ſubſequent Acts, is, that it was the Queen Dowager, from whom this Action had the principal Source and Motion: For certain it is, ſhe was a buſy negociating Woman, and in her Withdrawing-Chamber had the fortunate Conſpiracy for the King againſt K. Richard the Third been hatch'd; which the King knew, and remembred perhaps but too well; and was at this time extremely diſcontent with the King, thinking her Daughter (as the King handled the Matter) not advanced but depreſſed: And none could hold the Book ſo well to Prompt and Inſtruct this Stage-Play, as ſhe could. Nevertheleſs it was not her meaning, nor no more was it the meaning of any of the better and ſager Sort that favour'd this Enterprize and knew the Secret, that this diſguiſed Idol ſhould poſſeſs the Crown; but at his Peril to make way to the Overthrow of the King: and that done, they had their ſeveral Hopes and Ways. That which doth chiefly fortifie this Conjecture is, that as ſoon as the Matter brake forth in any Strength, it was one of the King's firſt Acts to cloiſter the Queen Dowager in the Nunnery of Bermondſey, and to take away all her Lands and Eſtate; and this by cloſe Council without any legal Proceeding, upon far-fetch'd Pretences; That ſhe had deliver'd her two Daughters out of Sanctuary to King Richard contrary to Promiſe. Which Proceeding being even at that time taxed for Rigorous and Undue, both in Matter and Manner, makes it very probable there was ſome greater Matter againſt her, which the King upon reaſon of Policy, and to avoid Envy would not Publiſh. It is likewiſe no ſmall Argument that there was ſome Secret in it, and ſome ſuppreſſing of Examinations; for that the Prieſt Simon himſelf, after he was taken was never brought to Execution; no, not ſo much as to publick Trial (as many Clergymen were upon leſs Treaſons) but was only ſhut up cloſe in a Dungeon. Add to this, that after the Earl of Lincoln (a principal Perſon of the Houſe of York) was Slain in Stoke-field, the King open'd himſelf to ſome of his Council, that he was ſorry for the Earl's Death, becauſe by him (he ſaid) he might have known the bottom of his Danger.

But to return to the Narration it ſelf; Simon did firſt inſtruct his Scholar for the part of Richard Duke of York, ſecond Son to King Edward IV. and this was at ſuch time as it was voiced that the King purpoſed to put to Death Edward Plantagenet Priſoner in the Tower, whereat there was great Murmur. But hearing ſoon after a general Bruit that Plantagenet had eſcap'd out of the Tower, and thereby finding him ſo much beloved amongſt the People, and ſuch Rejoycing at his Eſcape, the cunning Prieſt chang'd his Copy, and choſe now Plantagenet to be the Subject

1486. Subject his Pupil ſhould perſonate, becauſe he was more in the preſent Speech and Votes of the People; and it pieced better, and follow'd more cloſe and handſomly upon the Bruit of Plantagenet's Eſcape. But yet doubting that there would be too near looking and too much perſpective into his Diſguiſe, if he ſhould ſhew it here in England; he thought good (after the manner of Scenes in Stage-Plays and Masks) to ſhew it afar off; and therefore ſail'd with his Scholar into Ireland, where the Affection to the Houſe of York was moſt in height. The King had been a little Improvident in the Matters of Ireland, and had not remov'd Officers and Councellors, and put in their Places, or at leaſt intermingled Perſons, of whom he ſtood aſſured, as he ſhould have done, ſince he knew the ſtrong Bent of that Country towards the Houſe of York; and that it was a tickliſh and unſetled State, more eaſie to receive Diſtempers and Mutations than England was. But truſting to the Reputation of his Victories and Succeſſes in England, he thought he ſhould have time enough to extend his Cares afterwards to that ſecond Kingdom.

Ireland favour'd the Houſe of York.

Wherefore through this Neglect, upon the coming of Simon with his pretended Plantagenet into Ireland, all things were prepar'd for Revolt and Sedition, almoſt as if they had been ſet and plotted beforehand. Simon's firſt Addreſs was to the Lord (a) Thomas Fitz-gerard, Earl of Kildare, and Deputy of Ireland: before whoſe Eyes he did caſt ſuch a Miſt (by his own Inſinuation, and by the Carriage of his Youth, that expreſs'd a natural Princely Behaviour) as joyn'd perhaps with ſome inward Vapours of Ambition and Affection in the Earl's own Mind, left him fully poſſeſs'd that it was the true Plantagenet. The Earl preſently communicated the Matter with ſome of the Nobles (b) and others there, at the firſt Secretly. But finding them of like Affection to himſelf, he ſuffer'd it of purpoſe to Vent and paſs Abroad; becauſe they thought it not Safe to Reſolve, till they had a taſte of the Peoples Inclination. But if the Great ones were in Forwardneſs, the People were in Fury, entertaining this Airy Body or Phantaſm with incredible Affection; partly, out of their great Devotion to the Houſe of York; partly out of a Proud humour in the Nation, to give a King to the Realm of England. Neither did the Party in this Heat of Affection much trouble themſelves with the Attainder of George Duke of Clarence; having newly learn'd by the King's Example, that Attainders do not interrupt the conveying of Title to the Crown. And as for the Daughters of K. Edward IV. they thought King Richard had ſaid enough for them; and took them to be but as of the King's Party, becauſe they were in his Power and at his Diſpoſing. So that with marvellous Conſent and Applauſe, this Counterfeit Plantagenet was brought with great Solemnity to the Caſtle of Dublin, and there ſaluted, ſerv'd and honour'd as King; the Boy becoming it well, and doing nothing that did bewray the Baſeneſs of his Condition. And within a few days after he was proclaim'd King in Dublin, by the Name of K. Edward the Sixth; there being not a Sword drawn in King Henry's Quarrel.

The Iriſh receive Simon the Prieſt and his Pupil Simnel.

Lambert Simnel, the Counterfeit Earl of Warwick Proclaim'd at Dublin.

The King was much moved with this unexpected Accident when it came to his Ears; both becauſe it ſtruck upon that String which ever he moſt fear'd, as alſo becauſe it was ſtirred in ſuch a Place, where he could not with Safety transferre his own Perſon to ſuppreſs it. For partly thro' Natural Valour, and partly thro' an Univerſal Suſpicion (not knowing whom to truſt) he was ever ready to wait upon all his Atchievements in Perſon. The King therefore firſt called his Council together at the Charter-houſe at Shine; which Council was held with great Secrecy: but the open Decrees thereof which preſently came abroad were Three. 1486.

The Firſt was, That the Queen Dowager, for that ſhe, contrary to her Pact and Agreement with thoſe that had concluded with her concerning the Marriage of her Daughter Elizabeth with King Henry, had nevertheleſs deliver'd her Daughters out of Sanctuary into King Richard's Hands; ſhould be cloiſter'd in the Nunnery of Bermondſey, and forfeit all her Lands and Goods.

The Next was, That Edward Plantagenet then Cloſe Priſoner in the Tower, ſhould be in the moſt Publick and Notorious manner, that could be deviſed, ſhew'd unto the People: In part to diſcharge the King of the Envy of that Opinion and Bruit, how he had been put to Death privily in the Tower; But chiefly to make the People ſee the Levity and Impoſture of the Proceedings of Ireland, and that their Plantagenet (c) was indeed but a Puppit, or a Counterfeit.

The Third was, That there ſhould be again proclaim'd a general Pardon to all that would reveal their Offences, and ſubmit themſelves by a Day. And that this Pardon ſhould be conceiv'd in ſo ample and liberal a manner, as no High-Treaſon (no not againſt the King's own Perſon) ſhould be excepted. Which tho' it might ſeem ſtrange, yet was it not ſo to a Wiſe King, that knew his greateſt Dangers were not from the leaſt Treaſons, but from the greateſt. Theſe Reſolutions of the King and his Council were immediately put in Execution. And firſt, the Queen Dowager was put into the Monaſtery of Bermondſey, and all her Eſtate ſeiz'd into the King's Hands, whereat there was much wondering; That a weak Woman, for the yielding to the Menaces and Promiſes of a Tyrant, after ſuch a diſtance of time (wherein the King had ſhew'd no Diſpleaſure nor Alteration) but much more after ſo happy a Marriage, between the King and her Daughter, bleſſed with Iſſue-Male, ſhould upon ſo ſudden mutability or diſcloſure of the King's Mind be ſo ſeverely handled.

A general Pardon publiſh'd.

This Lady was amongſt the Examples of great variety of Fortune. She had firſt from a diſtreſſed Suitor and deſolate Widow, been taken to the Marriage-Bed of a Batchellor-King, the goodlieſt Perſonage of his Time; and even in his Reign ſhe had endur'd a ſtrange Eclipſe by the King's Flight, and temporary depriving from the Crown. She was alſo very happy, in that ſhe had by him fair Iſſue, and continu'd his Nuptial Love (helping her ſelf by ſome obſequious bearing and diſſembling of his Pleaſures) to the very end. She was much Affectionate to her own Kindred, even unto Faction; which

Q. Elizabeth Gray's various Fortune.

(a) The Lord Thomas Fitzgerald was Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and Brother to Gerald Earl of Kildare, Deputy to Jaſper Duke of Bedford, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Sir James Ware, Annals of Hen. 7. Cap. 1.

(b) His Brother the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Portleſter Lord Treaſurer, who were devoted to the Houſe of York, the King had written to the Lord Deputy to come over to England ſome time before, ſuſpecting his Fidelity; but he excus'd himſelf till ſome Matters of great Conſequence then depending were finiſh'd, and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal ſign'd a Letter to the King to deſire he might Stay. The Lord Heath advis'd him of it. Sir J. Ware, Cap. 11.

(c) In Ireland the Impoſtor was retorted on the King, as if he had impos'd a Counterfeit Earl of Warwick on the People. Ibid.

did

1486. did ſtir great Envy in the Lords of the King's Side, who counted her Blood a Diſparagement to be mingled with the King's. With which Lords of the King's Blood, joyn'd alſo the King's Favourite the Lord Haſtings; who, notwithſtanding the King's great Affection to him, was thought at times, through her Malice and Spleen, not to be out of Danger of Falling. After her Husband's Death, ſhe was matter of Tragedy, having liv'd to ſee her Brother Beheaded, and her two Sons depoſed from the Crown, Baſtarded in their Blood, and cruelly Murthered. All this while nevertheleſs ſhe injoy'd her Liberty, State, and Fortunes. But afterwards again, upon the Riſe of the Wheel, when ſhe had a King to her Son-in-Law, and was made Grandmother to a Grandchild of the beſt Sex; yet was ſhe (upon dark and unknown Reaſons, and no leſs ſtrange Pretences) precipitated and baniſh'd the World into a Nunnery; where it was almoſt thought dangerous to viſit her, or ſee her; and where not long after ſhe ended her Life: But was by the King's Commandment buried with the King her Husband at Windſor. She was Foundreſs of Queens-College in Cambridge. For this Act the King ſuſtain'd great Obloquy, which nevertheleſs (beſides the reaſon of State) was ſomewhat ſweetned to him by a great Confiſcation.

Queens-College in Cambridge Founded.

The E. of Warwick ſhewn to the People.

About this time alſo Edward Plantagenet was upon a Sunday brought throughout all the principal Streets of London, to be ſeen of the People. And having paſs'd the View of the Streets, was conducted to Paul's Church in ſolemn Proceſſion, where great ſtore of people were aſſembled. And it was provided alſo in good faſhion, that divers of the Nobility, and others of Quality (eſpecially of thoſe that the King moſt ſuſpected, and knew the Perſon of Plantagenet beſt) had Communication with the young Gentleman by the way, and entertain'd him with Speech and Diſcourſe; which did in effect mar the Pageant in Ireland with the Subjects here, at leaſt with ſo many as out of Error, and not out of Malice, might be miſled. Nevertheleſs, in Ireland (where it was too late to go back) it wrought little or no Effect. But contrariwiſe, they turn'd the Impoſture upon the King, and gave out, That the King, to defeat the true Inheritor, and to mock the World and blind the Eyes of ſimple Men, had trick'd up a Boy in the likeneſs of Edward Plantagenet, and ſhewed him to the People, not ſparing to prophane the Ceremony of a Proceſſion, the more to countenance the Fable.

The General Pardon likewiſe near the ſame time came forth; and the King therewithal omitted no diligence, in giving ſtraight order for the keeping of the Ports; that Fugitives, Malecontents, or ſuſpected Perſons might not paſs over into Ireland and Flanders.

Mean while the Rebels in Ireland had ſent privy Meſſengers both into England and into Flanders, who in both places had wrought Effects of no ſmall Importance. For in England they won to their Party John Earl of Lincoln, Son of John de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, and of Elizabeth, King Edward IV's eldeſt Siſter. This Earl was a Man of great Wit and Courage, and had his Thoughts highly rais'd by Hopes and Expectations for a time. For Richard III. had a Reſolution, out of his Hatred to both his Brethren, King Edward and the Duke of Clarence, and their Lines, (having had his Hand in both their Bloods) to diſable their Iſſues upon falſe and incompetent Pretexts; the one of Attainder, the other of Illegitimation; and to deſign this Gentleman (in caſe himſelf ſhould die without Children) for Inheritor of the Crown. Neither was this unknown to the King, who had ſecretly an Eye upon him. But the King having taſted of the Envy of the People, for his Impriſonment of Edward Plantagenet, was doubtful to heap up any more Diſtaſtes of that Kind, by the Impriſonment of De la Pole alſo; the rather thinking it Policy to conſerve him as a Corrival unto the other. The Earl of Lincoln was induced to participate with the Action of Ireland, not lightly upon the ſtrength of the Proceedings there, which was but a Bubble, but upon Letters from the Lady Margaret of Burgundy, in whoſe Succours and Declaration for the Enterprize, there ſeemed to be a more ſolid Foundation, both for Reputation and Forces. Neither did the Earl refrain the Buſineſs, for that he knew the pretended Plantagenet to be but an Idol: But contrariwiſe, he was more glad it ſhould be the falſe Plantagenet than the true: becauſe the Falſe being ſure to fall away of himſelf, and the True to be made ſure of by the King; it might open and pave a fair and prepar'd way to his own Title. With this Reſolution he ſail'd ſecretly into Flanders, where was a little before arriv'd the Lord Lovel, (d) leaving a Correſpondence here in England with Sir Thomas Broughton, a Man of great Power and Dependencies in Lancaſhire. For before this time, when the pretended Plantagenet was firſt receiv'd in Ireland, ſecret Meſſengers had been alſo ſent to the Lady Margaret, advertiſing her what was paſs'd in Ireland, imploring Succours in an Enterpriſe (as they ſaid) ſo Pious and Juſt, and that God had ſo miraculouſly proſper'd the beginning thereof; and making offer, that all things ſhould be guided by her Will and Direction, as the Sovereign Patroneſs and Protectreſs of the Enterprize. Margaret was ſecond Siſter to King Edward IV. and had been ſecond Wife to Charles, ſirnam'd the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy; by whom, having no Children of her own, ſhe did with ſingular Care and Tenderneſs intend the Education of Philip and Margaret, Grandchildren to her former Husband; which won her great Love and Authority among the Dutch. This Princeſs (having the Spirit of a Man, and Malice of a Woman) abounding in Treaſure, by the greatneſs of her Dower, and her provident Government, and being Childleſs, and without any nearer Care, made it her Deſign and Enterprize to ſee the Majeſty Royal of England once again re-placed in her Houſe, and had ſet up King Henry as a Mark, at whoſe Overthrow all her Actions ſhould aim and ſhoot; inſomuch as all the Counſels of his ſucceeding Troubles came chiefly out of that Quiver. And ſhe bare ſuch a mortal Hatred to the Houſe of Lancaſter, and perſonally to the King, as ſhe was no ways mollify'd by the Conjunction of the Houſes in her Niece's Marriage, but rather hated her Niece, as the means of the King's Aſcent to the Crown, and Aſſurance therein. Wherefore with great Violence of Affection ſhe embraced this Overture. And upon Counſel taken with the Earl of Lincoln and the Lord Lovel, and ſome other of the Party, it was reſolv'd with all ſpeed, the two Lords aſſiſted with a Regiment of two thouſand Almains, being Choice and Veteran Bands, under the Com-

Margaret Dutcheſs of Burgundy, K. Henry's great Enemy.

(d) Francis Viſcount Lovel, Lord Chamberlain to Richard III.

1487. mand of Martin Swart (a Valiant and Experimented Captain) ſhould paſs over into Ireland to the new King. Hoping, that when the Action ſhould have the face of a received and ſettled Regality (with ſuch a ſecond Perſon, as the Earl of Lincoln, and the Conjunction and Reputation of Foreign Succours) the Fame of it would embolden and prepare all the Party of the Confederates and Malecontents within the Realm of England, to give them Aſſiſtance, when they ſhould come over there. And for the Perſon of the Counterfeit, it was agreed, That if all things ſucceeded well, he ſhould be put down, and the true Plantagenet received: Wherein nevertheleſs the Earl of Lincoln had his particular Hopes. After they were come into Ireland, and that the Party took Courage, by ſeeing themſelves together in a Body, they grew very confident of Succeſs, conceiving and diſcourſing amongſt themſelves, that they went in upon far better Cards to overthrow King Henry, than King Henry had to overthrow King Richard. And that if there were not a Sword drawn againſt them in Ireland, it was a ſign the Swords in England would be ſoon ſheath'd, or beaten down. And firſt, for a Bravery upon this Acceſſion of Power, they crown'd their new King in the Cathedral Church of Dublin; (e) who formerly had been but proclaim'd only; and then ſate in Council what ſhould further be done. At which Council, tho' it were propounded by ſome, that it were the beſt way to Eſtabliſh themſelves firſt in Ireland, and to make that the Seat of the War, and to draw King Henry thither in Perſon, by whoſe Abſence they thought there would be great Alterations and Commotions in England; yet becauſe the Kingdom there was poor, and they ſhould not be able to keep their Army together, nor pay their German Soldiers, and for that alſo the Sway of the Iriſhmen, and generally of the Men-of-War, which (as in ſuch caſes of Popular Tumults is uſual) did in Effect govern their Leaders, was eager, and in affection to make their Fortunes upon England: It was concluded with all poſſible ſpeed to Tranſport their Forces into England. The King in the mean time, who at the firſt when he heard what was done in Ireland, tho' it troubled him, yet thought he ſhould be well enough able to ſcatter the Iriſh as a Flight of Birds, and rattle away this Swarm of Bees, with their King; when he heard afterwards that the Earl of Lincoln was Embark'd in the Action, and that the Lady Margaret was declared for it, he apprehended the Danger in a true Degree as it was, and ſaw plainly that his Kingdom muſt again be put to the Stake, and that he muſt fight for it. And firſt, he did conceive, before he underſtood of the Earl of Lincoln's ſailing into Ireland out of Flanders, that he ſhould be aſſail'd both upon the Eaſt-parts of the Kingdom of England by ſome Impreſſion from Flanders, and upon the North-weſt out of Ireland: And therefore having order'd Muſters to be made in both Parts, and having proviſionally deſign'd two Generals, Jaſper Earl of Bedford, and John Earl of Oxford, (meaning himſelf alſo to go in Perſon where the Affairs ſhould moſt require it) and nevertheleſs not expecting any actual Invaſion at that time (the Winter being far on) he took his Journey himſelf towards Suffolk and Norfolk, for the confirming of thoſe Parts. And being come to S. Edmondsbury, he underſtood that Thomas Marqueſs of Dorſet (who had been one of the Pledges in France) was haſting towards him, to purge himſelf of ſome Accuſations which had been made againſt him. But the King, tho' he kept an Ear for him, yet was the time ſo doubtful, that he ſent the Earl of Oxford to meet him, and forthwith to carry him to the Tower; with a fair Meſſage nevertheleſs, that he ſhould bear that Diſgrace with Patience, for that the King meant not his hurt, but only to preſerve him from doing hurt, either to the King's Service, or to himſelf; and that the King ſhould always be able (when he had cleared himſelf) to make him Reparation. 1487.

From S. Edmonds-bury he went to Norwich, where he kept his Chriſtmas. And from thence he went (in a manner of Pilgrimage) to Walſingham, where he viſited our Ladies Church, famous for Miracles, and made his Prayers and Vows for Help and Deliverance. And from thence he return'd by Cambridge to London. Not long after, the Rebels, with their King (under the Leading of the Earl of Lincoln, the Earl of Kildare, the Lord Lovel, and Collonel Swart) landed at Fouldrey in Lancaſhire, whither there repair'd to them Sir Thomas Broughton with ſome ſmall Company of Engliſh. The King by that time (knowing now the Storm would not divide, but fall in one place) had levied Forces in good number: And in Perſon (taking with him his two deſigned Generals, the Duke of Bedford and the Earl of Oxford) was come on his way towards them as far as Coventry, whence he ſent forth a Troop of Light Horſemen for Diſcovery, and to intercept ſome Stragglers of the Enemies, by whom he might the better underſtand the particulars of their Progreſs and Purpoſes, which was accordingly done; though the King otherwiſe was not without Intelligence from Eſpials in the Camp.

Lambert Simnell crown'd King at Dublin.

In June Sir Thomas Broughton Joyns the Rebels.

The King has Spies in the Rebels Camp.

The Rebels took their way towards York, without ſpoiling the Country, or any Act of Hoſtility, the better to put themſelves into favour of the People, and to perſonate their King: who (no doubt out of a Princely feeling) was Sparing and Compaſſionate towards his Subjects. But their Snow-ball did not gather as it went: For the People came not in to them; neither did any Riſe or Declare themſelves in other Parts of the Kingdom for them, which was cauſed partly by the good taſte that the King had given his People of his Government, joyn'd with the Reputation of his Felicity; and partly for that it was an odious thing to the People of England, to have a King brought in to them upon the Shoulders of Iriſh and Dutch, of which their Army was in Subſtance compounded. Neither was it a thing done with any great Judgment on the Party of the Rebels, for them to take their way towards York: Conſidering that howſoever thoſe parts had formerly been a Nurſery of their Friends; yet it was there where the Lord Lovel had ſo lately Diſbanded, and where the King's preſence had a little before qualify'd Diſcontents. The Earl of Lincoln deceiv'd of his Hopes of the Countries Concourſe unto him (in which caſe he (e) He was crown'd with a Crown taken from a Statue of the Virgin Mary in our Lady's Church near Dameſgate, Dr. Payn Biſhop of Meath preach'd his Coronation Sermon; and the Deputy, Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, Earl of Lincoln, Lord Lovel, and many more Perſons of Quality aſſiſted at the Ceremony: the Archbiſhop of Armagh refus'd to attend at it. Sir J. Ware, Cap. 111.

would

1487. would have temporized) and seeing the Business past Retract, resolv'd to make on where the King was, and to give him Battel; and thereupon march'd towards Newark, thinking to have surpriz'd the Town. But the King was somewhat before this time come to Nottingham, where he call'd a Council of War, at which was consulted, whether it were best to protract time, or speedily to set upon the Rebels. In which Councel the King himself (whose continual Vigilancy did suck in sometimes causeless Suspicions which few else knew) inclined to the accelerating a Battel. But this was presently put out of doubt by the great Aids that came in to him in the instant of this Consultation; partly upon Missives, and partly Voluntaries from many Parts of the Kingdom.

The Principal Persons that came then to the King's Aid, were the Earl of Shrewsbury and the Lord Strange, of the Nobility; and of Knights and Gentlemen to the Number of at least Threescore and ten Persons, with their Companies, making in the whole at the least Six thousand fighting Men, besides the Forces that were with the King before. Whereupon the King, finding his Army so bravely re-enforced, and a great Alacrity in all his Men to fight, was confirm'd in his former Resolution, and march'd speedily, so as he put himself between the Enemies Camp and Newark; being loth their Army should get the Commodity of that Town. The Earl nothing dismay'd, came forwards that Day unto a little Village call'd Stoke, and there encamp'd that Night upon the Brow or hanging of a Hill. The King the next Day (f) presented him Battel upon the Plain, the Fields there being open and Champion. The Earl couragiously came down and joyned Battel with him. Concerning which Battel, the Relations that are left unto us are so naked and negligent (tho' it be an Action of so recent Memory) as they rather declare the Success of the Day, than the Manner of the Fight. They say, that the King divided his Army into three Battels; whereof the Van-Guard only well strengthen'd with Wings came to fight. That the Fight was fierce and obstinate, and lasted three Hours, before the Victory inclined either way; save that Judgment might be made, by that the King's Van-guard of it self maintain'd Fight against the whole Power of the Enemies, the other two Battels remaining out of Action) what the Success was like to be in the end. That Martin Swart with his Germans perform'd bravely; and so did those few English that were on that Side; neither did the Irish fail in Courage or Fierceness, but being almost naked Men, only arm'd with Darts and Skeins, it was rather an Execution, than a Fight upon them; insomuch as the furious Slaughter of them was a great discouragement and appalement to the rest; That there died upon the place all the Chieftains; That is, the Earl of Lincoln, the Earl of Kildare, (g) Francis Lord Lovel, Martin Swart, and Sir Thomas Broughton; all making good the Fight without any Ground given. Only of the Lord Lovel there went a Report, that he fled and swam over Trent on Horseback, but could not recover the further Side, by reason of the steepness of the Bank, and so was Drown'd in the River. But another Report leaves him not there, but that he liv'd long after in a Cave or Vault. The Number that was Slain in the Field, was of the Enemies part Four thousand at the least; and of the King's part, one half of his Van-guard, besides many hurt, but none of Name. There were taken Prisoners amongst others, the Counterfeit Plantagenet (now, Lambert Simnell again) and the crafty Priest his Tutor. For Lambert the King would not take his Life, both out of Magnanimity, taking him but as an Image of Wax that others had temper'd and moulded; and likewise out of Wisdom, thinking that if he suffer'd Death, he would be forgotten too soon; but being kept Alive, he would be a continual Spectacle, and a Kind of Remedy against the like Inchantments of People in time to come. For which cause he was taken into Service in his Court to a base Office in his Kitchin; so that (in a kind of Mattacina of Human Fortune) he turn'd a Broach that had worn a Crown. Whereas Fortune commonly doth not bring in a Comedy or Farce after a Tragedy. And afterwards he was preferred to be one of the King's Falconers. As to the Priest, he was committed close Prisoner, and heard of no more; the King loving to Seal up his own Dangers (b).

1487.

Lambert Simnell taken.

Is put into the King's Kitchin. Made one of his Falconers.

In Nottinghamshire.

20th of June. Sir J. W.

The Battel of Stokefield.

After the Battel the King went to Lincoln, where he caused Supplications and Thanksgivings to be made for his Deliverance and Victory. And that his Devotions might go round in Circle, he sent his Banner to be offer'd to our Lady of Walsingham, where before he made his Vows. And thus deliver'd of this so strange an Engine and new Invention of Fortune, he return'd to his former Confidence of Mind; thinking now, that all his Misfortunes had come at once: But it fell out unto him according to the Speech of the Common People in the beginning of his Reign, that said, It was a Token he should reign in labour, because his Reign began with a Sickness of Sweat. But howsoever the King thought himself now in a Haven, yet such was his Wisdom, as his Confidence did seldom darken his Foresight, especially in Things near hand. And therefore awaken'd by so fresh and unexpected Dangers, he entred into due Consideration, as well how to weed out the Partakers of the former Rebellion, as to kill the Seeds of the like in time to come; and withal to take away all Shelters and Harbours for discontented Persons, where they might hatch and foster Rebellions, which afterwards might gather Strength and Motion. And First, He did yet again make a Progress from Lincoln to the Northern Parts, tho' indeed it were rather an Itinerary Circuit of Justice, than a Progress: For all along as he went, with much Severity and strict Inquisition, partly by Martial Law, and partly by Commission, were punished, the Adherents and Aiders of the late Rebels: Not all by Death, (for the Field had drawn much Blood) but by Fines and Ransoms which spared Life and raised Treasure. Amongst other Crimes of this na-

The Battel was fought on Saturday the 6th of June, according to our English Historians.

Aiders of the Rebels punish'd.

(f) Polydore Virgil places this Battel in the Year 1485. But that is not one of the least Mistakes in his History.

(g) 'Twas the Lord Thomas Fitzgerald, whom, says Sir James Ware, Some do erroneously call the Earl of Kildare. There fell also Maurice Fitz-Thomas a Geraldine, and Plunket the Baron of Kelleny's Son.

(b) The King wrote to the Mayor and Citizens of Waterford in Ireland, to Commend their Fidelity, which he next Year rewarded with new Privileges and Immunities. The Earl of Kildare and the Lords who had sided with Lambert, sent over Letters to the King and beg'd Pardon; which he not only granted them, but continu'd the Earl of Kildare Lord Deputy. Sir J. Ware, Cap. 111.

In the Year following, Sir Richard Edgcomb was sent over to Ireland with 500 Men to take new Oaths of Allegiance of the Nobility, and King Henry order'd them to come to England; where he feasted them all, and gave the Lord Heath 300 l. in Gold.

1487. ture, there was diligent Enquiry made of ſuch as had raiſed and diſperſed a Bruit and Rumour, a little before the Field fought, That the Rebels had the Day, and that the King's Army was overthrown, and the King fled: Whereby it was ſuppoſed, that many Succours, which otherwiſe would have come unto the King, were cunningly put off and kept back. Which Charge and Accuſation, though it had ſome ground, yet it was induſtriouſly embraced and put on by divers, who having been in themſelves not the beſt affected to the King's Part, nor forward to come to his Aid, were glad to apprehend this Colour to cover their Neglect and Coldneſs, under the pretence of ſuch Diſcouragements. Which cunning nevertheleſs the King would not underſtand, tho' he lodg'd it, and noted it in ſome particulars, as his manner was.

But for the extirpating of the Roots and Cauſes of the like Commotions in time to come, the King began to find where his Shoe did wring him, and that it was his depreſſing of the Houſe of York, that did rancle and feſter the Affections of his People. And therefore being now too wiſe to diſdain Perils any longer, and willing to give ſome Contentment in that Kind (at leaſt in Ceremony) he reſolv'd at laſt to proceed to the Coronation of his Queen. And therefore at his coming to London, where he entred in State, and in a kind of Triumph, and celebrated his Victory with two Days of Devotion, (for the firſt Day he repair'd to Paul's, and had the Hymn of Te Deum Sung, and the Morrow after he went in Proceſſion, and heard the Sermon at the Croſs) the Queen was with great Solemnity crown'd at Weſtminſter, the Five and twentieth of November, in the Third Year of his Reign, which was about two Years after the Marriage; Like an old Chriſtning, that had ſtayed long for Godfathers. Which ſtrange and unuſual diſtance of Time, made it Subject to every Man's note, that it was an Act againſt his Stomach, and put upon him by Neceſſity and Reaſon of State. Soon after, to ſhew that it was now fair Weather again, and that the Impriſonment of Thomas Marqueſs Dorſet, was rather upon Suſpicion of the Time than of the Man, he the ſaid Marqueſs was ſet at Liberty without Examination, or other Circumſtance. At that time alſo the King ſent an Ambaſſador unto Pope Innocent, ſignifying unto him this his Marriage, and that now (like another Æneas) he had paſſed through the Floods of his former Troubles and Travels, and was arriv'd unto a Safe Haven: and thanking his Holineſs that he had honour'd the Celebration of his Marriage with the preſence of his Ambaſſador; and offering both his Perſon and the Forces of his Kingdom upon all Occaſions to do him Service.

Queen Elizabeth's Coronation, after ſtaying for it two Years.

An Ambaſſador ſent to the Pope.

The Ambaſſador making his Oration to the Pope, in the preſence of the Cardinals, did ſo magnifie the King and Queen, as was enough to glut the Hearers. But then he did again ſo extol and deify the Pope, as made all that he had ſaid in Praiſe of his Maſter and Miſtreſs ſeem temperate and paſſable. But he was very honourably entertain'd, and extreamly much made on by the Pope: Who knowing himſelf to be Lazy and Unprofitable to the Chriſtian World, was wonderfully Glad to hear that there were ſuch Echoes of him Sounding in remote Parts. He obtain'd alſo of the Pope a very Juſt and Honourable Bull, qualifying the Privileges of Sanctuary (wherewith the King had been extreamly gauled) in three Points.

The King Procures a Bull from the Pope about Sanctuaries.

The firſt, That if any Sanctuary-man did by Night, or otherwiſe, get out of Sanctuary privily and commit Miſchief and Treſpaſs, and then come in again, he ſhould loſe the Benefit of Sanctuary for ever after. The Second, That howſoever the Perſon of the Sanctuary-man was protected from his Creditors, yet his Goods out of Sanctuary ſhould not. The Third, That if any took Sanctuary for Caſe of Treaſon, the King might appoint him Keepers to look to him in Sanctuary. 1487.

The King alſo for the better Securing of his Eſtate, againſt mutinous and malecontented Subjects (whereof he ſaw the Realm was full) who might have their Refuge into Scotland, which was not under Key, as the Ports were; For that Cauſe, rather than for any doubt of Hoſtility from thoſe Parts, before his coming to London (when he was at New-Caſtle) had * ſent a Solemn Embaſſage unto James III. King of Scotland, to Treat and Conclude a Peace with him The Ambaſſadors were Richard Fox Biſhop of Exeter, and Sir Richard Edgcomb, Comptroller of the King's Houſe, who were honourably receiv'd and entertain'd there. But the King of Scotland labouring of the ſame Diſeaſe that King Henry did (tho' more Mortal, as afterwards appear'd) that is, Diſcontented Subjects, apt to riſe and raiſe Tumult, altho' in his own Affection he did much deſire to make a Peace with the King; yet finding his Nobles averſe, and not daring to diſpleaſe them, concluded only a Truce for Seven Years; giving nevertheleſs Promiſe in Private, that it ſhould be renew'd from time to time, during the two Kings lives.

An Embaſſy into Scotland.

* In Auguſt, 1487.

Hitherto the King had been exercis'd in ſetling his Affairs at Home. But about this time brake forth an Occaſion that drew him to look abroad, and to hearken to foreign Buſineſs. Charles VIII. the French King, by the Vertue and good Fortune of his two immediate Predeceſſors, Charles VII. his Grandfather, and Lewis XI. his Father, receiv'd the Kingdom of France in more flouriſhing and ſpreading Eſtate than it had been of many Years before; being redintegrate in thoſe Principal Members which anciently had been Portions of the Crown of France, and were after diſſevered, ſo as they remain'd only in Homage, and not in Sovereignty (being govern'd by abſolute Princes of their own) Anjou, Normandy, Provence and Burgundy. There remain'd only Brittain to be reunited, and ſo the Monarchy of France to be reduced to the ancient Terms and Bounds.

King Charles was not a little inflamed with an Ambition to re-purchaſe and re-annex that Dutchy. Which his Ambition was a Wiſe and well-weigh'd Ambition; not like unto the Ambitions of his ſucceeding Enterprizes of Italy. For at that time being newly come to the Crown, he was ſomewhat guided by his Father's Counſels (Counſels, not Counſellors) for his Father was his own Counſel, and had few Able Men about him. And that King (he knew well) had ever diſtaſted the Deſigns of Italy, and in particular had an Eye upon Brittain. There were many Circumſtances that did feed the Ambition of Charles, with pregnant and apparent Hopes of Succeſs. The Duke of Brittain Old, and entred into a Lethargy, and ſerv'd with Mercenary Counſellors, Father of two only Daughters, the one Sickly and not like to continue. King Charles himſelf in the Flower of his Age, and the Subjects of France at that time well train'd for War, both for Leaders and Soldiers; Men of Service being not yet worn out ſince the Wars of Lewis againſt Burgundy. He found

The Benefit of good Counſel.

1488. found himself also in Peace with all his Neighbour Princes. As for those that might oppose to his Enterprise, Maximilian King of Romans, his Rival in the same Desires, (as well for the Dutchy, as the Daughter) feeble in Means; and King Henry of England as well somewhat obnoxious to him for his Favours and Benefits, as busy'd in his particular Troubles at Home. There was also a fair and specious Occasion offer'd him to hide his Ambition and to justifie his Warring upon Britain, for that the Duke had receiv'd and succour'd Lewis Duke of Orleance, and other of the French Nobility, which had taken Arms against their King. Wherefore King Charles being resolv'd upon that War, knew well he could not receive any Opposition so Potent, as if King Henry should either upon Policy of State, in preventing the growing Greatness of France; or upon Gratitude unto the Duke of Britain, for his former Favours in the time of his Distress, espouse that Quarrel, and declare himself in Aid of the Duke. Therefore he no sooner heard that King Henry was settled by his Victory, but forthwith he sent Ambassadors unto him to pray his Assistance, or at the least that he would stand Neutral. Which Ambassadors found the King at Leicester, and deliver'd their Embassage to this Effect. They first imparted unto the King the Success that their Master had had a little before against Maximilian, in recovery of certain Towns from him; which was done in a kind of Privacy, and inwardness towards the King: as if the French King did not esteem him for an outward or formal Confederate, but as one that had part in his Affections and Fortunes, and with whom he took Pleasure to communicate his Business. After this Complement, and some Gratulation for the King's Victory, they fell to their Errand; declaring to the King, That their Master was enforced to enter into a Just and Necessary War with the Duke of Britain, for that he had re-receiv'd and succour'd those that were Traitors, and declared Enemies unto his Person and State. That they were no mean, distressed and calamitous Persons that fled to him for Refuge, but of so great Quality, as it was apparent that they came not thither to protect their own Fortune, but to infest and invade his; the Head of them being the Duke of Orleance, the first Prince of the Blood, and the second Person of France. That therefore, rightly to understand it, it was rather on their Master's part a Defensive War than an Offensive; as that, that could not be omitted or forborn, if he tendred the Conservation of his own Estate; and that it was not the first Blow that made the War invasive, (for that no wise Prince would stay for) but the first Provocation, or at least the first Preparation. Nay, that this War was rather a Suppression of Rebels, than a War with a just Enemy, where the case is; That his Subjects, Traitors, are receiv'd by the Duke of Britain his Homager. That K. Henry knew well what went upon it in Example, if Neighbour-Princes should Patronize and Comfort Rebels, against the Law of Nations and of Leagues. Nevertheless that their Master was not ignorant, that King had been beholding to the Duke of Britain in his Adversity; as on the other side, they knew he would not forget also the Readiness of their King, in Aiding him when the Duke of Britain, or his mercenary Councellors fail'd him and would have betray'd him; And that there was a great difference between the Courtesies receiv'd from their Master and the Duke of Britain; for that the Duke's might have Ends of Utility and Bargain; whereas their Masters could not have proceeded but out of entire Affection. For that, if it had been measur'd by a Politick Line, it had been better for his Affairs, that a Tyrant should have reign'd in England, troubled and hated, than such a Prince, whose Vertues could not fail to make him great and Potent, whensoever he was come to be Master of his Affairs. But howsoever it stood for the point of Obligation which the King might owe to the Duke of Britain, yet their Master was well assur'd, it would not divert King Henry of England from doing that that was just, nor ever embark him in so ill-grounded a Quarrel. Therefore, since this War which their Master was now to make, was but to deliver himself from imminent Dangers, their King hop'd the King would shew the like Affection to the Conservation of their Master's Estate, as their Master had (when time was) shew'd to the King's Acquisition of his Kingdom. At the least, that according to the Inclination which the King had ever profess'd of Peace, he would look on, and stand Neutral; for that their Master could not with reason press him to undertake part in the War, being so newly settled and recover'd from Intestine Seditions. 1488.

But touching the Mysterie of re-annexing of the Dutchy of Britain to the Crown of France, either by War, or by Marriage with the Daughter of Britain; the Ambassadors bare aloofe from it, as from a Rock, knowing that it made most against them. And therefore by all means declined any mention thereof, but contrariwise interlaced in their Conference with the King, the assured Purpose of their Master, to match with the Daughter of Maximilian: And entertain'd the King also with some wandring Discourses of their King's purpose to recover by Arms his Right to the Kingdom of Naples, by an Expedition in Person; All to remove the King from all Jealousie of any Design in these hither Parts upon Britain, otherwise than for quenching of the Fire, which he fear'd might be kindled in his own Estate.

The King after Advice taken with his Council, made Answer to the Ambassadors. And first returned their Complement, shewing he was right glad of the French King's reception of those Towns from Maximilian. Then he familiarly related some particular Passages of his own Adventures and Victory passed. As to the Business of Britain, the King answer'd in few Words; That the French King and the Duke of Brittain were the two Persons to whom he was most obliged of all Men; and that he should think himself very Unhappy if things should go so between them, as he should not be able to acquit himself in Gratitude towards them both; and that there was no means for him as a Christian King and a Common Friend to them, to satisfie all Obligations both to God and Man, but to offer himself for a Mediator of an Accord and Peace between them; by which course he doubted not but their King's Estate and Honour both, would be preserv'd with more Safety and less Envy than by a War, and that he would spare no Cost or Pains, no if it were to go on Pilgrimage for so good an Effect: And concluded, that in this great Affair, which he took so much to Heart, he would express himself more fully by an Embassage, which he would speedily dispatch unto the French King for that purpose. And in this sort the French Ambassadors were dismissed; The King avoiding to understand any thing touching the re-annexing of Britain, as the Ambassa-

1488. Ambaſſadors had avoided to mention it; ſave that he gave a little touch of it in the Word, Envy. And ſo it was, that the King was neither ſo ſhallow, nor ſo ill advertis'd as not to perceive the Intention of the French King, for the Inveſting himſelf of Britain. But firſt he was utterly unwilling (howſoever he gave out) to enter into War with France. A Fame of a War he liked well, but not an Atchievement; for the one he thought would make him Richer, and the other Poorer: and he was poſſeſſed with many ſecret Fears touching his own People, which he was therefore loth to arm, and put Weapons into their Hands. Yet notwithſtanding (as a Prudent and Couragious Prince) he was not ſo averſe from a War, but that he was reſolved to chooſe it, rather than to have Britain carried by France, being ſo great and opulent a Dutchy, and ſituate ſo opportunely to annoy England, either for Coaſt, or Trade. But the King's hopes were, that partly by Negligence, commonly imputed to the French (eſpecially in the Court of a young King) and partly by the Native Power of Britain it ſelf, which was not ſmall; but chiefly in reſpect of the great Party that the Duke of Orleance had in the Kingdom of France, and thereby Means to ſtir up Civil Troubles, to divert the French King from the Enterprize of Britain. And laſtly, in regard of the Power of Maximilian, who was Corrival to the French King in that Purſuit, the Enterprize would either bow to a Peace, or break in it ſelf. In all which, the King meaſur'd and valued things amiſs, as afterwards appear'd. He ſent therefore forthwith to the French King, Chriſtopher Urſwicke his Chaplain, a perſon by him much truſted and imploy'd: chooſing him the rather, becauſe he was a Churchman, as beſt ſorting with an Embaſſy of Pacification; and giving him alſo a Commiſſion, That if the French King conſented to Treat, he ſhould thence repair to the Duke of Britain, and ripen the Treaty on both Parts. Urſwick made Declaration to the French King, much to the purpoſe of the King's Anſwer to the French Ambaſſadors here; inſtilling alſo tenderly ſome Overture of receiving to Grace the Duke of Orleance, and ſome taſte of Conditions of Accord. But the French King on the other ſide proceeded not Sincerely, but with a great deal of Art and Diſſimulation, in this Treaty; having for his End to gain time, and ſo put off the Engliſh Succours, under hope of Peace, till he had got good footing in Britain, by force of Arms. Wherefore he anſwer'd the Ambaſſador, That he would put himſelf into the King's Hands, and make him Arbiter of the Peace; and willingly conſented, that the Ambaſſador ſhould ſtraightways paſs into Britain, to ſignifie this his conſent, and to know the Duke's Mind likewiſe; well foreſeeing, that the Duke of Orleance, by whom the Duke of Britain was wholly led, taking himſelf to be upon terms irreconcileable with him, would admit of no Treaty of Peace. Whereby he ſhould in one, both generally abroad veyl over his Ambition, and win the Reputation of Juſt and Moderate Proceedings; and ſhould withal endear himſelf in the Affections of the King of England, as one that had committed all to his Will: Nay, and (which was yet more fine) make Faith in him, That altho' he went on with the War, yet it ſhould be but with his Sword in his hand, to bend the ſtiffneſs of the other Party to accept of Peace: and ſo the King ſhould take no Umbrage of his arming and proſecution; but the Treaty to be kept on foot, to the very laſt inſtant, till he were Maſter of the Field.

The Fr. King's Diſſimulation.

Which Grounds being by the French King wiſely laid, all things fell out as he expected. For when the Engliſh Ambaſſador came to the Court of Britain, the Duke was then ſcarcely perfect in his Memory, and all things were directed by the Duke of Orleance; who gave Audience to the Chaplain Urſwick, and upon his Ambaſſage deliver'd, made Anſwer in ſomewhat high Terms: That the Duke of Britain having been an Hoſt, and a kind of Parent or Foſter-father to the King, in his tenderneſs of Age and weakneſs of Fortune, did look for at this time from King Henry (the renowned King of England) rather brave Troops for his Succours, than a vain Treaty of Peace. And if the King could forget the good Offices of the Duke done unto him aforetime; yet he knew well, he would in his Wiſdom conſider of the Future, how much it imported his own Safety and Reputation, both in foreign Parts and with his own People, not to ſuffer Britain (the old Confederates of England) to be ſwallow'd up by France, and ſo many good Ports and Strong Towns upon the Coaſt be in the Command of ſo Potent a Neighbour-King, and ſo Ancient an Enemy. And therefore humbly deſired the King to think of this Buſineſs as his own; and therewith brake off, and denied any further conference for Treaty.

Urſwick return'd firſt to the French King, and related to him what had paſſed. Who finding things to ſort to his Deſire, took hold of them, and ſaid, That the Ambaſſador might perceive now that which he for his part partly imagined before. That conſidering in what Hands the Duke of Britain was, there would be no Peace, but by a mixt Treaty of Force and Perſwaſion. And therefore he would go on with the one, and deſired the King not to deſiſt from the other. But for his own part, he did faithfully promiſe to be ſtill in the King's Power to rule him in the matter of Peace. This was accordingly repreſented unto the King by Urſwick at his Return, and in ſuch a faſhion as if the Treaty were in no ſort deſperate, but rather ſtay'd for a better Hour, till the Hammer had wrought, and beat the Party of Britain more pliant. Whereupon there paſſed continually Packets and Diſpatches between the two Kings, from the one out of Deſire, and from the other out of Diſſimulation, about the Negociation of Peace. The French King mean while invaded Britain with great Forces, and diſtreſs'd the City of Nants with a ſtrait Siege, and (as one, who tho' he had no great Judgment, yet had that, that he could diſſemble home) the more he did urge the Proſecution of the War, the more he did at the ſame time urge the Solicitation of the Peace. Inſomuch as during the Siege of Nants, after many Letters and particular Meſſages, the better to maintain his Diſſimulation, and to refreſh the Treaty; he ſent Bernard Daubigney (a Perſon of good Quality) to the King, earneſtly to deſire him to make an end of the Buſineſs howſoever.

The Fr. King a Diſſembler.

The Lord Bernard Daubeney a Scotchman.

The King was no leſs ready to revive and quicken the Treaty: And thereupon ſent three Commiſſioners, the Abbot of Abington, † Sir Richard Tunſtal and Chaplain Urſwick formerly imploy'd, to do their utmoſt Endeavors, to manage the Treaty roundly and ſtrongly.

† Hol. ſays, Sir Rich. Edgecomb.

About this time the Lord Woodvile, (Uncle to the Queen) a Valiant Gentleman and deſirous of Honour, ſued to the King, that he might raiſe ſome Power of Voluntaries under-hand, and without Licence or Paſport (wherein the King might any ways appear) go to the Aid of the Duke 1488. The Lord Woodville Voluntarily goes to Aid the Bretons.

1488. Duke of Brittain. The King denied his Requeſt (or at leaſt ſeemed ſo to do) and lay'd ſtrait Commandment upon him, that he ſhould not ſtir, for that the King thought his Honour would ſuffer therein during a Treaty, to better a Party. Nevertheleſs this Lord (either being unruly, or out of conceit that the King would not inwardly diſlike that, which he would not openly avow) ſail'd ſecretly over into the Iſle of Wight, whereof he was Governour, and levied a fair Troop of four Hnndred Men, and with them paſſed over into Brittain, and joyned himſelf with the Duke's Forces. The News whereof when it came to the French Court, put divers Young Bloods into ſuch a Furie, as the Engliſh Ambaſſadors where not without Peril to be outraged. But the French King both to preſerve the Priviledge of Ambaſſadors, and being conſcious to himſelf that in the Buſineſs of Peace, he himſelf was the greater Diſſembler of the two, forbad all Injuries of Fact or Word, againſt their Perſons, or Followers. And preſently came an Agent from the King, to purge himſelf touching the Lord Woodvile's going over, uſing for a principal Argument, to demonſtrate that it was without his Privity, for that the Tropes were ſo ſmall, as neither had the Face of a Succour by Authority; nor could much advance the Brittain Affairs. To which Meſſage, although the French King gave no full Credit, yet he made fair Weather with the King, and ſeem'd ſatisfied: Sone after the Engliſh Ambaſſadors returned, having two of them been likewiſe with the Duke of Brittain, and found things in no other Terms, than they were before. Upon their return, they inform'd the King of the State of the Affairs, and how far the French King was from any true meaning of Peace; and therefore he was now to adviſe of ſome other Courſe. Neither was the King himſelf lead all this while with Credulity merely, as was generally ſuppoſed: But his Error was not ſo much Facility of Belief, as an ill Meaſuring of the Forces of the other Partie.

The Engliſh Ambaſſadors in Danger at the French Court.

For (as was partly touch'd before) the King had caſt the Buſineſs thus with himſelf. He took it for granted in his own Judgment, that the War of Brittain, in reſpect of the Strength of the Towns, and of the Party; could not ſpedily come to a Period. For he conceiv'd that the Counſels of a War, that was undertaken by the French King, then Childleſs, againſt an Heir-apparent of France, would be very Faint and Slow. And beſides, that it was not poſſible, but that the State of France ſhould be imbroil'd with ſome Troubles and Alterations in Favour of the Duke of Orleance. He conceived likewiſe, that Maximilian, King of the Romans, was a Prince Warlike and Potent; who (he made account) would give Succours to the Brittains roundly. So then judging it would be a Worke of Time, he laid his Plot, how he might beſt make uſe of that Time, for his own Affairs. Wherein firſt he thought to make his Vantage upon his Parliament; knowing that they being Affectionate unto the Quarrel of Brittain, would give Treaſure largely. Which Treaſure, as a Noiſe of War might draw forth; ſo a Peace ſucceeding might Coffer up. And becauſe he knew his People were hot upon the Buſineſs, he choſe rather to ſeem to be deceiv'd, and lull'd aſleepe by the French, than to be backward in himſelf; conſidering his Subjects were not ſo fully capable of the Reaſons of State, which made him hold back. Wherefore to all theſe purpoſes he ſaw no other expedient, than to ſet and keep on Foot a continual Treatie of Peace; laying it down, and taking it up again, as the Occurrence requir'd. Beſides, he had in conſideration the point of Honour in bearing the bleſſed Perſon of a Pacificator. Hee thought likewiſe to make uſe of the Envie, that the French King met with, by occaſion of this War of Brittain, in ſtrengthening himſelf with new Alliances; as namely that of Ferdinando of Spain, with whom he had ever a conſent even in Nature and Cuſtoms; and likewiſe with Maximilian, who was particularly intereſſed. So that in Subſtance he promiſed himſelf Money, Honour, Friends, and Peace in the End. But thoſe things were too fine to be fortunate, and ſucceed in all parts; for that great Affairs are commonly too rough and ſtubborn to be wrought upon by the finer Edges, or Points of Wit. The King was likewiſe deceived in his two main Grounds. For although he had Reaſon to conceive, that the Council of France would be wary to put the King into a War againſt the Heir-apparent of France; yet he did not conſider, that Charles was not guided by any of the Principal of the Blood or Nobility, but by mean Men, who would make it their Maſter-piece of Credit and Favour, to give Venturous Counſels, which no great or Wiſe Man durſt, or would. And for Maximilian, he was thought then a Greater-matter than he was; his unſtable and Neceſſitous Courſes being not then known.

1488. The King mediates a Peace between the French King and Duke of Bretagne.

The French Kings Council mean Perſons.

Their Counſel different from that of the Nobles and in what

After Conſultation with the Ambaſſadors, who brought him no other News, than he expected before (though he would not ſeeme to know it till then) he preſently ſummoned his Parliament, and in open Parliament propounded the Cauſe of Brittain to both Houſes, by his Chancellor Morton Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, who ſpake to this Effect.

A Parliament ſummon'd.

" MY Lords and Maſters; The King's " Grace our Soveraign Lord, hath com- " manded me to declare unto you the Cauſes " that have moved him at this time to Summon " this his Parliament; which I ſhall do in few " Words, craving Pardon of his Grace, and " you all, if I perform it not as I would.

" His Grace doth firſt of all let you know, " that he retaineth in thankful Memorie the " Love and Loyalty ſhewed to him by you, at " your laſt meeting, in Eſtabliſhment of his " Royaltie; freeing and diſcharging of his Par- " takers, and Confiſcation of his Traytors and " Rebels: more than which could not come " from Subjects to their Soveraign, in one " Action. This he taketh ſo well at your Hands, " as he hath made it a Reſolution to himſelf, to " communicate with ſo loving and well appro- " ved Subjects, in all Affairs that are of pub- " lick Nature, at home or abroad.

The King thanks the Commons for their Loyalty and Love.

" Two therefore are the Cauſes of your pre- " ſent Aſſembling: the one, a foreign Buſineſs; " the other, matter of Government at Home.

" The French King (as no doubt ye have " heard) maketh at this preſent hot War upon " the Duke of Brittain. His Army is now be- " fore Nantes, and holdeth it ſtraightly beſieg'd " being the Principal City (if not in Ceremonie " and Preheminence, yet in Strength and " Wealth) of that Dutchie. Ye may gueſs at " his Hopes, by his attempting of the Hardeſt " part of the War firſt. The Cauſe of this " War he knoweth beſt. He alledgeth the en- " tertaining and ſuccouring of the Duke of Or- " leance, and ſome other French Lords, whom " the King taketh for his Enemies. Others " divine of other Matters. Both parts have by " their Ambaſſadors divers times prayed the 1488. Aid desir'd by the Duke of Bretagne.

" King's

" King's Aids: The French King Aids, or New-
" trality; the Britons Aids simply; for so their " Case requireth. The King, as a Christian
" Prince, and Blessed Son of the Holy Church
" hath offered himself as a Mediator, to treat
" a Peace between them. The French King
" yeildeth to treat, but will not stay the Prose" cution of the War. The Britons, that desire
" Peace most, hearken to it least; not upon
" Confidence or Stifness, but upon Distrust of " true Meaning, seeing the War goes on. So
" as the King, after as much Pains and Care to " effect a Peace, as ever he took in any Busi" ness, not being able to remove the Prosecu-
" tion on the one Side, nor the Distrust on
" the other, caused by that Prosecution, hath
" let fall the Treatie; not repenting of it, but
" desparing of it now, as not likely to succeed.
" Therefore by this Narrative you now under" stand the State of the Question, whereupon
" the King prayeth your Advice: which is no
" other, but whether he shall enter into an " Auxiliary and Defensive War for the Britons
" against France.

The King asks Advice of the Parliament.

" And the better to open your understandings
" in this Affair, the King hath commanded me
" to say somewhat to you from him, of the " Persons that do intervene in this Business;
" and somewhat of the Consequence thereof,
" as it hath relation to this Kingdom; and
" somewhat of the Example of it in general:
" Making nevertheless no Conclusion or Judg" ment of any Point, untill his Grace hath re" ceived your faithful and politick Advices.

" First, for the King our Soveraign him-
" self, who is the principal Person you are to
" eye in this Business; his Grace doth Profess,
" that he truly and constantly desireth to reign
" in Peace. But his Grace saith, he will neither
" buy Peace with Dishonour, nor take it up at
" Interest of Danger to ensue; but shall think
" it a good Change, if it please God to change
" the inward Troubles and Seditions, where-
" with he hath been hitherto exercised, into " an honourable Foreign War. And for the " other two Persons in this Action, the French
" King, and the Duke of Brittain, his Grace
" doth declare unto you, that they be the Men,
" unto whom he is of all other Friends and Al-
" lies most bounden: the one having held over
" him his Hand of Protection from the Tyrant:
" the Other having reacht forth unto him his " Hand of Help, for the Recovery of his King" dom. So that his Affection toward them in " his natural Person, is upon equal Terms. And
" whereas you may have heard, that his Grace
" was enforced to flie out of Brittain into France,
" for doubts of being betrayed; his Grace
" would not in any sort have that reflect upon
" the Duke of Brittain, in Defacement of his " former Benefits: For that he is throughly in" formed, that it was but the Practice of some
" corrupt Persons about him, during the time
" of his Sickness, altogether without his Consent
" or Privity.

Peace to be desir'd, but with two Conditions.

King Henry was forced to fly out of Bretagne into France.

" But howsoever these things do interess his " Grace in his particular, yet he knoweth well,
" that the higher Bond that tyeth him to pro-
" cure by all means the Safety and Welfare of " his loving Subjects, doth dis-interess him of
" these Obligations of Gratitude, otherwise
" than thus: That if his Grace be forced to " make a War, he do it without Passion, or " Ambition.

" For the consequence of this Action towards
" this Kingdom, it is much as the French Kings
" intention is. For if it be no more, but to " range his Subjects to Reason, who bear them-
" selves stout upon the Strength of the Duke of " Brittain, it is nothing to us. But if it be in " the French King's purpose, or if it should not " be in his purpose, yet if it shall follow all one
" as if it were sought, that the French King
" shall make a Province of Brittain, and joyn
" it to the Crown of France: then it is worthy
" the consideration, how this may import Eng-
" land, as well in the Increasement of the great-
" ness of France, by the Addition of such a
" Country, that stretcheth his Boughes unto
" our Seas, as in depriving this Nation, and
" leaving it naked of so firm and assured Con-
" federates, as the Brittains have always been.
" For then it will come to pass, that whereas " not long since, this Realm was mighty upon
" the Continent, first in Territory, and after
" in Alliance, in respect of Burgundy and Brit-
" tain, which were Confederates indeed, but
" dependant Confederates; now the one being " already cast, partly into the Greatness of " France, and partly into that of Austria, the " other is like wholly to be cast into the great-
" ness of France, and this Island shall remain con" fined in Effect within the Salt Waters, and
" Girt about with the Coast-Countries of two
" Mighty Monarchs.

" For the Example, it resteth likewise upon
" the same Question, upon the French King's " Intent. For if Brittain be carried and
" swallowed up by France, as the World a" broad (apt to impute and construe the " Actions of Princes to Ambition) con-
" ceive it will; then it is an Example very dan" gerous and universal, that the lesser Neigh-
" bour Estate should be devoured of the greater.
" For this may be the Case of Scotland to" wards England; of Portugal, towards Spain;
" of the smaller Estates of Italy, towards the " greater; and so of Germany; or as if some " of you of the Commons, might not live and
" dwell safely, besides some of these great
" Lords. And the bringing in of this Ex" ample, will be chiefly laid to the King's " Charge, as to him that was most interes-
" sed and most able to forbid it. But then on " the other Side, there is so fair a Pretext
" on the French King's Part (and yet Pretext is " never wanting to Power) in regard the dan-
" ger imminent to his own Estate is such, as
" may make this Enterprise seem rather a
" Work of Necessity, than of Ambition, as
" doth in reason correct the Danger of the " Example. For that the Example of that " which is done in a Man's own Defence, cannot
" be dangerous; because it is in another's Pow" er to avoid it. But in all this Business, the " King remits himself to your Grave and
" Mature Advice, whereupon he purposeth to " rely.

He again asks their Advice.

This was the Effect of the Lord Chancellor's Speech touching the Cause of Brittain: For the King had commanded him to carry it so, as to affect the Parliament towards the Business; but without engaging the King in any express Declaration.

The Chancellor went on:

The Lord Chancellor Morton's Speech.

" FOR that which may concern the Go" vernment at home, the King hath " commanded me to say unto you; That he
" thinketh there was never any King (for the " small time that he hath reign'd) had greater
" and juster Cause of the two contrary Passions
" of

1488. " of Joy, and Sorrow, than his Grace hath. " Joy, in reſpect of the rare and viſible Favours of Almighty God, in Girting the Imperial Sword upon his Side, and aſſiſting the ſame his Sword againſt all his Enemies; and likewiſe in bleſſing him with ſo many good and loving Servants and Subjects, which have never fail'd to give him faithful Counſel, ready Obedience, and couragious Defence. Sorrow, for that it hath not pleaſed God to ſuffer him to ſheath his Sword (as he greatly deſired otherwiſe than for Adminiſtration of Juſtice) but that he hath been forced to draw it ſo oft, to cut off traiterous and diſloyal Subjects, whom (it ſeems) God hath left (a few amongſt many good) as the Cananites among the People of Iſrael, to be Thorns in their Sides, to tempt and try them; tho' the end hath been always (God's Name be bleſſed therefore) that the Deſtruction hath faln upon their own Heads.

" Wherefore his Grace ſaith, That he ſeeth that it is not the Blood ſpilt in the Field, that will ſave the Blood in the City; nor the Marſhal's Sword, that will ſet this Kingdom in perfect Peace: But that the true way is, to ſtop the Seeds of Sedition and Rebellion in their Beginnings; and for that purpoſe to deviſe, confirm, and quicken good and wholſom Laws, againſt Riots, and Unlawful Aſſemblies of People, and all Combinations and Confederacies of them, by Liveries, Tokens, and other Badges of factious Dependance; that the Peace of the Land may by theſe Ordinances, as by Bars of Iron, be ſoundly bound in and ſtrengthned, and all Force both in Court, Country, and Private Houſes, be ſuppreſs'd. The Care hereof, which ſo much concerneth your ſelves, and which the Nature of the Times doth inſtantly call for, his Grace commends to your Wiſdoms.

How Rebellion is to be prevented.

" And becauſe it is the King's Deſire, that this Peace, wherein he hopeth to Govern and Maintain you, do not bear only unto you Leaves for you to Sit under the Shade of them in Safety; but alſo ſhould bear you Fruit of Riches, Wealth and Plenty: Therefore his Grace prays you, to take into Conſideration Matter of Trade, as alſo the Manufactures of the Kingdom, and to repreſs the baſtard and barren Imployment of Moneys, to Uſury and Unlawful Exchanges, that they may be (as their Natural uſe is) turned upon Commerce, and Lawful and Royal Trading. And likewiſe, that our People be ſet on work in Arts and Handicrafts; that the Realm may ſubſiſt more of it ſelf; that Idleneſs be avoided, and the draining out of our Treaſure, for foreign Manufactures, ſtopped. But you are not to reſt here only, but to provide further, that whatſoever Merchandize ſhall be brought in from beyond the Seas, may be imploy'd upon the Commodities of this Land; whereby the Kingdom's Stock of Treaſure may be ſure to be kept from being diminiſhed, by any over-trading of the Foreigner.

Trade to be Conſider'd.

Foreign Manufactures diſcourag'd.

" And laſtly, becauſe the King is well aſſured, that you would not have him Poor, that wiſhes you rich; he doubteth not, but that you will have Care, as well to maintain his Revenues, of Cuſtoms, and all other Natures, as alſo to ſupply him with your loving Aids, if the Caſe ſhall ſo require. The rather, for that you know the King is a good Husband, and but a Steward in effect for the Publick; and that what comes from you is but as Moiſture drawn from the Earth, which gathers into a Cloud, and falls back upon the Earth again. And you know well, how the Kingdoms about you grow more and more in Greatneſs, and the Times are ſtirring; and therefore not fit to find the King with an empty Purſe. More I have not to ſay to you; and wiſh, that what hath been ſaid, had been better expreſs'd: But that your Wiſdoms and good Affections will ſupply. God bleſs your Doings. 1488.

It was no hard Matter to diſpoſe and affect the Parliament in this Buſineſs; as well in reſpect of the Emulation between the Nations, and the Envy at the late growth of the French Monarchy; as in regard of the Danger, to ſuffer the French to make their Approaches upon England, by obtaining ſo goodly a Maritime Province, full of Sea-Towns, and Havens, that might do Miſchief to the Engliſh, either by Invaſion or by interruption of Traffick. The Parliament was alſo moved with the Point of Oppreſſion; for altho' the French ſeem'd to ſpeak reaſon, yet Arguments are ever with Multitudes too weak for Suſpitions. Wherefore they did adviſe the King, roundly to embrace the Britons Quarrel, and to ſend them ſpeedy Aids, and with much alacrity and forwardneſs granted to the King a great Rate of Subſidy, in Contemplation of theſe Aids. But the King both to keep a Decency towards the French King, to whom he profeſs'd himſelf to be obliged, and indeed deſirous rather to ſhew War, than to make it; ſent new ſolemn Ambaſſadors to intimate unto him, the Decree of his Eſtates, and to iterate his Motion, that the French would deſiſt from Hoſtility; or if War muſt follow, to deſire him to take it in good part, if at the Motion of his People, who were ſenſible of the Cauſe of the Britons as their ancient Friends, and Confederates, he did ſend them Succours; with Proteſtation nevertheleſs, that to ſave all Treaties and Laws of Friendſhip, he had limited his Force, to proceed in Aid of the Britons, but in no wiſe to War upon the French, otherwiſe than as they maintain'd the Poſſeſſion of Britain. But before this formal Ambaſſage arriv'd, the Party of the Duke had receiv'd a great blow, and grew to manifeſt Declination. For near the Town of St. Alban in Britain, a Battel had been given, where the Britons were overthrown, and the Duke of Orleance, and the Prince of Orange taken Priſoners, there being Slain on the Britons part Six thouſand Men, and amongſt them the Lord Woodvile, and almoſt all his Soldiers valiantly fighting. And of the French part One thouſand two hundred, with their Leader James Galeot, a great Commander.

The Emulation between the Engliſh and the French.

Battel of St. Albans in Bretagne.

The Lord Woodvile Slain there.

When the News of this Battel came over into England, it was time for the King (who now had no Subterfuge to continue further Treaty, and ſaw before his Eyes, that Britain went ſo ſpeedily for loſt, contrary to his Hopes, knowing alſo that with his People and Foreigners both, he ſuſtained no ſmall Envy and Diſ-reputation for his former Delays) to diſpatch with all poſſible ſpeed his Succours into Britain; which he did under the Conduct of Robert Lord Brook, to the Number of Eight thouſand choice Men, and well arm'd; who having a fair Wind, in few Hours landed in Britain, and joyned themſelves forthwith to thoſe Briton Forces, that remained after the Defeat, and march'd ſtraight on to find the Enemy, and incamped faſt by them. The French wiſely Husbanding the Poſſeſſion of a Victory, and well acquainted with the Courage of the Engliſh, eſpecially when they

The Britons in Diſtreſs.

Aid ſent them.

At what Time the Engliſh are moſt Couragious.

1488. are fresh, kept themselves within their Trenches, being strongly lodged, and resolved not to give Battel. But mean while, to harrass and weary the English, they did upon all Advantages set upon them with their Light Horse; wherein nevertheless they received commonly loss, especially by means of the English Archers.

But upon these Atchievements Francis, Duke of Britain, deceased; an Accident that the King might easily have foreseen, and ought to have reckon'd upon, and provided for; but that the Point of Reputation, when News first came of the Battel lost (that somewhat must be done) did over-bear the Reason of War.

After the Duke's Decease, the principal Persons of Britain, partly bought, partly through Faction, put all things into Confusion; so as the English not finding Head or Body with whom to joyn their Forces, and being in Jealousy of Friends, as well as in Danger of Enemies, and the Winter begun, return'd Home five Months after their Landing. So the Battel of St. Alban, the Death of the Duke, and the Retire of the English Succours were (after some time) the Causes of the Loss of that Dutchy; which Action some accounted as a Blemish of the King's Judgment; but most but as the Misfortune of his Times.

The Causes of the Loss of Bretagne.

But howsoever the temporary Fruit of the Parliament in their Aid and Advice given for Britain, took not, nor prospered not; yet the lasting Fruit of Parliament, which is good and wholsom Laws, did prosper, and doth yet continue to this Day. For according to the Lord Chancellor's Admonition, there were that Parliament divers excellent Laws ordained, concerning the Points which the King recommended.

Court of Star-Chamber confirm'd. Star-chamber Court described. What Pleas belong to every Court. The Power and Description of the Court of Chancery.

First, The Authority of the Star-Chamber, which before subsisted by the Ancient Common Laws of the Realm, was confirm'd in certain Cases by Act of Parliament. This Court is one of the Sagest and Noblest Institutions of this Kingdom. For in the Distribution of Courts of Ordinary Justice (besides the High Court of Parliament) in which Distribution the King's-Bench holdeth the Pleas of the Crown, the Common-Place, Pleas Civil, the Exchequer Pleas concerning the King's Revenue, and the Chancery the Prætorian Power for mitigating the Rigour of Law, in Case of Extremity, by the Conscience of a good Man; there was nevertheless always reserv'd a High and Preheminent Power to the King's Council, in Causes that might in Example, or Consequence, concern the State of the Commonwealth, which if they were Criminal, the Council used to Sit in the Chamber, call'd the Star-Chamber; if Civil, in the White-Chamber, or White-hall. And as the Chancery had the Prætorian Power for Equity; so the Star-Chamber had the Censorian Power for Offences, under the degree of Capital. This Court of Star-Chamber is compounded of good Elements; for it consisteth of Four kinds of Persons: Councellors, Peers, Prelates, and Chief Judges. It discerneth also principally of Four kinds of Causes; Forces, Frauds, Crimes various of Stellionate, and the Inchoations or Middle Acts towards Crimes Capital, or Heinous, not actually committed or perpetrated. But that which was principally aimed at by this Act was Force, and the two chief Supports of Force, Combination of Multitudes, and Maintenance or Headship of great Persons.

From the general Peace of the Country, the King's Care went on to the Peace of the King's House, and the Security of his great Officers and Counsellors. But this Law was somewhat of a strange Composition and Temper. That if any of the King's Servants under the degree of a Lord, do conspire the Death of any of the King's Council, or Lord of the Realm, it is made Capital. This Law was thought to be procur'd by the Lord Chancellor, who being a stern and haughty Man, and finding he had some Mortal Enemies in Court, provided for his own Safety; drowning the Envy of it in a general Law, by communicating the Privilege with all other Councellors and Peers, and yet not daring to extend it further, than to the King's Servants in Check-Roll, lest it should have been too harsh to the Gentlemen, and other Commons of the Kingdom; who might have thought their Ancient Liberty, and the Clemency of the Laws of England invaded, If the Will in any Case of Felony should be made the Deed. And yet the reason which the Act yieldeth (that is to say, That he that Conspireth the Death of Councellors may be thought indirectly, and by a mean, to conspire the Death of the King himself) is indifferent to all Subjects, as well as to Servants in Court. But it seemeth this sufficed to serve the Lord Chancellor's turn at this time. But yet he lived to need a General Law, for that he grew afterwards as odious to the Country, as he was then to the Court. 1488.

Made a Capital Crime for any of the K. Servants, to Conspire the Death of any of the King's Council.

From the Peace of the King's House, the King's Care extended to the Peace of Private Houses and Families. For there was an excellent Moral Law moulded thus; The taking and carrying away of Women forcibly, and against their will (except Female-wards and Bondwomen) was made Capital. The Parliament wisely and justly conceiving, that the obtaining of Women by force into Possession (howsoever afterwards Assent might follow by Allurements) was but a Rape drawn forth in length, because the first Force drew on all the rest.

A Law against taking away Women by Force.

There was made also another Law for Peace in general, and repressing of Murthers and Man-slaughters, and was in Amendment of the Common Laws of the Realm, being this: That whereas by the Common Law, the King's Suit in case of Homicide, did expect, The Year and the Day, allowed to the Parties Suit by way of Appeal; and that it was found by Experience, that the Party was many times compounded with, and many times wearied with the Suit, so that in the end such Suit was let fall, and by that time the Matter was in a manner forgotten, and thereby Prosecution at the King's Suit by Indictment (which is ever best, Flagrante crimine) neglected; it was ordain'd, That the Suit by Indictment might be taken as well at any time within the Year and the Day, as after, not prejudicing nevertheless the Parties Suit.

Laws about Murder and Manslaughter.

The King began also then, as well in Wisdom as in Justice to pare a little the Privilege of Clergy, ordaining, That Clarks convict should be burn'd in the Hand; both because they might taste of some corporal Punishment, and that they might carry a Brand of Infamy. But for this good Act's sake, the King himself was after branded by Perkin's Proclamation, for an execrable Breaker of the Rites of Holy Church.

The Priveleges of the Clergy Abridg'd.

Another Law was made for the better Peace of the Country; by which Law the King's Officers and Farmors were to forfeit their Places and Holds, in case of unlawful Retainer, or partaking in Routs and unlawful Assemblies.

These were the Laws that were made for repressing of Force, which those times did chiefly require; and were so prudently framed, as they 1488. th ey are found fit for all ſucceeding Times, and ſo continue to this Day.

There were alſo made good and politick Laws that Parliament againſt Uſury, which is the Baſtard Uſe of Money: And againſt unlawful Chievances and Exchanges, which is Baſtard Uſury: And alſo for the Security of the King's Cuſtoms: And for the Imployment of the Procedures of Foreign Commodities, brought in by Merchant-Strangers, upon the Native Commodities of the Realm: Together with ſome other Laws of leſs importance.

Unlawful Exchanges Prohibited.

But howſoever the Laws made in that Parliament did bear good and wholeſome Fruit; yet the Subſidy granted at the ſame time, bare a Fruit, that proved harſh and bitter. All was inned at laſt into the King's Barn; but it was after a Storm. For when the Commiſſioners entred into the Taxation of the Subſidy in Yorkſhire, and the Biſhoprick of Dureſme; the People upon a ſuddain grew into great Mutiny, and ſaid openly, that they had endured of late Years a thouſand Miſeries, and neither could nor would pay the Subſidy. This (no doubt) proceeded not ſimply of any preſent Neceſſity, but much by Reaſon of the old Humour of thoſe Countries, where the Memory of King Richard was ſo ſtrong, that it lies like Lees in the bottom of Mens Hearts; and if the Veſſel was but ſtirred, it would come up. And (no doubt) it was partly alſo by the Inſtigation of ſome Factious Malecontents, that bare principal ſtroke amongſt them. Hereupon the Commiſſioners being ſomewhat aſtoniſhed, deferr'd the matter unto the Earl of Northumberland, who was the principal Man of Authority in thoſe Parts. The Earl forthwith wrote unto the Court, ſignifying to the King plainly enough in what Flame he found the People of thoſe Countries, and praying the King's Direction. The King wrote back peremptorily, That he would not have one Penny abated, of that which had been granted to him by Parliament, both becauſe it might encourage other Countries to pray the like Releaſe, or Mitigation, and chiefly, becauſe he would never endure, that the baſe Multitude ſhould fruſtrate the Authority of the Parliament, wherein their Votes and Conſents were concluded. Upon this diſpatch from Court, the Earl aſſembled the principal Juſtices and Free-holders of the Country; and ſpeaking to them in that imperious Language wherein the King had written to him, which needed not (ſave that an Harſh-buſineſs was unfortunately fallen into the Hands of a Harſh-man) did not only irritate the People, but make them conceive, by the Stoutneſs and Haughtineſs of delivery of the King's Errand; that himſelf was the Author or principal Perſwader of that Counſel. Whereupon the meaner ſort routed together, and ſuddainly aſſayling the Earl in his Houſe, ſlew him, and divers of his Servants. And reſted not there, but creating for their Leader Sir John Egremond, a factious Perſon, and one that had of a long time born an ill Talent towards the King; and being animated alſo by a Baſe Fellow, called John a Chamber, a very Boutefeu, who bare much ſway amongſt the vulgar and popular, entred into open Rebellion, and gave out in flat Terms, that they would go againſt King Henry, and fight with him for the maintenance of their Liberties.

King Richards Memory honoured in Yorkſhire.

Earl of Northumberland ſlain by the People for gathering the Taxes with too much Severity.

When the King was advertiſed of this new Inſurrection (being almoſt a Fever, that took him every Year) after his manner little troubled therewith, he ſent Thomas Earl of Surry (whom he had a little before not only releaſed out of the Tower, and pardoned, but alſo received to ſpecial Favour) with a Competent Power againſt the Rebels; who fought with the Principal Band of them, and defeated them, and took alive John a Chamber, their Firebrand. As for Sir John Egremond, he fled into Flanders, to the Lady Margaret of Burgundy; whoſe Palace was the Sanctuary and Receptacle of all Traitors againſt the King. John a Chamber was executed at York, in great State; for he was hanged upon a Gibbet raiſed a Stage higher in the midſt of a Square Gallows, as a Traitor Paramount, and a number of his Men that were his chief Complices, were hanged upon the lower Story round about him; and the reſt were generally pardoned. Neither did the King himſelf omit his Cuſtom, to be firſt or ſecond in all his Warlike Exploits; making good his Word, which was uſual with him when he heard of Rebels; that He deſired but to ſee them. For immediately after he had ſent down the Earl of Surry, he marched towards them himſelf in Perſon. And although in his Journey he heard News of the Victory, yet he went on as far as York, to pacifie and ſettle thoſe Countries, And that done returned to London, leaving the Earl of Surry for his Lieutenant in the Northern Parts, and Sir Richard Tunſtall for his principal Commiſſioner, to levy the Subſidy, whereof he did not remit a Denyer.

1489. A Rebellion in Yorkſhire.

John a Chamber and his Fellow Rebels Hang'd.

King Henry's Saying when he heard of the Rebels.

About the ſame time that the King loſt ſo good a Servant, as the Earl of Northumberland, he loſt likewiſe a faithful Friend and Allie of James the Third King of Scotland, by a miſerable Diſaſter. For this unfortunate Prince, after a long ſmother of Diſcontent, and Hatred of many of his Nobility and People, breaking forth at times into Seditions and Alterations of Court, was at laſt diſtreſſed by them, having taken Arms, and ſurpriſed the Perſon of Prince James his Son, partly by Force, partly by Threats, that they would otherwiſe deliver up the Kingdom to the King of England, to ſhadow their Rebellion, and to be the Titular and painted Head of thoſe Arms. Whereupon the King (finding himſelf too weak) ſought unto King Henry, as alſo unto the Pope, and the King of France, to compoſe thoſe Troubles, between him and his Subjects. The Kings accordingly interpoſed their Mediation in a round and Princely manner: Not only by way of Requeſt and Perſwaſion, but alſo by way of Proteſtation of Menace; declaring, that they thought it to be the Common Cauſe of all Kings, If Subjects ſhould be ſuffered to give Laws unto their Soveraign; and that they would accordingly reſent it, and revenge it. But the Rebels that had ſhaken off the greater Yoke of Obedience, had likewiſe caſt away the leſſer Tye of Reſpect. And Fury prevailing above Fear, made anſwer, That there was no talking of Peace, except the King would reſign his Crown. Whereupon (Treatie of Accord taking no place) it came to a Battel, at Bannocks-Bourn by Strivelin. In which Battel the King tranſported with Wrath and juſt Indignation, inconſiderately fighting and precipitating the Charge, before his whole Numbers came up to him, was (notwithſtanding the contrary expreſs and ſtraight Commandment of the Prince his Son) ſlain in the Purſuit, being fled to a Mill, Situate in the Field, where the Battel was fought.

The Battel of Bannocksbourn in Scotland.

James the III. King of Scotland ſlain.

As for the Pope's Ambaſſy, which was ſent by Adrian De Caſtello an Italian Legate (and perhaps as thoſe times were might have prevail'd more) it came too late for the Ambaſſy, but not for the Ambaſſador. For paſſing through England, and being honourably entertained, and received of King Henry; (who ever applied himſelf with much reſpect to the Sea of Rome) he 1489. fell into great Grace with the King, and great Familiarity and Friendship with Morton the Chancellor. In so much as the King taking a liking to him, and finding him to his Mind, preferr'd him to the Bishoprick of Hereford, and afterwards to that of Bath and Wells, and imployed him in many of his Affairs of State, that had Relation to Rome. He was a Man of great Learning, Wisdom and Dexterity in Business of State; and having not long after ascended to the Degree of Cardinal, pay'd the King large Tribute of his Gratitude, in diligent and judicious Advertisement of the Occurrents of Italy. Nevertheless in the end of his time, he was Partaker of the Conspiracy, which Cardinal Alphonso Petrucci, and some other Cardinals had plotted against the Life of Pope Leo. And this Offence in it self so hainous, was yet in him aggravated by the Motive thereof; which was not Malice or Discontent, but an aspiring Mind to the Papacy. And in this Height of Impiety there wanted not an intermixture of Levity and Folly; for that (as was generally believed) he was animated to expect the Papacy, by a fatal Mockery, the Prediction of a Sooth-sayer, which was; That one should succeed Pope Leo, whose Name should be Adrian, an aged Man of mean Birth, and of great Learning and Wisdom. By which Character and Figure, he took himself to be describ'd, though it were fulfilled of Adrian the Flemming, Son of a Dutch Brewer, Cardinal of Tortosa, and Preceptor unto Charles the Fift; the same that not changing his Christen-name, was afterwards called Adrian the Sixt.

But these things happened in the Year following, which was the fifth of this King. But in the end of the fourth Year the King had called again his Parliament, not as it seemeth for any particular Occasion of State. But the former Parliament being ended somewhat suddenly, in regard of the Preparation for Brittain, the King thought he had not remunerated his People sufficiently with good Laws, which evermore was his Retribution for Treasure. And finding by the Insurrection in the North, there was Discontentment abroad, in respect of the Subsidy, he thought it good to give his Subjects yet further Contentment, and Comfort in that kind. Certainly his Times for good Common-wealths Laws did excel. So as he may justly be celebrated for the best Law-giver to this Nation, after King Edward the first. For his Laws (who so markes them well) are deep, and not vulgar; not made upon the Spur of a particular Occasion for the Present, but out of Providence of the Future, to make the Estate of his People still more and more happy; after the manner of the Legislators in Ancient and Heroical Times.

First therefore he made a Law, suitable to his own Acts and Times. For as himself had in his Person and Marriage made a final Concord, in the great Suit and Title for the Crown; so by this Law he settled the like Peace and Quiet in the Private Possessions of the Subjects. Ordaining, That Fines thenceforth should be final, to conclude all Strangers Rights; and that upon Fines levied, and solemnly proclaim'd, the Subject should have his Time of Watch for five Years after his Title accrued; which if he fore-passed, his Right should be bound for ever after; with some Exception nevertheless, of Minors, Married-Women, and such incompetent Persons.

Fines.

This Statute did in Effect but restore an Ancient Statute of the Realme, which was it self also made but in Affirmance of the Common-Law. The Alteration had been by a Statute, commonly called the Statute of Non-claim, made in the time of Edward the Third. And surely this Law was a kind of Prognostick of the good Peace, which since his time hath (for the most part) continued in this Kingdom, untill this Day. For Statutes of Non-claim are fit for times of War, when Mens Heads are Troubled, that they cannot intend their Estate; but Statutes, that quiet Possessions, are fittest for Times of Peace, to extinguish Suits and Contentions, which is one of the Banes of Peace.

1489. Statute of Non-claim.

Another Statute was made of singular Policy, for the Population apparently, and (if it be throughly considered) for the Souldiery, and Militar Forces of the Realm.

Inclosures at that time began to be more frequent, whereby Arable Land (which could not be manured without People and Families) was turned into Pasture, which was easily rid by a few Heards-men; and Tenancies for Years, Lives, and at Will (whereupon much of the Yeomanry lived) were turned into Demesnes. This bred a decay of People, and (by consequence) a decay of Towns, Churches, Tithes, and the like. The King likewise knew full well, and in no wise forgot, that there ensued with all upon this a Decay and Diminution of Subsidy and Taxes; for the more Gentlemen, ever the lower Books of Subsidies. In remedying of this inconvenience, the King's Wisdom was Admirable, and the Parliament's at that time. Inclosures they would not forbid, for that had been to forbid the Improvement of the Patrimony of the Kingdom; nor Tillage they would not compel, for that was to strive with Nature and Utility. But they took a Course to take away depopulating Inclosures, and depopulating Pasturage, and yet not by that Name, or by any Imperious expres Prohibition, but by Consequence. The Ordinance was, That all Houses of Husbandry, that were used with twenty Acres of Ground, and upwards, should be maintained and kept up for ever; together with a Competent Proportion of Land to be used and occupied with them; and in no wise to be severed from them, as by another Statute, made afterwards in his Successors time, was more fully declared. This upon Forfeiture to be taken; not by way of Popular Action, but by seizure of the Land it self, by the King and Lords of the Fee, as to half the Profits, till the Houses and Lands were restored. By this means the Houses being kept up, did of necessity inforce a Dweller; and the Proportion of Land for Occupation being kept up, did of necessity inforce that Dweller; not to be a Beggar or Cottager, but a Man of some Substance, that might keep Hinds and Servants, and set the Plough on going. This did wonderfully concern the Might and Manner-hood of the Kingdom, to have Farms, as it were of a Standard sufficient to maintain an able Body out of Penury, and did in effect amortize a great part of the Lands of the Kingdom unto the Hold and Occupation of the Yeomanry or Middle-People, of a Condition between Gentlemen, and Cottagers, or Peasants? Now, how much this did advance the Militar Power of the Kingdom, is apparent by the true Principles of War, and the Examples of other Kingdoms. For it hath been held by the general Opinion of Men of best Judgment in the Wars (howsoever some few have varied, and that it may receive some distinction of Case) that the Principal Strength of an Army consisteth in the Infantry or Foot. And to make good Infantry, it requireth Men bred, not in a servile or indigent Fashion, but in some free and plentiful

How the People came to Decay.

The Inconveniencies of Inclosures Remedy'd.

1489. Cottagers but Hous'd Beggars.

plentiful manner. Therefore if a State run moſt to Noble-men and Gentlemen, and that the Husband-men and Plough-men be but as their Work-folks and Labourers, or elſe mere Cottagers, (which are but Hous'd-Beggars) you may have a good Cavalry, but never good ſtable Bands of Foot; like to Coppice-Woods, that if you leave in them Staddles too thick, they will run to Buſhes and Briars, and have little clean Underwood. And this is to be ſeen in France, and Italy, and ſome other Parts abroad, where in Effect all is Nobleſs, or Peſantry, I ſpeak of People out of Towns, and no middle People; and therefore no good Forces of Foot: Inſomuch, as they are inforced to imploy Mercenary Bands, of Switzers and the like, for their Battalions of Foot: Whereby alſo it comes to paſs, that thoſe Nations have much People, and few Sonldiers. Whereas the King ſaw, that contrariwiſe it would follow, that England though much leſs in Territory, yet ſhould have infinitely more Souldiers of their Native Fotces, than thoſe other Nations have. Thus did the King ſecretly Sow Hidra's Teeth, whereupon (according to the Poets fiction) ſhould riſe up Armed Men for the Service of this Kingdom.

The Engliſh Navigation advanc'd.

The King alſo (having care to make his Realm potent, as well by Sea as by Land) for the better maintainance of the Navy, ordained; That Wines and Woads from the Parts of Gaſcoign and Languedock, ſhould not be brought but in Engliſh Bottoms; Bowing the Ancient Policy of this Eſtate, from conſideration of Plenty, to conſideration of Power. For that almoſt all the Ancient Statutes incite by all means Merchant-Strangers, to bring in all ſorts of Commodities; having for end Cheapneſs, and not looking to the Point of State concerning the Naval-Power.

The King alſo made a Statute in that Parliament Monitory and Minatory, towards Juſtices of Peace, that they ſhould duly execute their Office, inviting Complaints againſt them, firſt to their Fellow-Juſtices, then to the Juſtices of Aſſiſe, then to the King or Chancellor; and that a Proclamation, which he had publiſhed of that Tenor, ſhould be read in open Seſſions four times a Year, to keep them awake. Meaning alſo to have his Laws executed, and thereby to reap either Obedience or Forfeitures; (wherein towards his latter Times he did decline too much to the left Hand) he did ordain Remedy againſt the Practice that was grown in uſe, to ſtop and damp Informations upon Penal Laws, by procuring Informations by Colluſion to be put in by the Confederates of the Delinquents, to be faintly proſecuted, and let fall at Pleaſure, and pleading them in Bar of the Informations, which were proſecuted with Effect.

He made alſo Laws for the Correction of the Mint, and counterfeiting of Foreign Coyn currant. And that no payment in Gold, ſhould be made to any Merchant-Stranger, the better to keep Treaſure within the Realm, for that Gold was the Mettal that lay in leaſt Room.

His Statutes for incouraging Woollen Drapery.

He made alſo Statutes for the Maintenance of Drapery, and the keeping of Wools within the Realm; and not only ſo, but for ſtinting, and limiting the Prices of Cloth, one for the Finer, and another for the Courſer ſort. Which I note, both becauſe it was a rare thing to ſet Prices by Statute, eſpecially upon our Home-Commodities; and becauſe of the Wiſe Model of this Act, not preſcribing Prices, but ſtinting them not to exceed a Rate, that the Clothier might drape accordingly as he might afford. 1489.

Divers other good Statutes were made that Parliament, but theſe were the Principal. And here I do deſire thoſe, into whoſe Hands this Work ſhall fall, that they do take in good part my long inſiſting upon the Laws, that were made in this King's Reign. Whereof I have theſe Reaſons; Both becauſe it was the prehemineut Vertue and Merit of this King, to whoſe Memory I do honour; and becauſe it hath ſome Correſpondence to my Perſon; but chiefly, becauſe (in my Judgment) it is ſome Defect even in the beſt Writers of Hiſtory, that they do not often enough ſummarily deliver and ſet down the moſt Memorable Laws, that paſſed in the Times whereof they write, being indeed the Principal Acts of Peace. For though they may be had in Original Books of Law themſelves, yet that informeth not the Judgment of Kings and Councellors, and Perſons of Eſtate, ſo well as to ſee them deſcrib'd, and entred into the Table and Pourtrait of the Times.

About the ſame time, the King had a Loan from the City of Four thouſand pounds; which was double to that they lent before, (a) and was duely and orderly pay'd back at the Day, as the former likewiſe had been. The King ever choſing rather to borrow too ſoon, than to pay too late, and ſo keeping up his Credit.

Neither had the King yet caſt off his Cares and Hopes touching Brittain, but thought to Maſter the Occaſion by Policy, though his Arms had been unfortunate, and to bereave the French King of the Fruit of his Victory. The Sum of his Deſign was, to encourage Maximilian to go on with his Suit, for the Marriage of Ann, the Heir of Brittain, and to Aid him to the Conſummation thereof. But the Affairs of Maximilian were at that time in great Trouble and Combuſtion, by a Rebellion of his Subjects in Flanders; eſpecially thoſe of Bruges and Gaunt, whereof the Town of Bruges (at ſuch time as Maximilian was there in Perſon) had ſuddenly Arm'd in Tumult, and ſlain ſome of his Principal Officers, and taken himſelf Priſoner, and held him in Durance, till they had enforced him, and ſome of his Councellors, to take a ſolemn Oath, to pardon all their Offences, and never to queſtion and revenge the ſame in time to come. Nevertheleſs Frederick the Emperor would not ſuffer this Reproach and Indignity offer'd to his Son to paſs, but made ſharp War upon Flanders, to reclaim and chaſtiſe the Rebels. But the Lord Ravenſtein, a principal Perſon about Maximilian, and one that had taken the Oath of Abolition with his Maſter, pretending the Religion thereof, but indeed upon private Ambition, and (as it was thought) inſtigated and corrupted from France, forſook the Emperor and Maximilian his Lord, and made himſelf an Head of the Popular Party, and ſeiz'd upon the Towns of Ipre and Sluce, with both the Caſtles, And forthwith ſent to the Lord Cordes, Governour of Picardy under the French King, to deſire Aid, and to move him, that he on the behalf of the French King would be Protector of the united Towns, and by Force of Arms reduce the reſt. The Lord Cordes was ready to embrace the Occaſion, which was partly of his own ſetting, and ſent forthwith greater Forces, than it had been poſſible for him to raiſe on the ſudden, if he had not looked for ſuch a Summons before, in Aid of the Lord Ravenſtein, and the Flemmings, with Inſtructions to inveſt the Towns between France and

(a) The King borrowed of every Alderman 200*l.* and of the Chamber of London 9082*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* Hollinſhead.

Bruges,

1489. Bruges. The French Forces beſieged a little Town called Dixmue, where part of the Flemmiſh Forces joyned with them. While they lay at this Siege, the King of England, upon pretence of the ſafety of the Engliſh Pale about Calice, but in truth being loth that Maximilian ſhould become contemptible, and thereby be ſhaken off by the States of Brittain about this Marriage, ſent over the Lord Morley with a thouſand Men unto the Lord Daubigny, then Deputy of Calice, with ſecret Inſtructions to aid Maximilian, and to raiſe the Siege of Dixmue. The Lord Daubigny (giving it out that all was for the Strengthning of the Engliſh Marches) drew out of the Garriſons of Calice, Hammes, and Guines, to the Number of a Thouſand Men more. So that with the freſh Succours that came under the Conduct of the Lord Morley, they made up to the Number of two Thouſand, or better. Which Forces joyning with ſome Companies of Almains, put themſelves into Dixmue, not perceived by the Enemies; and paſſing through the Town with ſome Re-inforcement (from the Forces that were in the Town) aſſail'd the Enemies Camp, negligently guarded, as being out of Fear; where there was a bloody Fight, in which the Engliſh and their Partakers obtain'd the Victory, and ſlew to the Number of eight Thouſand Men, with the loſs on the Engliſh part of a Hundred or thereabouts; amongſt whom was the Lord Morley. They took alſo their great Ordnance, with much rich Spoils, which they carried to Newport, whence the Lord Daubigny return'd to Calice, leaving the hurt Men, and ſome other Voluntaries in Newport. But the Lord Cordes being at Ipre with a great power of Men, thinking to recover the Loſs and Diſgrace of the Fight at Dixmue, came preſently on, and ſate down before Newport and Beſieged it; and after ſome days Siege, he reſolv'd to try the Fortune of an Aſſault: Which he did one day, and ſucceeded therein ſo far, that he had taken the principal Tower and Fort in that City, and planted upon it the French Banner. Whence nevertheleſs they were preſently beaten forth by the Engliſh, by the help of ſome freſh Succours of Archers arriving by good Fortune (at the inſtant) in the Haven of Newport. Whereupon the Lord Cordes diſcouraged, and meaſuring the new Succours (which were ſmall) by the Succeſs (which was great) levied his Siege. By this means, Matters grew more exaſperate between the two Kings of England and France, for that in the War of Flanders, the Auxiliary Forces of French and Engliſh were much blooded one againſt another. Which Blood rankled the more, by the vain Words of the Lord Cordes, that declared himſelf an open Enemy of the Engliſh, beyond that that appertain'd to the preſent Service; making it a common By-word of his, That he could be content to lie in Hell ſeven Years, ſo he might win Calice from the Engliſh.

The Lord Corde's hatred to the Engliſh.

The King having thus upheld the Reputation of Maximilian, adviſed him now to preſs on his Marriage with Brittain to a Concluſion. Which Maximilian accordingly did, and ſo far forth prevail'd both with the young Lady, and with the principal Perſons about her, as the Marriage was conſummate by Proxy, with a Ceremony at that time in theſe Parts new. For ſhe was not only publickly contracted, but ſtated as a Bride, and ſolemnly Bedded; and after ſhe was laid, there came in Maximilian's Ambaſſador with Letters of Procuration, and in the preſence of ſundry Noble Perſonages, Men and Women, put his Leg (ſtript naked to the Knee) between the Eſpouſal Sheets; to the end, that that Ceremony might be thought to amount to a Conſummation and actual Knowledge. This done, Maximilian (whoſe Property was to leave things then, when they were almoſt come to Perfection, and to end them by Imagination; like ill Archers, that draw not their Arrows up to the Head: and who might as eaſily have bedded the Lady himſelf, as to have made a Play and Diſguiſe of it) thinking now all aſſured, neglected for a time his further Proceeding, and intended his Wars. Mean while, the French King (conſulting with his Divines, and finding that this pretended Conſummation was rather an Invention of Court, than any ways valid by the Laws of the Church) went more really to work, and by ſecret Inſtruments and cunning Agents, as well Matrons about the young Lady as Councellors, firſt ſought to remove the Point of Religion and Honour out of the Mind of the Lady her ſelf, wherein there was a double Labour. For Maximilian was not only contracted unto the Lady, but Maximilian's Daughter was likewiſe contracted to King Charles. So as the Marriage halted upon both Feet, and was not clear on either Side: But for the Contract with King Charles, the Exception lay plain and fair; for that Maximilian's Daughter was under Years of Conſent, and ſo not bound by Law, but a power of Diſagreement left to either part. But for the Contract made by Maximilian with the Lady her ſelf, they were harder driven: Having nothing to alledge, but that it was done without the conſent of her Sovereign Lord King Charles, whoſe Ward and Client ſhe was, and He to her in place of a Father; and therefore it was void, and of no force, for want of ſuch Conſent. Which Defect (they ſaid) tho' it would not evacuate a Marriage, after Cohabitation, and Actual Conſummation; yet it was enough to make void a Contract. For as for the pretended Conſummation, they made Sport with it, and ſaid, That it was an Argument, that Maximilian was a Widdower, and a cold Wooer, that could content himſelf to be a Bridegroom by Deputy, and would not make a little Journey, to put all out of Queſtion. So that the young Lady, wrought upon by theſe Reaſons, finely inſtilled by ſuch as the French King (who ſpared for no Rewards or Promiſes) had made on his Side; and allured likewiſe by the preſent Glory and Greatneſs of King Charles, (being alſo a young King, and a Batchellor) and loth to make her Country the Seat of a long and miſerable War; ſecretly yielded to accept of King Charles. But during this ſecret Treaty with the Lady, the better to ſave it from Blaſts of Oppoſition and Interruption, King Charles reſorting to his wonted Arts, and thinking to carry the Marriage as he had carried the Wars, by entertaining the King of England in vain belief, ſent a Solemn Ambaſſage by Francis Lord of Luxemburg, Charles Marignian and Robert Gaguien, General of the Order of the Bonnes Hommes of the Trinity, to treat a Peace and League with the King; accoupling it with an Article in the Nature of a Requeſt, that the French King might with the King's good Will (according unto his Right of Seigniory and Tutelage) diſpoſe of the Marriage of the young Dutcheſs of Brittain, as he ſhould think good; offering by a Judicial Proceeding to make Void the Marriage of Maximilian by Proxy. Alſo all this while the better to amuſe the World, he did continue in his Court and Cuſtody the Daughter of Maximilian, who formerly had been ſent unto him, to be bred and educated in France; not diſmiſſing or renvoying her, but contrariwiſe profeſſing and giving out ſtrongly, that he meant to proceed with that Match. And that for

The Diſſimulation of the Fr. King.

A New Ceremony of Marriage.

1490. for the Dutchess of Britain, he desired only to preserve his Right of Seigniory, and to give her in Marriage to some such Allie, as might depend upon him.

When the three Commissioners came to the Court of England, they deliver'd their Ambassage unto the King, who remitted them to his Council; where some days after they had Audience, and made their Proposition by the Prior of the Trinity (who tho' he were Third in Place, yet was held the beast Speaker of them) to this Effect.

The Fr. Ambassadors Speech.

" MY Lords, the King our Master, the greatest and mightiest King that reigned in France since Charles the Great (whose Name he beareth), hath nevertheless thought it no Disparagement to his Greatness, at this time to propound a Peace, yea, and to pray a Peace with the King of England. For which Purpose he hath sent us his Commissioners, instructed and enabled with full and ample Power, to treat and conclude; giving us further in Charge, to open in some other Business the Secrets of his own Intentions. These be indeed the precious Love-Tokens between great Kings, to communicate one with another the true state of their Affairs, and to pass by nice Points of Honour, which ought not to give Law unto Affection. This I do assure your Lordships, It is not possible for you to imagine the true and cordial Love that the King our Master beareth to your Sovereign, except you were near him, as we are. He useth his Name with so great respect; He remembreth their first Acquaintance at Paris with so great Contentment; nay, he never speaks of him, but that presently he falls into Discourse of the Miseries of great Kings, in that they cannot converse with their Equals, but with Servants. This Affection to your King's Person and Vertues, God hath put into the Heart of our Master, no doubt for the good of Christendom, and for Purposes yet unknown to us all. For other Root it cannot have, since it was the same to the Earl of Richmond, that it is now to the King of England. This is therefore the first Motive that makes our King to desire Peace, and League with your Sovereign: Good Affection, and somewhat that he finds in his own Heart. This Affection is also arm'd with reason of Estate. For our King doth in all Candour and Frankness of dealing open himself unto you; that having an honourable, yea, and a holy Purpose to make a Voyage and War in remote Parts, he considereth that it will be of no small effect, in point of Reputation to his Enterprize, if it be known Abroad, that he is in good Peace with all his Neighbour Princes, and specially with the King of England, whom for good Causes he esteemeth most.

" But now (my Lords) give me leave to use a few words to remove all Scruples and Misunderstandings between your Sovereign and ours, concerning some late Actions; which if they be not cleared, may perhaps hinder this Peace. To the end, that for Matter past, neither King may conceive Unkindness of other, nor think the other conceiveth Unkindness of him. The late Actions are two; That of Britain and that of Flanders. In both which, it is true, that the Subjects Swords of both Kings have encountred and stricken, and the Ways and Inclinations also of the two Kings, in respect of their Confederates and Allies, have severed.

" For that of Britain; The King your Sove- 1490.
" reign knoweth best what hath passed. It was " a War of Necessity on our Master's part. And
" tho' the Motives of it were sharp and pi-
" quant as could be, yet did he make that War
" rather with an Olive-Branch than a Laurel-
" Branch in his Hand, more desiring Peace than " Victory. Besides, from time to time he sent
" (as it were) Blank-Papers to your King, to " write the Conditions of Peace. For tho' both
" his Honour and Safety went upon it, yet he " thought neither of them too precious, to put " into the King of England's hands. Neither
" doth your King on the other Side make any
" Unfriendly Interpretation, of your King's
" sending of Succours to the Duke of Britain;
" for the King knoweth well, that many things
" must be done of Kings for Satisfaction of their " People, and it is not hard to discern what is " a King's own. But this Matter of Britain is
" now (by the Act of God) ended and passed;
" and (as the King hopeth) like the way of a
" Ship in the Sea, without leaving any Impres-
" sion in either of the Kings Minds; as he is " sure for his part it hath not done in his.

" For the Action of Flanders; As the former
" of Britain was a War of Necessity, so this was
" a War of Justice; which with a good King
" is of equal Necessity, with danger of Estate,
" for else he should leave to be a King. The " Subjects of Burgundy are Subjects in Chief to
" the Crown of France, and their Duke the Ho-
" mager and Vassal of France. They had wont
" to be good Subjects, howsoever Maximilian
" hath of late distemper'd them. They fled to " the King for Justice, and Deliverance from Op-
" pression. Justice he could not deny; Purchase
" he did not seek. This was good for Maximi-
" lian, if he could have seen it in People mu-
" tined to arrest Fury, and prevent Despair. My
" Lords, it may be this I have said is needless,
" save that the King our Master is tender in " any thing, that may but glance upon the " Friendship of England. The Amity between " the two Kings (no doubt) stands entire and
" inviolate. And that their Subjects Swords
" have clashed, it is nothing unto the publick
" Peace of the Crowns; it being a thing very " usual in Auxiliary Forces of the best and
" straitest Confederates, to meet and draw blood
" in the Field. Nay, many times there be Aids
" of the same Nation on both sides, and yet it
" is not (for all that) A Kingdom divided in
" it self.

" It resteth (my Lords) that I impart unto
" you a Matter, that I know your Lordships all
" will much rejoyce to hear; as that which im-
" porteth the Christian Commonweal more than " any Action that hath hapned of long time.
" The King our Master hath a Purpose and De" termination, to make War upon the Kingdom
" of Naples; being now in the Possession of a
" Bastardship of Arragon, but appertaining unto
" his Majesty, by clear and undoubted Right;
" which if he should not by just Arms seek to " recover, he could neither acquit his Honour,
" nor Answer it to his People. But his Noble
" and Christian Thoughts rest not here. For
" his Resolution and Hope is, to make the Re-
" conquest of Naples, but as a Bridge to trans-
" port his Forces into Grecia; and not to spare
" Blood or Treasure (if it were to the impawn-
" ing of his Crown, and dispeopling of France)
" till either he hath Overthrown the Empire of
" the Ottomans, or taken it in his Way to Pa" radise. The King knoweth well, that this is " a Design, that could not arise in the Mind of any

1490. " any King, that did not ſtedfaſtly look up unto God, whoſe Quarrel this is, and from whom " cometh both the Will and the Deed. But " yet it is agreeable to the Perſon that he bear- " eth (tho' unworthy) of the Thrice-Chriſtian " King, and the eldeſt Son of the Church. " Whereunto he is alſo invited by the Example " (in more Ancient time) of King Henry IV. of " England, (the firſt renown'd King of the Houſe " of Lancaſter; Anceſtor, tho' not Progenitor " to your King) who had a Purpoſe towards " the End of his Time (as you know better) " to make an Expedition into the Holy-Land; " and by the Example alſo (preſent before his " Eyes) of that Honourable and Religious War " which the King of Spain now maketh, and " hath almoſt brought to Perfection, for the " recovery of the Realm of Granada from the " Moors. And altho' this Enterprize may ſeem " vaſt and unmeaſur'd, for the King to attempt " that by his own Forces, wherein heretofore " a Conjunction of moſt of the Chriſtian Prin- " ces hath found Work enough; yet his Ma- " jeſty wiſely conſidereth, that ſometimes ſmal- " ler Forces being united under one Command, " are more effectual in Proof (tho' not ſo pro- " miſing in Opinion and Fame) than much grea- " ter Forces, variouſly compounded by Aſſoci- " ations and Leagues; which commonly in a " ſhort time after their Beginnings, turn to " Diſſociations and Diviſions. But my (Lords) " that which is as a Voice from Heaven that " called the King to this Enterprize, is a Rent " at this time in the Houſe of the Ottomans. " I do not ſay, but there hath been Brother " againſt Brother in that Houſe before, but " never any that had refuge to the Arms of " the Chriſtians, as now hath Gemes, (Brother " unto Bajazeth, that reigneth) the far braver " Man of the two; the other being between a " Monk and a Philoſopher, and better read in " the Alcoran and Averroes, than Able to wield " the Scepter of ſo Warlike an Empire. This " therefore is the King our Maſter's memora- " ble and Heroical Reſolution for an Holy War. " And becauſe he carrieth in this the Perſon of " a Chriſtian Soldier, as well as of a great Tem- " poral Monarch; he beginneth with Humility, " and is content for this Cauſe to beg Peace at " the hands of other Chriſtian Kings. There " remaineth only rather a Civil Requeſt, than " any Eſſential part of our Negotiation, which " the King maketh to the King your Sovereign. " The King (as the World knoweth) is Lord " in Chief of the Dutchy of Brtitain. The Mar- " riage of the Heir belongeth to him as Guar- " dian. This is a private Patrimonial Right, " and no Buſineſs of Eſtate: yet nevertheleſs " (to run a fair Courſe with your King; whom " he deſires to make another Himſelf, and to " be one and the ſame thing with him) his " Requeſt is, That with the King's Favour " and Conſent, he may diſpoſe of her Mar- " riage, as he thinketh good, and make void " the intruded and pretended Marriage of " Maximilian, according to Juſtice. This (my " Lords) is all that I have to ſay, deſiring " your Pardon for my Weakneſs in the De- " livery.

Thus did the French Ambaſſadors with great ſhew of their King's Affection, and many ſugar'd Words ſeek to adulce all Matters between the two Kings, having two Things for their Ends; The one, to keep the King quiet till the Marriage of Brittain was paſt, and this was but a Summer Fruit, which they thought was al- moſt ripe and would be ſoon gathered. The other was more laſting; and that was to put him into ſuch a temper as he might be no Diſturbance or Impediment to the Voyage for Italy. The Lords of the Council were Silent; and ſaid only, That they knew the Ambaſſadors would look for no Anſwer, till they had reported to the King; and ſo they roſe from Council. The King could not well tell what to think of the Marriage of Brittain. He ſaw plainly the Ambition of the French King was to impatronize himſelf of the Dutchy; but he wondred he would bring into his Houſe a litigious Marriage, eſpecially conſidering who was his Succeſſor. But weighing one thing with another, he gave Brittain for loſt; but reſolv'd to make his Profit of this Buſineſs of Brittain, as a Quarrel for War; and that of Naples, as a Wrench and Mean for Peace; being well advertiſed how ſtrongly the King was bent upon that Action. Having therefore conferred divers times with his Council, and keeping himſelf ſomewhat cloſe; he gave a Direction to the Chancellor, for a formal Anſwer to the Ambaſſadors, and that he did in the preſence of his Council. And after calling the Chancellor to him apart, bad him ſpeak in ſuch Language as was fit for a Treaty that was to end in a Breach; and gave him alſo a Special Caveat, that he ſhould not uſe any words, to diſcourage the Voyage of Italy. Soon after the Ambaſſadors were ſent for to the Council, and the Lord Chancellor ſpake to them in this ſort.

The Lord Chancellor's Anſwer to the French Ambaſſador's Speech.

" MY Lords Ambaſſadors, I ſhall make " anſwer by the King's Command- " ment, unto the Eloquent Declaration of you " my Lord Prior, in a brief and plain manner. " The King forgetteth not his former Love and " Acquaintance with the King your Maſter. But " of this there needeth no Repetition. For if it " be between them as it was, it is well; if there " be any Alteration, it is not Words that will " make it up.

" For the Buſineſs of Britain, the King findeth it " a little ſtrange that the French King maketh " mention of it, as Matter of well deſerving at his " Hand. For that Deſerving was no more, but " to make him his Inſtrument, to ſurpriſe one " of his beſt Confederates. And for the Mar- " riage, the King would not meddle in it if " your Maſter would marry by the Book, and " not by the Sword.

" For that of Flanders, if the Subjects of Bur- " gundy had appeal'd to your King, as their " Chief Lord, at firſt, by way of Supplication; " it might have had a Shew of Juſtice. But it " was a new Form of Proceſs, for Subjects to " impriſon their Prince firſt, and to ſlay his Offi- " cers, and then to be Complainants. The " King ſaith, that ſure he is, when the French " King, and himſelf ſent to the Subjects of Scot- " land (that had taken Arms againſt their " King) they both ſpake in another Stile, and " did in Princely manner ſignifie their Deteſta- " tion of Popular Attentates, upon the Perſon " or Authority of Princes. But my Lords Am- " baſſadors, the King leaveth theſe two Actions " thus: That on the one Side, he hath not recei- " ved any manner of Satisfaction from you con- " cerning them; and on the other, that he doth " not apprehend them ſo deeply, as in reſpect " of them, to refuſe to treat of Peace, if other " things may go hand in hand. As for the War " of Naples, and the Deſign againſt the Turk; " the King hath commanded me expreſly to ſay, " That he doth wiſh with all his Heart, to his " good

1490. " good Brother the French King, that his For" tunes may ſucceed according to his Hopes, and " honourable Intentions. And whenſoever he
" ſhall hear, that he is prepared for Grecia, as " your Maſter is pleaſed now to ſay, that he
" beggeth a Peace of the King, ſo the King
" will then beg of him a part in that War.

" But now my Lords Ambaſſadors, I am to " propound unto you ſomewhat on the King's
" part. The King your Maſter hath Taught
" our King what to ſay and demand. You ſay
" (my Lord Prior) that your King is reſolv'd
" to recover his Right to Naples, wrongfully de" tained from him. And that if he ſhould not
" thus do, he could not acquit his Honour, nor
" anſwer it to his People. Think (my Lords)
" that the King our Maſter ſaith the ſame thing
" over again to you touching Normandy, Guien,
" Angeou, yea and the Kingdom of France it ſelf.
" I cannot expreſs it better than in your own " Words: If therefore the French King ſhall con-
" ſent, that the King our Maſter's Title to France
" (at leaſt Tribute for the ſame) be handled in
" the Treaty, the King is content to go on
" with the reſt; otherwiſe he refuſeth to " Treat.

The K's Title to the Crown of France renew'd.

THE Ambaſſadors being ſomewhat abaſhed with this Demand, anſwered in ſome Heat; That they doubted not, but the King their Soveraign's Sword would be able to maintain his Scepter: And they aſſured themſelves, he neither could nor would yield to any Diminution of the Crown of France either in Territory or Regality. But howſoever, they were too great matters for them to ſpeak of, having no Commiſſion. It was replied; that the King looked for no other Anſwer from them; but would forth-with ſend his own Ambaſſadors to the French King. There was a Queſtion alſo asked at the Table, Whether the French King would agree to have the diſpoſing of the Marriage of Britain with an Exception and Excluſion, that he ſhould not marry her himſelf? To which the Ambaſſadors anſwered; That it was ſo far out of their King's Thoughts, as they had received no Inſtructions touching the ſame. Thus were the Ambaſſadors diſmiſſed, all ſave the Prior; and were followed immediately by Thomas Earl of Ormond, and Thomas Goldenſton Prior of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; who were preſently ſent over into France. In the mean ſpace, Lionell Biſhop of Concordia, was ſent as Nuntio from Pope Alexander the ſixth to both Kings, to move a Peace between them. For Pope Alexander finding himſelf pent and lockt up, by a League and Aſſociation of the Principal States of Italy, that he could not make his way for the Advancement of his own Houſe (which he immoderately thirſted after) was deſirous to trouble the Waters in Italy, that he might fiſh the better; caſting the Net, not out of Saint Peter's, but out of Borgia's Bark. And doubting leaſt the Fears from England, might ſtay the French King's Voyage into Italy, diſpatch'd this Biſhop to compoſe all matters between the two Kings, if he could. Who firſt repaired to the French King, and finding him well inclined (as he conceiv'd) took on his Journey towards England, and found the Engliſh Ambaſſadors at Calice, on their Way towards the French King. After ſome Conference with them, he was in Honourable manner tranſported over into England, where he had Audience of the King. But notwithſtanding he had a good Ominous Name to have made a Peace, nothing followed. For in the mean time, the purpoſe of the French King to marry the Dutcheſs could be no longer diſſembled. Wherefore the Engliſh Ambaſſadors (finding how things went) took their Leaves and returned. And the Prior alſo was warned from hence, to depart out of England. Who when he turned his back (more like a Pedant, than an Ambaſſador) diſperſed a bitter Libel, in Latin Verſe, againſt the King; unto which the King (though he had nothing of a Pedant) yet was content to cauſe an anſwer to be made in like Verſe; and that as ſpeaking in his own Perſon, but in a Style of Scorn and Sport. About this time alſo was born the Kings ſecond Son Henry, who afterward reigned. And ſoon after followed the Solemnization of the Marriage between Charles and Ann Dutcheſs of Britain, with whom he received the Dutchy of Britain as her Dowry; the Daughter of Maximilian being a little before ſent home. Which when it came to the Ears of Maximilian (who would never believe it till it was done, being ever the Principal in deceiving himſelf, though in this the French King did very handſomly ſecond it) and tumbling it over and over in his Thoughts, that he ſhould at one Blow (with ſuch a double ſcorn) be defeated, both of the Marriage of his Daughter, and his own (upon both which he had fixed high Imaginations;) he loſt all Patience, and caſting off the Reſpects fit to be continued between great Kings (even when their Blood is hotteſt, and moſt riſen) fell to bitter Invectives againſt the Perſon and Actions of the French King. And (by how much he was leſs able to do, talking ſo much the more) ſpake all the Injuries he could deviſe of Charles, ſaying; That he was the moſt Perfidious Man upon the Earth, and that he had made a Marriage compounded between an Advoutry and a Rape: which was done (he ſaid) by the juſt Judgment of God, to the end that (the Nullity thereof being ſo apparent to all the World) the Race of ſo unworthy a Perſon might not reign in France. And forthwith he ſent Ambaſſadors as well to the King of England, as to the King of Spain, to incite them to War, and to treat a League offenſive againſt France, promiſing to concur with great Forces of his own. Hereupon the King of England (going nevertheleſs his own way) called a Parliament, it being the ſeventh Year of his Reign; and the firſt day of opening thereof (ſitting under his Cloth of Eſtate) ſpake himſelf unto his Lords, and Commons in this manner.

1490.

The King orders a Copy of Verſes to be written is anſwer to ſome againſt him.

King Henry 8th. Born. The Prince, according to Holinſhead was born the 22d. of June 1491.

Bretagne annex'd to the Crown of France.

" MY Lords, and you the Commons; when
" I purpoſed to make a War in Brittain
" by my Lieutenant, I made Declaration there-
" of to you by my Chancellor. But now that " I mean to make a War upon France in Perſon,
" I will declare it to you my ſelf. That War,
" was to defend another Man's Right, but this " is to recover our own; And that ended by " Accident, but we hope this ſhall end in Vi" ctory.

The King's Speech to his Parliament.

" The French King troubles the Chriſtian
" World. That which he hath, is not his own,
" and yet he ſeeketh more. He hath inveſted
" himſelf of Brittain. He maintaineth the Re" bels in Flanders; and he threatneth Italy. For
" Our Selves, he hath proceeded from Diſſimu-
" lation, to Neglect; and from Neglect to Con-
" tumely. He hath aſſayled our Confederates:
" He denyeth our Tribute: In a word, he ſeeks
" War. So did not his Father, but ſought
" Peace at our Hands; and ſo perhaps will he,
" when good Council or Time, ſhall make him
" ſee as much as his Father did.

" Mean while; let us make his Ambition, our " Advantage; and let us not ſtand upon a few

1490. " Crowns of Tribute, or Acknowledgment, " but (by the Favour of Almighty God) try " Our Right for the Crown of France it self; " remembring that there hath been a French King " Priſoner in England, and a King of England " Crowned in France. Our Confederates are " not diminiſhed. Burgundy is in a mightier " Hand then ever, and never more provoked. " Brittain cannot help us, but it may hurt them. " New Acqueſts are more Burthen, than ſtrength. " The Male-contents of his own Kingdom have " not been Baſe, Popular nor Titulary Impo- " ſtors, but of an higher Nature. The King " of Spain (doubt ye not) will joyn with us, not " knowing where the French Kings Ambition " will ſtay. Our holy Father the Pope, likes " no Tramontanes in Italy. But howſoever it " be, this Matter of Confederates, is rather to " be thought on than reckoned on. For God " forbid, but England ſhould be able to get " Reaſon of France, without a Second.

" At the Battels of Creſſy, Poictiers, Agent- " Court, we were of our ſelves. France hath " much People, and few Souldiers. They have " no ſtable Bands of Foot. Some good Horſe " they have; but thoſe are Forces, which are " leaſt fit for a Defenſive War, where the Acti- " ons are in the Aſſailants choice. It was our " Diſorders only, that loſt France; and (by the " Power of God) it is the good Peace which " we now enjoy, that will recover it. God " hath hitherto bleſſed my Sword. I have in " this time that I have Reigned, weeded out " my bad Subjects, and tryed my good. My " People and I know one another; which breeds " Confidence. And if there ſhould be any bad " Blood left in the Kingdom, an Honourable " forreign War will vent it, or purify it. In " this great Buſineſs, let me have your advice, " and Aid. If any of you were to make his Son " Knight, you might have aid of your Tenants " by Law. This concerns the Knighthood and " Spurs of the Kingdom, whereof I am Father; " and bound not only to ſeek to maintain it, but " to advance it. But for Matter of Treaſure, " let it not be taken from the Pooreſt Sort; but " from thoſe, to whom the Benefit of the War " may redound. France is no Wilderneſs: and " I, that profeſs Good Husbandry, hope to " make the War (after the beginnings) to pay it " ſelf. Go together God's Name in and loſe no " time; for I have called this Parliament whol- " ly for this Cauſe.

He deſires the Parliament to adviſe him.

Thus ſpake the King; But for all this, though he ſhewed great Forwardneſs for a War, not only to his Parliament and Court, but to his Privy-Council likewiſe, (except the two Biſhops and a few more) yet nevertheleſs in his Secret Intentions, he had no Purpoſe to go through with any War, upon France. But the Truth was, that he did but traffick with that War, to make his Return in Money. He knew well, that France was now entire, and at Unity with it ſelf, and never ſo mighty many Years before. He ſaw by the taſt that he had of his Forces ſent into Brittain, that the French knew well enough how to make War with the Engliſh; by not putting things to the Hazard of a Battel, but wearying them by long Sieges of Towns, and ſtrong Fortifyed Encampings. James the III. of Scotland, (his true Friend, and Confederate) gone; and James the IV (that had ſucceeded) wholly at the Devotion of France, and ill affected towards him. As for the Conjunctions of Ferdinando of Spain, and Maximilian; he could make no Foundation upon them. For the one had Power, and not Will; and the other hath Will, and not Power. Beſides that, Ferdinando had but newly taken Breath, from the War with the Moors; and Merchanded at this time with France, for the reſtoring of the Counties of Ruſſingnon and Perpignian, oppignorated to the French. Neither was he out of Fear of the Diſcontents, an ill Blood within the Realm; which having uſed always to repreſs and appeaſe in Perſon, he was loth they ſhould find him at a diſtance beyond Sea, and engaged in War. Finding therefore the Inconveniences and Difficulties in the proſecution of a War, he caſt with himſelf how to compaſs two things. The one, how by the Declaration and Inchoation of a War, to make his Profit. The other, how to come off from the War, with ſaving of his Honour. For Profit, it was to be made two ways; upon his Subjects for the War, and upon his Enemies for the Peace; like a good Merchant, that maketh his Gain, both upon the Commodities exported, and imported back again. For the Point of Honour, wherein he might ſuffer, for giving over the War; he conſidered well, that as he could not truſt upon the aids of Ferdinando and Maximilian for Supports of War: ſo the Impuiſſance of the one, and the double proceeding of the other, lay fair for him for Occaſions to accept of Peace. Theſe things he did wiſely fore-ſee, and did as artificially conduct, whereby all things fell into his Lap, as he deſired.

The King Pretends War only to get Money.

For as for the Parliament, it preſently took Fire, being affectionate (of old) to the War of France; and deſirous a-freſh to repair the Diſhonour, they thought the King ſuſtained by the Loſs of Brittain. Therefore they adviſed the King (with great Alacrity) to undertake the War of France. And although the Parliament conſiſted of the Firſt and ſecond Nobility (together with Principal Citizens and Townſmen) yet worthily and juſtly reſpecting more the People (whoſe Deputies they were) than their own private Perſons, and finding by the Lord Chancellor's Speech the King's Inclination that way; they conſented that Commiſſioners ſhould go forth, for the gathering and levying of a Benevolence, from the more able ſort. This Tax (called Benevolence) was deviſed by Edward the Fourth for which he ſuſtained much Envy. It was aboliſhed by Richard the Third by Act of Parliament, to ingratiate himſelf with the People; and it was now revived by the King, but with conſent of Parliament, for ſo it was not in the time of King Edward the Fourth. But by this way he raiſed exceeding great Sums. Inſomuch as the City of London (in thoſe Days) contributed nine thouſand Pounds and better; and that chiefly levied upon the Wealthier ſort. There is a Tradition of a Dilemma, that Biſhop Morton the Chancellor uſed to raiſe up the Benevolence to higher Rates; and ſome called it his Fork, and ſome his Crutch. For he had couch'd an Article in the Inſtructions to the Commiſſioners, who were to levy the Benevolence; That if they met with any that were ſparing, they ſhould tell them, That they muſt needs have, becauſe they laid up; and if they were ſpenders, they muſt needs have, becauſe it was ſeen in their Port, and manner of living. So neither kind came amiſs.

A Benevolence granted the King for a War with France.

Who the firſt Author of Benevolences.

They are aboliſhed

And revived.

Biſhop Morton's Dilemma.

This Parliament was merely a Parliament of War; for it was in ſubſtance, but a Declaration of War againſt France and Scotland, with ſome Statutes conducing thereunto; as the ſevere puniſhing of Mort-pays, and keeping back of Souldiers Wages and Captains. The like Severity for the Departure of Souldiers without Licence;

Strengthening

1490. Strengthening of the Common-Law in favour of Protections, for thoſe that were in the King's Service; And the ſetting the Gate open and wide, for Men to ſell or morgage their Lands without Fines for Alienation, to furniſh themſelves with Money for the War; And laſtly, the voiding of all Scottiſh-men out of England. There was alſo a Statute, for the diſperſing of the Standard of the Exchequer, throughout England; thereby to ſize Weights and Meaſures; and two or three more of leſs Importance.

Statute to ſell Lands without Fines.

After the Parliament was broken up (which laſted not long) the King went on with his Preparations for the War of France; yet neglected not in the mean time the Affairs of Maximilian, for the quieting of Flanders, and reſtoring him to his Authority amongſt his Subjects. For at that time, the Lord of Ravenſtein being not only a Subject Rebell'd, but a Servant revolted (and ſo much the more Malicious and Violent, by the Aid of Bruges and Gaunt) had taken the Town and both the Caſtles of Sluice; as we ſaid before.

And having (by the Commodity of the Haven) gotten together certain Ships and Barks, fell to a kind of Pyratical Trade; robbing and ſpoyling, and taking Priſoners the Ships and Veſſels of all Nations, that paſſed alongſt that Coaſt, towards the Mart of Antwerp, or into any part of Brabant, Zeland, or Freezeland; being ever well Victualled from Picardie, beſides the Commodity of Victuals from Sluice, and the Country adjacent, and the Avails of his own Prizes. The French aſſiſted him ſtill under-hand; and he likewiſe (as all Men do, that have been of both ſides) thought himſelf not ſafe, except he depended upon a third Perſon.

There was a ſmall Town ſome two Miles from Bruges, towards the Sea, called Dam; which was a Fort and Approach to Bruges, and had a Relation alſo to Sluice. This Town the King of the Romans had attempted often, (not for any worth of the Town in it ſelf, but becauſe it might choak Bruges, and cut it off from the Sea) and ever fail'd. But therewith the Duke of Saxony came down into Flanders, taking upon him the Perſon of an Umpire, to compoſe things between Maximilian and his Subjects; but being (indeed) faſt and aſſured to Maximilian. Upon this Pretext of Neutrality and Treaty, he repaired to Bruges; deſiring of the States of Bruges, to enter peaceably into their Town, with a Retinue of ſome Number of Men of Arms, fit for his Eſtate; being ſomewhat the more (as he ſaid) the better to guard him in a Country, that was up in Arms: and bearing them in hand, that he was to communicate with them of divers Matters of great Importance, for their Good. Which having obtained of them, he ſent his Carriages and Harbingers before him, to provide his Lodging. So that his Men of War entred the City in good Array, but in peaceable manner, and he followed. They that went before, enquired ſtill for Inns and Lodgings, as if they would have reſted there all Night, and ſo went on, till they came to the Gate, that leadeth directly towards Dam; and they of Bruges only gazed upon them and gave them Paſſage. The Captains and Inhabitants of Dam alſo ſuſpected no Harm, from any that paſſed through Bruges; and diſcovering Forces a far off, ſuppoſed they had been ſome Succours, that were come from their Friends, knowing ſome dangers, towards them. And ſo perceiving nothing but well, till it was too late, ſuffered them to enter their Town. By which kind of Sleight rather then Stratagem, the Town of Dam was taken and the Town of Bruges ſhrewdly blockt up, whereby they took great diſcouragement. 1490.

Dam taken by a Trick.

The Duke of Saxony having won the Town of Dam, ſent immediately to the King to let him know that it was Sluice chiefly, and the Lord Ravenſtein, that kept the Rebellion of Flanders in life; And that if it pleaſed the King to beſiege it by Sea, he alſo would beſiege it by Land, and ſo cut out the Core of thoſe Wars.

The King willing to uphold the Authority of Maximilian (the better to hold France in aw) and being likewiſe ſued unto by his Merchants, for that the Seas were much infeſted by the Barks of the Lord Ravenſtein; ſent ſtraightways Sir Edward Poynings a valiant Man, and of good Service, with twelve Ships, well furniſhed with Souldiers and Artillery, to clear the Seas, and to beſiege Sluice on that part. The Engliſhmen did not only coop up the Lord Ravenſtein, that he ſtirred not, and likewiſe hold in ſtrait Siege the Maritim part of the Town; but alſo aſſail'd one of the Caſtles, and renewed the Aſſault ſo for twenty days ſpace (iſſuing ſtill out of their Ships at the Ebb) as they made great Slaughter of them of the Caſtle; who continually fought with them to repulſe them, though of the Engliſh part alſo were ſlain a Brother of the Earl of Oxford's and ſome fifty more.

But the Siege ſtill continuing more and more ſtrait, and both the Caſtles (which were the principal ſtrength of the Town) being diſtreſſed, the one by the Duke of Saxony, and the other by the Engliſh; and a Bridge of Boats, which the Lord Ravenſtein had made between both Caſtles, whereby Succours and Relief might paſs from the one to the other, being on a Night ſet on fire by the Engliſh, he deſpairing to hold the Town, yielded (at the laſt) the Caſtles to the Engliſh, and the Town to the Duke of Saxony, by Compoſition. Which done, the Duke of Saxony and Sir Edward Poynings treated with them of Bruges, to ſubmit themſelves to Maximilian their Lord; which after ſome time they did, paying (in ſome good part) the Charge of the War, whereby the Almains and forreign Succours were diſmiſſed. The example of Bruges other of the Revolted Towns followed; ſo that Maximilian grew to be out of Danger, but (as his manner was to handle matters) never out of Neceſſity. And Sir Edward Poynings (after he had continued at Sluice ſome good while, till all things were ſettled) returned unto the King, being then before Bulloigne.

Somewhat about this time came Letters from Ferdinando, and Iſabella, King and Queen of Spain; ſignifying the final Conqueſt of Granada from the Moors; which Action in it ſelf ſo worthy, King Ferdinando (whoſe manner was never to loſe any Vertue for the ſhewing) had expreſſed and diſplayed in his Letters at large, with all the particularities, and religious Punctoes and Ceremonies, that were obſerved in the Reception of that City and Kingdom: Shewing amongſt other things, that the King would not by any means in Perſon enter the City, until he had firſt aloof ſeen the Croſs ſet up upon the greater Tower of Granada, whereby it became Chriſtian Ground: That likewiſe before he would enter, he did Homage to God above, pronouncing by an Herald from the Height of that Tower, that he did acknowledge to have recovered that Kingdome, by the help of God Almighty and the Glorious Virgin, and the Vertuous Apoſtle Saint James, and the Holy Father Innocent the Eight, together with the Aids and Services of his Prelates, Nobles, and Commons: That yet he ſtirred not from his Camp, till he had ſeen a

The Spaniards conquer Granada.

1491. little Army of Martyrs, to the Number of Seven Hundred and more Christians (that had lived in Bonds and Servitude as Slaves to the Moors) pass before his Eyes, singing a Psalm for their Redemption, and that he had given Tribute unto God by Alms and Relief extended to them all, for his Admission into the City. These things were in the Letters, with many more Ceremonies of a kind of Holy Ostentation.

The Kings affection to the Spanish King.

The King ever willing to put himself into the Consort or Quire of all religious Actions, and naturally affecting much the King of Spain, (as far as one King can affect another) partly for his Vertues, and partly for a Counterpoise to France; upon the receit of these Letters, sent all his Nobles and Prelates, that were about the Court, together with the Mayor and Aldermen of London, in great Solemnity to the Church of Pauls; there to Hear a Declaration from the Lord Chancellor, now Cardinal. When they were Assembled *, the Cardinal (standing upon the uppermost Step, or half-pace before the Quire; and all the Nobles, Prelates, and Governours of the City at the foot of the Stairs) made a Speech to them; letting them know, that they were Assembled in that Consecrate Place to sing unto God a New-Song: 'For that (said he) 'these many Years the Christians have 'not gained new Ground or Territory upon the 'Infidels, nor enlarged and set further the Bounds 'of the Christian World: But this is now done 'by the Prowess and Devotion of Ferdinando 'and Isabella, Kings of Spain; who have (to 'their Immortal Honour) recover'd the great 'and rich Kingdom of Granada, and the popu-'lous and mighty City of the same Name, from 'the Moors, having been in Possession thereof by 'the space of Seven hundred Years, and more. 'For which, this Assembly and all Christians 'are to render Laud and Thanks unto God, and 'to celebrate this noble Act of the King of 'Spain; who in this is not only Victorious, but 'Apostolical, in the gaining of new Provinces to 'the Christian Faith. And the rather, for that 'this Victory and Conquest is obtain'd, without 'much Effusion of Blood. Whereby it is to be 'hoped, that there shall be gained, not only 'new Territory, but infinite Souls to the Church 'of Christ; whom the Almighty (as it seems) 'would have live to be converted. Herewithal he did relate some of the most Memorable Particulars of the War and Victory. And after his Speech ended, the whole Assembly went Solemnly in Procession, and Te Deum was sung.

* On the 6th of April.

Christendom enlarg'd.

Immediately after the Solemnity, the King kept his May-Day at his Palace of Sheine, now Richmond: Where to warm the Blood of his Nobility and Gallants, against the War, he kept great Triumphs of Justing and Tourney, during all that Month. In which space it so fell out, that Sir James Parker and Hugh Vaughan, (one of the King's Gentlemen-Ushers) having had a Controversy touching certain Arms, that the King at Arms had given Vaughan, were appointed to run some Courses one against another: And by accident of a faulty Helmet, that Parker had on, he was stricken into the Mouth at the first Course, so that his Tongue was born unto the hinder-part of his Head, in such sort that he died presently upon the place. Which because of the Controversy Precedent and the Death that follow'd, was accounted amongst the Vulgar, as a Combate or Tryal of Right. The King, towards the end of this Summer, having put his Forces, wherewith he meant to Invade France, in readiness, (but so as they were not yet met or mustered together) sent Urswick (now made his Almoner) and Sir John Risley to Maximilian; to let him know, that he was in Arms, ready to pass the Seas into France, and did but expect to hear from him, when and where he did appoint to joyn with him, according to his Promise made unto him by Countebalt, his Ambassador. 1491.

The English Ambassadors, having repaired to Maximilian, did find his Power and Promise at a very great distance; he being utterly unprovided of Men, Money, and Arms for any such Enterprize. For Maximilian having neither Wing to fly on (for that his Patrimony of Austria was not in his Hands, his Father being then living: And on the other side, his Matrimonial Territories of Flanders being partly in Dower to his Mother-in-Law, and partly not serviceable, in respect of the late Rebellions) was thereby destitute of Means to enter into War. The Ambassadors saw this well, but wisely thought fit to advertise the King thereof, rather than to return themselves till the King's further Pleasure were known: The rather, for that Maximilian himself spake as great as ever he did before, and entertain'd them with dilatory Answers; so as the formal part of their Ambassage might well warrant and require their further stay. The King hereupon (who doubted as much before, and saw thro' his Business from the beginning) wrote back to the Ambassadors, commending their Discretion in not returning, and willing them to keep the State wherein they found Maximilian, as a Secret, till they heard further from him: And mean while went on with his Voyage Royal for France, suppressing for a time this Advertisement touching Maximilian's Poverty and Disability.

By this time was drawn together a great and Puissant Army into the City of London. In which were, Thomas Marquess Dorset, Thomas Earl of Arundel, Thomas Earl of Derby, George Earl of Shrewsbury, Edmond Earl of Suffolk, Edward Earl of Devonshire, George Earl of Kent, the Earl of Essex, Thomas Earl of Ormond, with a great number of Barons, Knights, and principal Gentlemen; and amongst them Richard Thomas, much noted for the brave Troops that he brought out of Wales; The Army rising in the whole to the number of Five and twenty Thousand Foot, and Sixteen Hundred Horse. Over which, the King (constant in his accustom'd Trust and Imployment) made Jasper Duke of Bedford, and John Earl of Oxford, Generals under his own Person. The 9th of September, in the Eighth Year of his Reign, he departed from Greenwich towards the Sea; all Men wondring that he took that Season (being so near Winter) to begin the War; and some thereupon gathering it was a Sign that the War would not be long. Nevertheless, the King gave out the contrary, thus: That he intended not to make a Summer Business of it, but a resolute War (without term prefixed) until he recover'd France; it skilled not much when he began it: Especially, having Calice at his back; where he might Winter, if the reason of the War so required. The 6th of October, he Imbark'd at Sandwich; and the same Day took Land at Calice: which was the Rendezvous where all his Forces were assign'd to meet. But in this his Journey towards the Sea side (wherein, for the Cause that we shall now speak of, he hover'd so much the longer) he had receiv'd Letters from the Lord Cordes: who, the hotter he was against the English in time of War, had the more credit in a Negociation of Peace; and besides was held a Man open, and of good Faith. In which Letters there was made an Overture

K. Henry's Voyage to France.

1491. ture of Peace from the French King, with such Conditions, as were somewhat to the King's Taste: but this was carried at the first with wonderful Secrecy. The King was no sooner come to Calice, but the Calm Winds of Peace began to blow. For, first, the English Ambassadors return'd out of Flanders from Maximilian; and certified the King, that he was not to hope for any Aid from Maximilian, for that he was altogether improvided: His Will was good; but he lacked Money. And this was made known and spread through the Army. And altho' the English were therewithal nothing dismay'd; and that it be the manner of Soldiers, upon bad News to Speak the more Bravely; yet nevertheless it was a kind of Preparative to a Peace. Instantly in the neck of this (as the King had laid it) came News that Ferdinando and Isabella, Kings of Spain, had concluded a Peace with King Charles; and that Charles had restor'd unto them the Counties of Russignon and Perpignian, which formerly were mortgaged by John King of Arragon (Ferdinando's Father) unto France, for Three hundred Thousand Crowns: which Debt was also upon this Peace, by Charles clearly released. This came also handsomly to put on the Peace: both because so Potent a Confederate was fallen off, and because it was a fair Example of a Peace bought; so as the King should not be the sole Merchant in this Peace. Upon these Airs of Peace, the King was content, that the Bishop of Exeter and the Lord Daubigney (Governour of Calice) should give a Meeting unto the Lord Cordes, for the Treaty of a Peace. But himself nevertheless,

K. Henry besieges Bulloigne. and his Army, the 15th of October removed from Calice, and in four days March sat him down before Bulloigne.

During this Siege of Bulloigne (which continued near a Month) there passed no memorable Accident of War; only Sir John Savage, a valiant Captain was Slain, riding about the Walls of the Town to take a View. The Town was both well fortify'd and well mann'd; yet it was distressed, and ready for an Assault. Which if it had been given (as was thought) would have cost much Blood; but yet the Town would have been carried in the End. Mean while, a Peace was concluded by the Commissioners, to continue for both the Kings Lives. Where there was no Article of Importance; being in effect rather a Bargain than a Treaty. For, all things remained as they were; save that there should 186250 l. Sterling. be paid to the King Seven hundred Forty five Thousand Ducats in Present, for his Charges in that Journey; and Five and twenty Thousand Crowns yearly, for his Charges sustained in the Aids of the Britons. For which Annual, tho' he had Maximilian Bound before for those Charges; yet he counted the Alteration of the Hand, as much as the Principal Debt. And besides, it

The Fr. King buys a Peace of K. Henry. was left somewhat indefinitely, when it should Determine or Expire: Which made the English esteem it as a Tribute carried under fair Terms. And the truth is, it was Paid both to the King, and to his Son King Henry VIII. longer than it could continue upon any Computation of Charges. There were also assign'd by the French

The Fr. K. gives large gifts to King Henry's Officers. The Kings Device to divert the Peoples Hatred. King, unto all the King's principal Counsellors great Pensions, besides rich Gifts for the present. Which whether the King did permit to save his own Purse from Rewards, or to communicate the Envy of a Business that was displeasing to his People, was diversly interpreted. For certainly, the King had no great fancy to own this Peace. And therefore, a little before it was concluded, he had under-hand procur'd some of his best Captains, and Men of War, to advise him to a Peace under their Hands, in an earnest manner, in the Nature of a Supplication. But the truth is, this Peace was welcom to both Kings. To Charles, for that it assured unto him the Possession of Brittain, and freed the Enterprize of Naples. To Henry, for that it fill'd his Coffers; and that he foresaw at that time a Storm of inward Troubles coming upon him; which presently after brake forth. But it gave no less Discontent to the Nobility, and principal Persons of the Army; who had many of them sold or engaged their Estates upon the Hopes of the War. They stuck not to say, That the King cared not to plume his Nobility and People, to feather himself. And some made themselves merry with that the King had said in Parliament: That after the War was once begun, he doubted not but to make it pay it self; saying he had kept Promise. 1491.

Having risen from Bulloigne, he went to Calice, where he stay'd some time. From whence also he wrote Letters, * (which was a Courtesy that he sometimes used) to the Mayor of London, and Aldermen his Brethren; half bragging, what great Sums he had obtain'd for the Peace; knowing well, that full Coffers of the King is ever good News to London. And better News it would have been, if their Benevolence had been but a Loan. And upon the 17th of December following, he return'd to Westminster, where he kept his Christmas.

* Dated the 9th of Novemb. 1491. The King writes bragging Letters to the Lord Mayor.

Soon after the King's Return, he sent the Order of the Garter, || to Alphonso Duke of Calabria, eldest Son to Ferdinando King of Naples; an Honour sought by that Prince, to hold him up in the Eyes of the Italians: Who, expecting the Arms of Charles, made great Account of the Amity of England for a Bridle to France. It was received by Alphonso with all the Ceremony and Pomp that could be devised; as things use to be carried, that are intended for Opinion. It was sent by Urswick; upon whom the King bestow'd this Ambassage, to help him, after many dry Employments.

|| By Urswick his Chaplain.

At this time the King began again to be haunted with Sprites, by the Magick and curious Arts of the Lady Margaret: Who raised up the Ghost of Richard Duke of York, second Son to King Edward IV. to walk and vex the King. This was a finer Counterfeit Stone than Lambert Symnell, better done, and worn upon greater Hands; being graced after with the wearing of a King of France, and a King of Scotland, not of a Dutchess of Burgundy only. And for Simnell, there was not much in him, more than that he was a handsom Boy, and did not shame his Robes. But this Youth (of whom we are now to speak) was such a Mercurial, as the like hath seldom been known, and could make his own Part if at any time he chanc'd to be out. Wherefore, this being one of the strangest Examples of a Personation that ever was in Elder or Later Times; it deserveth to be discovered, and related at the full: Altho' the King's manner of shewing things, by Pieces and by Dark Lights, hath so muffled it, that it hath left it almost as a Mystery to this Day. 1492.

The rise of the Counterfeit Perkin. The Lady Margaret (whom the King's Friends call'd Juno, because she was to him as Juno was to Æneas, stirring both Heaven and Hell to do him Mischief) for a Foundation of her particular Practices against him, did continually, by all means possible, nourish, maintain, and divulge the flying Opinion, That Richard Duke of York (second Son to Edward IV.) was not murther'd in the Tower (as was given out) but saved 1492. ved alive; For that thoſe who were employ'd in that barbarous Fact, having deſtroy'd the elder Brother, were ſtricken with Remorſe and Compaſſion towards the younger, and ſet him privily at liberty to ſeek his Fortune. This Lure ſhe caſt abroad, thinking that this Fame and Belief (together with the freſh Example of Lambert Simnell) would draw at one time or other ſome Birds to ſtrike upon it. She uſed likewiſe a further Diligence, not committing all to Chance. For, ſhe had ſome ſecret Eſpials (like to the Turks Commiſſioners for Children of Tribute) to look abroad for handſom and graceful Youths, to make Plantagenets, and Dukes of York. At the laſt ſhe did light on one, in whom all things met, as one would wiſh, to ſerve her turn, for a Counterfeit of Richard Duke of York.

This was Perkin Warbeck, whoſe Adventures we ſhall now deſcribe. For, Firſt, the Years agreed well. Secondly, He was a Youth of fine Favour and Shape; But more than that, he had ſuch a crafty and bewitching Faſhion, both to move Pity and to induce Belief, as was like a kind of Faſcination and Inchantment to thoſe that ſaw him, or heard him. Thirdly, he had been from his Childhood ſuch a Wanderer, or (as the King called him) ſuch a Land-loper, as it was extreme hard to hunt out his Neſt and Parents. Neither again could any Man, by Company or Converſing with him, be able to ſay or detect well what he was; he did ſo flit from place to place. Laſtly, There was a Circumſtance (which is mentioned by one that wrote in the ſame time) that is very likely to have made ſomewhat to the Matter; which is, That King Edward IV. was his Godfather. Which, as it is ſomewhat ſuſpicious, for a wanton Prince to become Goſſip in ſo mean a Houſe; and might make a Man think that he might indeed have in him ſome baſe Blood of the Houſe of York: ſo at the leaſt (tho' that were not) it might give the occaſion to the Boy, in being call'd King Edward's Godſon, or perhaps in ſport, King Edward's Son, to entertain ſuch Thoughts into his Head. For, Tutor he had none (for ought that appears) as Lambert Simnell had, until he came unto the Lady Margaret, who inſtructed him.

His Perſon.

His Cunning.

King Edward the 4th, his Godfather.

Thus therefore it came to paſs: There was a Townſman of Tourney, that had born Office in that Town, whoſe Name was (a) John Osbeck, a Convert-Jew, married to Catherine de Faro; whoſe Buſineſs drew him to live for a time with his Wife at London, in King Edward IV's days. During which time he had a Son by her: and being known in Court, the King either out of a religious Nobleneſs, becauſe he was a Convert, or upon ſome private Acquaintance, did him the Honour as to be Godfather to his Child, and named him Peter. But afterwards proving a Dainty and Effeminate Youth, he was commonly call'd by the Diminutive of his Name, Peter-Kin, or Perkin. For, as for the Name of Warbecke, it was given him when they did but gueſs at it, before Examinations had been taken. But yet he had been ſo much talk'd on by that Name, as it ſtuck by him after his true Name of Osbecke was known. While he was a young Child, his Parents return'd with him to Tourney. Then was he placed in a Houſe of a Kinſman of his, call'd John Stenbeck at Antwerp: and ſo roved up and down between Antwerp and Tourney, and other Towns of Flanders, for a good time; living much in Engliſh Company, and having the Engliſh Tongue perfect. In which time being grown a comely Youth, he was brought by ſome of the Eſpials of the Lady Margaret unto her Preſence. Who viewing him well, and ſeeing that he had a Face and Perſonage, that would bear a Noble Fortune: And finding him otherwiſe of a fine Spirit and winning Behaviour, thought ſhe had now found a curious Piece of Marble, to carve out an Image of a Duke of York. She kept him by her a great while; but with extreme Secrecy. The while, ſhe inſtructed him, by many Cabinet-Conferences. Firſt, In Princely Behaviour and Geſture; teaching him how he ſhould keep State, and yet with a modeſt Senſe of his Misfortunes. Then ſhe inform'd him of all the Circumſtances and Particulars that concerned the Perſon of Richard Duke of York, which he was to act: Deſcribing unto him the Perſonages, Lineaments, and Features of the King and Queen his pretended Parents; and of his Brother, and Siſters, and divers others that were neareſt him in his Childhood; together with all Paſſages, ſome ſecret ſome common, that were fit for a Child's Memory, until the Death of King Edward. Then ſhe added the Particulars of the Time, from the King's Death, until he and his Brother were committed to the Tower, as well during the time he was Abroad, as while he was in Sanctuary. As for the times while he was in the Tower, and the manner of his Brother's Death, and his own Eſcape; ſhe knew they were things that a very few could controul. And therefore ſhe taught him only to tell a ſmooth and likely Tale of thoſe Matters; warning him not to vary from it. It was agreed likewiſe between them, what Account he ſhould give of his Peregrination abroad; intermixing many things which were true, and ſuch as they knew others could teſtifie, for the Credit of the reſt: But ſtill making them hang together, with the Part he was to play. She taught him likewiſe how to avoid ſundry captious and tempting Queſtions, which were like to be asked of him. But, in this ſhe found him of himſelf ſo nimble and ſhifting, as ſhe truſted much to his own Wit and Readineſs; and therefore labour'd the leſs in it. Laſtly, ſhe raiſed his Thoughts with ſome preſent Rewards, and further Promiſes; ſetting before him chiefly the Glory and Fortune of a Crown, if things went well; and a ſure Refuge to her Court, if the worſt ſhould fall. After ſuch time as ſhe thought he was perfect in his Leſſon, ſhe began to caſt with her ſelf from what Coaſt this Blazing-Star ſhould firſt appear, and at what time it muſt be upon the Horizon of Ireland; for there had the like Meteor ſtrong Influence before: The time of the Apparition to be, when the King ſhould be engaged into a War with France. But well ſhe knew, that whatſoever ſhould come from her, would be held ſuſpected. And therefore, if he ſhould go out of Flanders immediately into Ireland, ſhe might be thought to have ſome hand in it. And beſides, the time was not yet ripe; for that the two Kings were then upon Terms of Peace. Therefore ſhe wheel'd about; and to put all Suſpicion afar off, and loth to keep him any longer by her (for that ſhe knew Secrets are not long liv'd) ſhe ſent him unknown into Portugal, with the Lady Brampton, (b) an Engliſh Lady, that Embark'd for Portugal at that time;

His Parents.

Why called Perkin.

His Education.

1492. He is brought to the Princeſs Margaret.

The Dutcheſs of Burgundy's Inſtructions to Perkin.

(a) His true Name was Peter Oſbeck; he was not unlike Richard Duke of York, both in Body and Countenance; he was Born at Tournay in Flanders. Whoſe Father, John Osbeck, was Controuler of that City, and his Mother Catherine de Faro, who could ſpeak Engliſh. Sir J. Ware, Ann. Hen. VII. Cap. 6. (b) Sir Richard Brampton's Wife.

with

1492. with ſome Privado of her own, to have an Eye upon him: and there he was to remain, and to expect her further Directions. In the mean time, ſhe omitted not to prepare things for his better Welcom, and Accepting, not only in the Kingdom of Ireland, but in the Court of France. He continued in Portugal about a Year; and by that time, the King of England called his Parliament (as hath been ſaid) and declared open War againſt France. Now did the Sign reign, and the Conſtellation was come, under which Perkin would appear. And therefore he was ſtraight ſent unto by the Dutcheſs to go for Ireland, according to the firſt Deſignment. In Ireland he did Arrive at the Town of Cork. When he was come thither, his own Tale was (when he made his Confeſſion afterwards) That the Iriſhmen, finding him in ſome good Clothes, came flocking about him, and bare him down, that he was the Duke of Clarence, that had been there before: And after, that he was Richard the IIId's baſe Son: And laſtly, that he was Richard Duke of York, ſecond Son to Edward IV: But that he (for his part) renounced all theſe things, and offer'd to Swear upon the Holy Evangeliſts, that he was no ſuch Man; till at laſt they forced it upon him and bad him fear nothing, and ſo forth. But the truth is, that immediately upon his coming into Ireland, he took upon him the ſaid Perſon of the Duke of York, and drew unto him Complices, and Partakers; by all the Means he could deviſe: Inſomuch, as he wrote his Letters unto the Earls of Deſmond and Kildare, to come in to his Aid, and be of his Party; the Originals of which Letters are yet extant.

Frion, K. Henry's Secretary for the French Tongue joyns with Perkin.

Somewhat before this time, the Dutcheſs had gained unto her, a near Servant of King Henry's own, one Stephen Frion, his Secretary for the French Tongue; an Active Man, but turbulent and diſcontented. This Frion had fled over to Charles the French King, and put himſelf into his Service, at ſuch time as he began to be in open Enmity with the King. Now King Charles, when he underſtood of the Perſon and Attempts of Perkin (ready of himſelf to embrace all Advantages againſt the King of England; inſtigated by Frion, and formerly prepared by the Lady Margaret) forthwith diſpatch'd one Lucas, and this Frion, in the Nature of Ambaſſadors to Perkin; to advertiſe him of the King's good Inclination to him, and that he was reſolv'd to Aid him to recover his Right againſt King Henry, an Uſurper of England, and an Enemy of France; and wiſh'd him to come over unto him at Paris.

The Fr. King favours Perkin.

Perkin thought himſelf in Heaven now that he was invited by ſo great a King, in ſo honourable a manner: and imparting unto his Friends in Ireland for their Incouragement, how Fortune called him, and what great hopes he had, ſail'd preſently into France. When he was come to the Court of France, the King receiv'd him with great Honour; ſaluted, and ſtiled him by the Name of the Duke of York; lodged him, and accommodated him in great State: And the better to give him the Repreſentation and the Countenance of a Prince, aſſign'd him a Guard for his Perſon, whereof the Lord Congreſall was Captain. The Courtiers likewiſe (tho' it be ill mocking with the French) applied themſelves to their King's Bent, ſeeing there was Reaſon of State for it. At the ſame time there repair'd unto Perkin divers Engliſhmen of Quality; Sir George Nevile, Sir John Taylor, and about One hundred more; and amongſt the reſt, this Stephen Frion, of whom we ſpake; who follow'd his Fortune both then and for a long time after, and was indeed his Principal Councellor, and Inſtrument in all his Proceedings. But all this, on the French King's part, was but a Trick; the better to bow King Henry to Peace. And therefore upon the firſt Grain of Incenſe that was ſacrificed upon the Altar of Peace at Bulloigne, Perkin was ſmoked away. Yet would not the French King deliver him up to King Henry (as he was laboured to do) for his Honour's ſake, but warned him away and diſmiſſed him. And Perkin on his part was ready to be gone, doubting he might be caught up under-hand. He therefore took his way into Flanders, unto the Dutcheſs of Burgundy; pretending, that having been variouſly toſs'd by Fortune, he directed his Courſe thither, as to a ſafe Harbour: No ways taking knowledge that he had ever been there before, but as if that had been his firſt Addreſs. The Dutcheſs, on the other part, made it as new and ſtrange to ſee him: pretending (at the firſt) that ſhe was taught and made wiſe by the Example of Lambert Simnell, how ſhe did admit of any Counterfeit Stuff; tho' even in that (ſhe ſaid) ſhe was not fully ſatisfied. She pretended at the firſt (and that was ever in the preſence of others) to poſe him and ſift him, thereby to try whether he were indeed the very Duke of York, or no. But ſeeming to receive full Satisfaction by his Anſwers, ſhe then feign'd her ſelf to be tranſported with a kind of Aſtoniſhment, mixt of Joy and Wonder, at his miraculous Deliverance; receiving him, as if he were riſen from Death to Life: and inferring, that God, who had in ſuch wonderful manner preſerv'd him from Death, did likewiſe reſerve him for ſome great and proſperous Fortune. As for his Diſmiſſion out of France, they interpreted it not, as if he were detected or neglected for a Counterfeit Deceiver; but contrariwiſe, that it did ſhew manifeſtly unto the World, that he was ſome great Matter; for that it was his abandoning, that (in effect) made the Peace: being no more but the Sacrificing of a poor diſtreſſed Prince unto the Utility and Ambition of two Mighty Monarchs. Neither was Perkin for his part wanting to himſelf, either in gracious and Princely Behaviour, or in ready and appoſite Anſwers, or in contenting and careſſing thoſe that did apply themſelves unto him, or in pretty Scorn and Diſdain to thoſe that ſeem'd to doubt of him; but in all things did notably acquit himſelf: Inſomuch as it was generally believed (as well amongſt great Perſons, as amongſt the Vulgar) that he was indeed Duke Richard. Nay, himſelf, with long and continual counterfeiting, and with oft telling a Lye, was turn'd by habit almoſt into the thing he ſeem'd to be; and from a Lyer to a Believer. The Dutcheſs therefore (as in a Caſe out of doubt) did him all Princely Honour, calling him always by the Name of her Nephew, and giving him the Delicate Title of The White Roſe of England; and appointed him a Guard of Thirty Perſons, Halberdiers, clad in a Party-colour'd Livery of Murrey and Blew, to Attend his Perſon. Her Court likewiſe, and generally the Dutch and Strangers in their uſage towards him, expreſſed no leſs Reſpect.

1493. Perkin diſmiſs'd by K. Charles.

The News hereof came blazing and thundering over into England, that the Duke of York was ſure alive. As for the Name of Perkin Warbeck, it was not at that time come to light, but all the News ran upon the Duke of York; that he had been entertain'd in Ireland, bought and ſold in France, and was now plainly avowed, and in great Honour in Flanders. Theſe Fames took hold of divers; In ſome upon Diſcontent, in ſome upon Ambition, in ſome upon Levity and Deſire of Change, and in ſome few upon Conſcience and Belief, but in moſt upon Simplicity; and 1493. and in divers out of Dependance upon ſome of the better ſort, who did, in ſecret favour and nouriſh theſe Bruits. And it was not long, ere theſe Rumours of Novelty had begotten others of Scandal and Murmur againſt the King and his Government; taxing him for a great Taxer of his People, and Diſcountenancer of his Nobility. The Loſs of Brittain, and the Peace with France were not forgotten. But chiefly they fell upon the wrong that he did his Queen, in that he did not Reign in her Right. Wherefore they ſaid, that God had now brought to light a Maſculine-Branch of the Houſe of York, that would not be at his Curteſy, howſoever he did depreſs his poor Lady. And yet (as it fareth in things which are currant with the Multitude, and which they affect) theſe Fames grew ſo general, as the Authors were loſt in the Generality of Speakers. They being like running Weeds, that have no certain Root; or like Footings up and down, impoſſible to be traced. But after a while, theſe ill Humours drew to an Head, and ſettled ſecretly in ſome eminent Perſons; which were Sir William Stanley Lord Chamberlain of the King's Houſhold, the Lord Fitzwater, Sir Simon Mountfort, Sir Thomas Thwaites. Theſe entred into a ſecret Conſpiracy to favour Duke Richard's Title. Nevertheleſs none engaged their Fortunes in this Buſineſs openly, but two; Sir Robert Clifford and Maſter William Barley, who ſail'd over into Flanders, ſent indeed from the Party of the Conſpirators here, to underſtand the Truth of thoſe things that paſſed there, and not without ſome help of Moneys from hence; Proviſionally to be deliver'd, if they found and were ſatisfied that there was Truth in theſe Pretences. The Perſon of Sir Robert Clifford (being a Gentleman of Fame and Family) was extremely Welcome to the Lady Margaret. Who after ſhe had Conference with him, brought him to the ſight of Perkin, with whom he had often Speech and Diſcourſe. So that in the end won either by the Dutcheſs to affect, or by Perkin to believe, he wrote back into England, that he knew the Perſon of Richard Duke of York, as well as he knew his own; and that this Young Man was undoubtedly he. By this means all things grew prepared to Revolt and Sedition here, and the Conſpiracy came to a Correſpondence between Flanders and England.

The Peoples Murmurs.

Conſpirators for Perkin.

Sir Robert Clifford flies to Perkin.

The King on his part was not aſleep; but to arm or levy Forces yet, he thought would but ſhew Fear, and do this Idol too much Worſhip. Nevertheleſs the Ports he did ſhut up, or at leaſt kept a Watch on them, that none ſhould paſs to or fro that was ſuſpected. But for the reſt, he choſe to work by Countermine. His purpoſes were two; The one, to lay open the Abuſe; the other, to break the Knot of the Conſpirators. To detect the Abuſe, there were but two ways: The firſt, to make it manifeſt to the World that the Duke of York was indeed murther'd: The other to prove, that were he Dead or Alive, yet Perkin was a Counterfeit. For the firſt, thus it ſtood. There were but four Perſons that could ſpeak upon Knowledge to the Murther of the Duke of York: Sir James Tirrel (the employ'd-man from King Richard) John Dighton, and Miles Forreſt, his Servants (the two Butchers or Tormentors) and the Prieſt of the Tower, that buried them. Of which four, Miles Foreſt, and the Prieſt were dead, and there remain'd alive only Sir James Tirrel and John Dighton. Theſe two the King cauſed to be committed to the Tower, and examined touching the manner of the Death of the two innocent Princes. They agreed both in a Tale, (as the King gave out) to this effect: That King Richard having directed his Warrant for the putting of them to Death to Brackenbury the Lieutenant of the Tower, was by him refuſed. Whereupon the King directed his Warrant to Sir James Tirrel, to receive the Keys of the Tower from the Lieutenant (for the ſpace of a Night) for the King's ſpecial Service. That Sir James Tirrel accordingly repair'd to the Tower by Night, attended by his two Servants aforenamed, whom he had choſen for that purpoſe. That himſelf ſtood at the Stair-foot, and ſent theſe two Villains to execute the Murther. That they ſmother'd them in their Bed; and that done, call'd up their Maſter to ſee their naked Bodies, which they had laid forth. That they were buried under the Stairs, and ſome Stones caſt upon them. That when the Report was made to King Richard, that his Will was done, he gave Sir James Tirrel great Thanks, but took Exception to the Place of their Burial, being too baſe for them that were Kings Children. Whereupon another Night by the King's Warrant renew'd, their Bodies were remov'd by the Prieſt of the Tower, and buried by him in ſome Place, which (by means of the Prieſt's Death ſoon after) could not be known. Thus much was then deliver'd Abroad, to be the Effect of thoſe Examinations. But the King nevertheleſs made no uſe of them in any of his Declarations; whereby (as it ſeems) thoſe Examinations left the Buneſs ſomewhat perplex'd. And as for Sir James Tirrel, he was ſoon after Beheaded in the Tower-Yard, for other Matters of Treaſon *. But John Dighton (who it ſeemeth ſpake beſt for the King) was forthwith ſet at Liberty, and was the principal Means of divulging this Tradition. Therefore this kind of Proof being left ſo naked, the King uſed the more Diligence in the latter, for the tracing of Perkin. To this purpoſe, he ſent abroad into ſeveral Parts, and eſpecially into Flanders, divers ſecret and nimble Scouts and Spies; ſome feigning themſelves to fly over unto Perkin, and to adhere unto him; and ſome under other Pretences, to learn, ſearch, and diſcover all the Circumſtances and Particulars of Perkin's Parents, Birth, Perſon, Travels up and down; and in brief, to have a Journal (as it were) of his Life and Doings. He furniſh'd theſe his imployed-men liberally with Money, to draw on and reward Intelligences: giving them alſo in Charge, to advertiſe continually what they found, and nevertheleſs ſtill to go on. And ever as one Advertiſement and Diſcovery call'd up another, he employ'd other new Men, where the Buſineſs did require it. Others he employ'd in a more ſpecial Nature and Truſt, to be his Pioneers in the main Counter-mine. Theſe were directed to inſinuate themſelves into the Familiarity and Confidence of the principal Perſons of the Party in Flanders, and ſo to learn what Aſſociates they had, and Correſpondents, either here in England, or Abroad; and how far every one ingaged, and what new ones they meant afterwards to try, or board. And as this for the Perſons; ſo for the Actions themſelves, to diſcover to the Bottom (as they could) the utmoſt of Perkins and the Conſpirators their Intentions, Hopes, and Practices. Theſe latter Beſt-be-truſt-Spies had ſome of them further Inſtructions, to practiſe and draw off the beſt Friends and Servants of Perkin, by making Remonſtrance to them, how weakly his Enterprize and Hopes were built, and with how prudent and potent a King they had to deal; and to reconcile them to the King, with Promiſe of Pardon, and good Conditions of Reward. And (above the reſt) to aſſail, ſap, and work into the Conſtancy of Sir 1493. Brackenbury refuſ'd to murder K. Edw. the Fourth's two Sons.

Sir James Tirrel employ'd by K. Richard to murder the Princes.

John Dighton one of the Murderers of the two Young Princes.

* Sir James Tirrel was not Beheaded till ten Years afterward, Sep. 20.

1494. Sir Robert Clifford; and to win him (if they could) being the Man that knew moſt of their Secrets, and who being won away, would moſt appall and diſcourage the reſt, and in a manner break the Knot.

There is a ſtrange Tradition; That the King being loſt in a Wood of Suſpicions, and not knowing whom to truſt, had both Intelligence with the Confeſſors and Chaplains of divers great Men, and for the better Credit of his Eſpials abroad with the contrary Side, did uſe to have them curſed at Pauls (by Name) amongſt the Bead-roll of the King's Enemies, according to the Cuſtom of thoſe Times. Theſe Eſpials plied their Charge ſo roundly, as the King had an Anatomy of Perkin alive; and was likewiſe well informed of the particular correſpondent Conſpirators in England, and many other Myſteries were reveal'd; and Sir Robert Clifford in eſpecial won to be aſſured to the King, and induſtrious and officious for his Service. The King therefore (receiving a rich Return of his Diligence, and great Satisfaction touching a number of Particulars) firſt divulged and ſpread abroad the Impoſture and Juggling of Perkin's Perſon and Travels, with the Circumſtances thereof throughout the Realm. Not by Proclamation (becauſe things were yet in Examination, and ſo might receive the more or the leſs) but by Court-fames, which commonly Print better than printed Proclamations. Then thought he it alſo time to ſend an Ambaſſage unto Archduke Philip into Flanders, for the abandoning and diſmiſſing of Perkin. Herein he employ'd Sir Edward Poynings and Sir William Warham, Doctor of the Canon-Law. The Archduke was then Young, and governed by his Council: before whom the Ambaſſadors had Audience, and Dr. Warham ſpake in this manner.

A Cuſtom of Curſing the King's Enemies at Pauls Croſs.

Sir Robert Clifford is prevailed upon to ſerve King Henry.

These Ambaſſadors went to Flanders before Sir Robert Clifford ſided with the King. Hol.

"MY Lords, the King our Maſter is very "ſorry, that England and your Country here of Flanders having been counted as "Man and Wife for ſo long time, now this "Country of all others ſhould be the Stage, "where a baſe Counterfeit ſhould play the part "of a King of England; not only to his Grace's Diſquiet and Diſhonour, but to the Scorn "and Reproach of all Soveraign Princes. To "counterfeit the dead Image of a King in his "Coyn, is an high Offence by all Laws: But "to Counterfeit the living Image of a King in "his Perſon, exceedeth all Falſifications, except it ſhould be that of a Mahomet, or an "Anti-Chriſt, that counterfeit Divine Honour. "The King hath too great an Opinion of this "Sage Council, to think that any of you is "caught with this Fable (though way may be "given by you to the Paſſion of ſome) the "thing in it ſelf is ſo improbable. To ſet "Teſtimonies aſide of the Death of Duke Richard, which the King hath upon Record, "plain and infallible (becauſe they may be "thought to be in the King's own Power) let "the thing teſtify for it ſelf. Senſe and Reaſon no Power can Command. Is it poſſible "(trow you) that King Richard ſhould damn his "Soul, and foul his Name with ſo abominable "a Murther, and yet not mend his Caſe? Or "do you think, that Men of Blood (that were "his Inſtruments) did turn to Pity in the midſt "of their Execution? Whereas in cruel and "ſavage Beaſts, and Men alſo, the firſt Draught "of Blood doth yet make them more fierce, "and enraged. Do you not know, that the "Bloody Executioners of Tyrants do go to "ſuch Errands, with an Halter about their "Neck: So that if they perform not, they are "ſure to dye for it? And do you think, that "theſe Men would hazard their own Lives, for "ſparing anothers? Admit they ſhould have ſaved him: What ſhould they have done with "him? Turn him into London Streets, that the "Watch-men or any Paſſenger that ſhould light "upon him, might carry him before a Juſtice, "and ſo all come to light? Or ſhould they "have kept him by them ſecretly? That ſurely "would have required a great deal of Care, "Charge, and continual Fears. But (my Lords) "I labour too much in a clear Buſineſs. The "King is ſo wiſe, and hath ſo good Friends abroad, as now he knoweth Duke Perkin from "his Cradle. And becauſe he is a great Prince, "if you have any good Poet here, he can help "him with Notes to write his Life, and to "parallel him with Lambert Simnel, now the "Kings Faulconer. And therefore (to ſpeak "plainly to your Lordſhips) it is the ſtrangeſt "thing in the World, that the Lady Margaret "(excuſe us, if we name her, whoſe Malice to "the King is both cauſeleſs and endleſs) ſhould "now when ſhe is old, at the time when other "Women give over Childbearing, bring forth "two ſuch Monſters; being not the Births of "nine or ten Months, but of many Years. And "whereas other Natural Mothers bring forth "Children Weak, and not able to help themſelves; ſhe bringeth forth tall Striplings, able ſoon after their coming into the World, "to bid Battel to mighty Kings. My Lords, "we ſtay unwillingly upon this Part. We "would to God, that Lady would once taſte "the Joys, which God Almighty doth ſerve up "unto her, in beholding her Niece to Reign in "ſuch Honour, and with ſo much Royal Iſſue, "which ſhe might be pleaſed to accompt as her "own. The King's Requeſt unto the Arch-"Duke, and your Lordſhips, might be; That "according to the Example of King Charles, "who hath already diſcarded him, you would "baniſh this unworthy Fellow out of your Dominions. But becauſe the King may juſtly "expect more from an Antient Confederate, "than from a new reconciled Enemy; he maketh his Requeſt unto you, to deliver him up "into his Hands. Pirates and Impoſtures of "this ſort, being fit to be accounted the Common Enemies of Mankind, and no ways to be "protected by the Laws of Nations.

After ſome time of Deliberation, the Ambaſſadors received this ſhort Anſwer.

The Arch-Duke's Anſwer to the Engliſh Ambaſſadors.

"THAT the Archduke, for the Love of "King Henry, would in no ſort aid or "aſſiſt the pretended Duke, but in all things con-"ſerve the Amity he had with the King. But "for the Dutcheſs Dowager, ſhe was abſolute "in the Lands of her Dowry, and that he "could not let her to diſpoſe of her own.

The King, upon the Return of the Ambaſſadors, was nothing ſatisfied with this Anſwer. For well he knew, that a Patrimonial Dowry carried no part of Soveraignty, or Command of Forces. Beſides, the Ambaſſadors told him plainly, that they ſaw the Dutcheſs had a great Party in the Arch-Duke's Council; and that howſoever it was carried in a Courſe of Connivence, yet the Arch-Duke under hand gave Aid and Furtherance to Perkin. Wherefore (partly out of Courage, and partly out of Policy) the King forthwith baniſhed all Flemmings (as well their Perſons, as their Wares) out of his

Flemmings baniſhed.

1494. Kingdom; commanding his Subjects likewise (and by name his Merchants-Adventurers) which had a Resiance in Antwerp, to return; translating the Mart (which commonly followed the English Cloth) unto Calice, and embarred also all further Trade for the future. This the King did, being sensible in point of Honour, not to suffer a Pretender to the Crown of England, to affront him so near at Hand, and he to keep Terms of Friendship with the Country where he did set up. But he had also a further reach: For that he knew well, that the Subjects of Flanders drew so great Commodity from the Trade of England, as by this Embargo they would soon wax weary of Perkin, and that the Tumults of Flanders had been so late and fresh, as it was no time for the Prince to displease the People. Nevertheless for Form's sake, by way of Requital, the Arch-Duke did likewise banish the English out of Flanders; which in effect was done to his Hand.

The Mart was removed the last Year.

Why the Mart was removed from Antwerp to Calice.

The King being well advertised, that Perkin did more trust upon Friends and Partakers within the Realm, than upon forreign Arms, thought it behooved him to apply the Remedy, where the Disease lay; and to proceed with Severity against some of the principal Conspirators here within the Realm; Thereby to purge the ill Humors in England, and to cool the Hopes in Flanders. Wherefore he caused to be apprehended (almost at an instant) John Ratcliff Lord Fitz-water, Sir Simon Mountford, Sir Thomas Thwaites, William Dawbigney, Robert Ratcliff, Thomas Cbressenor, and Thomas Astwood. All these were arraingned, convicted and condemned for High Treason, in adhering, and promising aid to Perkin. Of these, the Lord Fitz-water was conveighed to Calice and there kept in Hold, and in hope of Life, until soon after (either impatient, or betrayed) he dealt with his Keeper to have escaped, and thereupon was beheaded. But Sir Simon Mountford, Robert Ratcliff, and William Dawbigney were beheaded immediately after their Condemnation. The rest were pardoned, together with many others Clerks and Laikes, amongst which were two Dominican Friers, and William Worseley, Dean of Pauls: which latter sort passed Examination, but came not to publick Trial.

Sir Simon Montfort and others beheaded.

The Lord Chamberlain at that time was not touched; whether it were, that the King would not stir too many Humours at once, but (after the manner of good Physicians) purge the Head last; or that Clifford (from whom most of these Discoveries came) reserved that Piece for his own coming over; signifying only to the King in the mean time, that he doubted there were some greater ones in the business, whereof he would give the King further accompt, when he came to his presence.

Upon Al-hallows-day-even being now the tenth year of the King's Reign, the King's second Son Henry was created Duke of York; and as well the Duke, as divers others, Noblemen, Knights Batchelours, and Gentlemen of Quality were made Knights of the Bath, according to the Ceremony. Upon the Morrow after Twelfth-Day, the King removed from Westminster (where he had kept his Christmas) to the Tower of London. This he did as soon as he had Advertisement, that Sir Robert Clifford (in whose Bosom or Budget most of Perkins Secrets were layed up) was come into England. And the place of the Tower was chosen to that end, that if Clifford should accuse any of the great ones, they might without Suspicion, or Noise, or sending abroad of Warrants, be presently attached; the Court and Prison being within the Cincture of one Wall. After a Day or two, the King drew unto him a selected Council, and admitted Clifford to his Presence; who first fell down at his Feet, and in all humble manner craved the King's Pardon, which the King then granted, though he were indeed secretly assured of his Life before. Then commanded to tell his Knowledge, he did amongst many others (of himself, not interrogated) appeach Sir William Stanley, the Lord Chamberlain of the King's Houshold. 1494.

Knights of the Bath Created.

The King seemed to be much amazed at the naming of this Lord, as if he had heard the News of some strange and fearful Prodigy. To hear a Man that had done him service of so high a nature, as to save his Life, and set the Crown upon his Head; a Man, that enjoyed by his Favour and Advancement so great a Fortune, both in Honour and Riches; a Man, that was tied unto him in so near a Band of Alliance, his Brother having married the King's Mother; and lastly, a Man, to whom he had committed the trust of his Person, in making him his Chamberlain. That this Man, no ways disgraced, no ways discontent, no ways put in Fear, should be false unto him. Clifford was required to say over again, and again, the Particulars of his Accusation, being warned, that in a Matter so unlikely, and that concerned so great a Servant of the King's, he should not in any wise go too far. But the King finding that he did sadly, and constantly (without Hesitation or varying, and with those Civil Protestations that were fit) stand to that that he had said, offering to justifie it upon his Soul and Life; he caused him to be removed. And after he had not a little bemoaned himself unto his Council there present, gave order that Sir William Stanley should be restrained in his own Chamber, where he lay before, in the Square Tower. And the next day he was examined by the Lords. Upon his Examination, he denied little of that wherewith he was charged, nor endeavoured much to excuse or extenuate his Fault. So that (not very wisely) thinking to make his Offence less by Confession, he made it enough for Condemnation. It was conceived, that he trusted much to his former Merits, and the Interest that his Brother had in the King. But those helps were over-weighed by divers things that made against him, and were predominant in the King's Nature and Mind. First, an Over-merit; for convenient Merit, unto which Reward may easily reach, doth best with Kings: next the sense of his Power; for the King thought, that he that could set him up, was the more dangerous to pull him down. Thirdly the Glimmering of a Confiscation; for he was the Richest Subject for Value in the Kingdom; There being found in his Castle of Holt forty Thousand Marks in ready Money, and Plate, besides Jewels, Houshold-stuff, Stocks upon his Grounds, and other Personal Estate, exceeding great. And for his Revenue in Land and Fee, it was three thousand Pounds a Year of old Rent, a great matter in those times. Lastly, the Nature of the Time; for if the King had been out of Fear of his own Estate, it was not unlike he would have spared his Life. But the Cloud of so great a Rebellion hanging over his Head, made him Work sure. Wherefore after some six Weeks distance of time, which the King did honorably interpose, both to give space to his Brother's Intercession, and to shew to the World, that he had a Conflict with himself what he should do; he was Arraigned of High-Treason, and condemned, and presently after beheaded. 1494.

Sir William Stanley is appeach'd of Treason.

Sir William Stanley imprisoned.

His Confession.

The King aims at the Confiscation of Sir William Stanley's Estate

On the 15th of February 1495. Sir William Stanley beheaded.

Yet

1495. Yet is it to this Day but in dark Memory, both what the Caſe of this Noble Perſon was, for which he ſuffered, and what likewiſe was the Ground and Cauſe of his Defection, and the Alienation of his Heart from the King. His Caſe was ſaid to be this: That in Diſcourſe between Sir Robert Clifford and him, he had ſaid; That if he were ſure, that that young Man were King Edward's Son, he would never bear Arms againſt him. This Caſe ſeems ſomewhat an hard Caſe, both in Reſpect of the Conditional, and in reſpect of the other Words. But for the Conditional, it ſeems the Judges of that time (who were learned Men, and the Three chief of them of the Privy Council) thought it was a dangerous thing to admit Ifs and Ands, to qualifie Words of Treaſon; whereby every Man might expreſs his Malice, and Blanch his Danger. And it was like to the Caſe (in the following Times) of Elizabeth Barton, the Holy-Maid of Kent: who had ſaid, That if King Henry the Eighth did not take Katherine his Wife again, He ſhould be deprived of his Crown, and dye the Death of a Dog. And infinite Caſes may be put of like Nature. Which (it ſeemeth) the Grave Judges taking into Conſideration, would not admit of Treaſons upon Condition. And as for the Poſitve Words, That he would not bear Arms againſt King Edward's Son; though the Words ſeem calm, yet it was a plain and direct Over-ruling of the Kings Title, either by the Line of Lancaſter, or by Act of Parliament. Which (no doubt) pierced the King more, than if Stanley had charged his Lance upon him in the Field. For if Stanley would hold that Opinion, that a Son of King Edward had ſtill the better Right, he being ſo principal a Perſon of Authority, and Favour about the King; it was to teach all England, to ſay as much. And therefore (as thoſe Times were) that Speech touched the Quick. But ſome Writers do put this out of doubt; for they ſay, that Stanley did expreſly promiſe to Aid Perkin, and ſent him ſome help of Treaſure.

Conditional words not Treaſon.

Why Sir William Stanley fell from the King's Intereſt.

Now for the Motive of his falling off from the King; it is true, that at Boſworth Field the King was beſet, and in a Manner incloſed round about by the Troups of King Richard, and in manifeſt Danger of his Life; when this Stanley was ſent by his Brother, with Three thouſand Men to his Reſcue, which he performed ſo, that King Richard was ſlain upon the Place. So as the Condition of mortal Men is not capable of a greater Benefit, than the King received by the Hands of Stanley; being like the Benefit of Chriſt, at once to Save, and Crown. For which Service the King gave him great Gifts, made him his Councellour, and Chamberlain; and (ſomewhat contrary to his Nature) had winked at the great Spoils of Boſworth Field, which came almoſt wholly to this Man's Hands, to his infinite enriching. Yet nevertheleſs blown up with the Conceit of his Merit, he did not think he had received good Meaſure from the King, at leaſt not preſſing down and running over, as he expected. And his Ambition was ſo exorbitant, and unbounded, as he became Suitor to the King for the Earldom of Cheſter. Which ever being a kind of Appennage to the Principality of Wales, and uſing to go to the King's Son; his Suit did not only end in a Denial, but in a Diſtaſte. The King perceiving thereby, that his Deſires were intemperate, and his Cogitations vaſt, and irregular, and that his former Benefits were but cheap, and lightly regarded by him. Wherefore the King began not to brook him well. And as a little Leaven of new Diſtaſt doth commonly ſour the whole Lump of former Merits, the King's Wit began now to ſuggeſt unto his Paſſion that, Stanley, at Boſworth Field, though he came time enough to ſave his Life, yet he ſtayed long enough to endanger it. But yet having no Matter againſt him, he continued him in his Places, until this his Fall.

Sir William Stanley's exorbitant Ambition.

1495.

After him was made Lord Chamberlain, Giles Lord Dawbeny, a Man of great Sufficiency and Valour; the more, becauſe he was gentle and moderate.

There was a common Opinion, that Sir Robert Clifford (who now was become the State-Informer) was from the beginning an Emiſſary, and Spie of the Kings; and that he fled over into Flanders with his Conſent and Privity. But this is not probable; both becauſe he never recovered that Degree of Grace, which he had with the King before his going over; and chiefly, for that the Diſcovery which he had made touching the Lord Chamberlain (which was his great Service) grew not from any thing he learn'd abroad, for that he knew it well before he went.

Theſe Executions (and eſpecially that of the Lord Chamberlain's, which was the chief ſtrength of the Party, and by Means of Sir Robert Clifford, who was the moſt inward Man of Truſt amongſt them) did extremely quail the Deſign of Perkin, and his Complices, as well through Diſcouragement, as Diſtruſt. So that they were now (like Sand without Lime) ill bound together; eſpecially as many as were Engliſh: Who were at a Gaze, looking one upon another, not knowing who was faithful to their Side; but thinking that the King (what with his Baits, and what with his Nets) would draw them all unto him, that were any thing worth. And indeed it came to paſs, that divers came away by the Thred, ſometimes one, and ſometimes another. Barley (that was Joint-Commiſſioner with Clifford) did hold out one of the longeſt, till Perkin was far worn; yet made his Peace at the length. But, the Fall of this great Man, being in ſo high Authority and Favour (as was thought) with the King; and the Manner of Carriage of the Buſineſs, as if there had been ſecret Inquiſition upon him, for a great time before; and the Cauſe for which he ſuffered, which was little more, than for ſaying in effect, That the Title of York, was better than the Title of Lancaſter; which was the Caſe almoſt of every Man (at the leaſt in Opinion;) was Matter of great Terrour amongſt all the King's Servants and Subjects: Inſomuch, as no Man almoſt thought himſelf ſecure; and Men durſt ſcarce commune or talk one with another: But there was a general Diffidence every where. Which nevertheleſs made the King rather more Abſolute, than more Safe. For, Bleeding Inwards and ſhut Vapours ſtrangle ſooneſt, and oppreſs moſt.

Invectives againſt the King's Council.

Hereupon preſently came forth Swarms and Vollies of Libels (which are the Guſts of Liberty of Speech reſtrained, and the Females of Sedition) containing bitter Invectives, and Slanders againſt the King, and ſome of the Council. For the contriving and diſperſing whereof (after great Diligence and Inquiry) Five mean Perſons were caught, and executed.

Commiſſioners ſent into Ireland.

Mean while, the King did not neglect Ireland, being the Soil where the Muſhromes and Upſtart-Weeds (that ſpring up in a Night) did chiefly proſper. He ſent therefore from hence (for the better ſettling of his Affairs there) Commiſſioners of both Robes: The Prior of Lanthony, † to be his Chancellour in that Kingdom;

(†) Sir Henry Dean Hol. Sir James Ware, calls him, Henry Dean Biſhop of Bangor in Wales. Sir Edward Poynings, was made Lord Deputy. Dean Lord Chancellour, and Sir Hugh Conway Lord Treaſurer. They arriv'd in Ireland the 13th of September in the Year before.

1495. and Sir Edward Poynings with a Power of Men (a) and a Marſhal Commiſſion, together with a Civil Power of his Lieutenant, with a Clauſe, that the Earl of Kildare, then Deputy, ſhould obey him. But, the Wild-Iriſh (who were the principal Offenders) fled into the Woods and Boggs, after their Manner: And thoſe that knew themſelves guilty, in the Pale, fled to them. So that Sir Edward Poynings, was enforced to make a Wild Chaſe upon the Wild-Iriſh: Where (in reſpect of the Mountains and Faſtneſſes) he did little good. Which (either out of a ſuſpicious Melancholy upon his bad Succeſs, or the better to ſave his Service from Diſgrace) he would needs impute unto the Comfort, that the Rebels ſhould receive under-hand from the Earl of Kildare that was in the Action of Lambert Simnel, ſlain at Stoke-Field. (b) Wherefore he cauſed the Earl to be apprehended, and ſent into England; where, upon Examination, he declared himſelf ſo well, as he was re-placed in his Government. But, Poynings (the better to make Compenſation of the Meagerneſs of his Service in the Wars; by Acts of Peace) called a Parliament; where was made that memorable Act, which at this Day is called Poynings Law, whereby all the Statutes of England were made to be of Force in Ireland. (c) For, before they were not: Neither are any now in Force in Ireland, which were made in England ſince that time; which was the Tenth Year of the King.

Poynings Act

About this time, began to be diſcovered in the King that Diſpoſition, which, afterward nouriſhed and whet-on by bad Councellours and Miniſters, proved the Blot of his Times; which was the Courſe he took, to cruſh Treaſure out of his Subjects Purſes, by Forfeitures upon Penal-Laws. At this, Men did ſtartle the more at this time, becauſe it appeared plainly to be in the King's Nature, and not out of his Neceſſity, he being now in float for Treaſure; For that he had newly received the Peace-Money from France, the Benevolence-Money from his Subjects, and great Caſualties upon the Confiſcations of the Lord Chamberlain, and divers others. The firſt noted Caſe of this Kind, was that of Sir William Capel, Alderman of London: Who, upon ſundry Penal-Laws, was condemned in the Sum of Seven and twenty hundred Pounds, and compounded with the King for Sixteen hundred: And yet after, Empſon would have cut a Chop out of him, if the King had not dyed in the Inſtant Forfeitures on Penal Laws the Blot of this Reign.

Sir William Capel Alderman of London fin'd.

The Summer following, the King, to comfort his Mother (whom he did always tenderly love and revere) and to make Demonſtration to the World, that the Proceedings againſt Sir William Stanley) which was impoſed upon him by neceſſity of State) had not in any degree diminiſhed the Affection he bore to Thomas his Brother; went in progreſs to Latham, to make merry with his Mother, and the Earl, and lay there divers days.

During this progreſs, Perkin Warbeck finding, that time and Temporizing, which (whilſt his Practices were covert and wrought well in England) made for him; did now, when they were diſcovered and defeated, rather make againſt him (for that when matters once go down the Hill, they ſtay not without a new Force) reſolved to try his Adventure in ſome Exploit upon England; hoping ſtill upon the Affections of the Common-People towards the Houſe of York. Which Body of Common-People he thought was not to be practiſed upon, as Perſons of Quality are; But, that the only Practice upon their Affections, was, to ſet up a Standard in the Field. The Place where he ſhould make his Attempt, he choſe to be the Coaſt of Kent. 1495.

The King by this time was grown to ſuch an height of Reputation for Cunning and Policy, that every Accident and Event, that went well, was laid and imputed to his Foreſight, as if he had ſet it before: As, in this Particular of Perkin's Deſign upon Kent. For, the World would not believe afterwards, but the King, having ſecret Intelligence of Perkin's Intention for Kent, (the better to draw it on) went of purpoſe into the North, a far off, laying an open Side unto Perkin, to make him come to the cloſe, and ſo to trip up his Heels, having made ſure in Kent before hand.

But ſo it was, that Perkin had gather'd together a Power of all Nations, neither in Number, nor in the hardineſs and Courage of the Perſons, contemptible; but in their Nature and Fortunes, to be fear'd as well of Friends as Enemies; being Bankrupts, and many of them Felons, and ſuch as liv'd by Rapine. Theſe he put to Sea, and arriv'd upon the Coaſt of Sandwich and Deal in Kent, about July.

There he caſt Anchor; and to prove the Affections of the People, ſent ſome of his Men to Land, making great boaſt of the Power that was to follow. The Kentiſh-men (perceiving that Perkin was not follow'd by any Engliſh of Name or Account, and that his Forces conſiſted but of Strangers Born, and moſt of them baſe People, and Free-booters, fitter to ſpoil a Coaſt than to recover a Kingdom) reſorting unto the principal Gentlemen of the Country, profeſſed their Loyalty to the King, and deſir'd to be directed and commanded for the beſt of the King's Service. The Gentlemen, entring into Conſultation, directed ſome Forces in good Number, to ſhew themſelves upon the Coaſt; and ſome of them to make Signs, to entice Perkin's Soldiers to Land, as if they would joyn with them: and ſome others to appear from ſome other Places, and to make ſemblance as if they fled from them; the better to encourage them to Land. But Perkin, (who, by playing the Prince, or elſe taught by Secretary Frion, had learn'd thus much, That People under Command do uſe to conſult, and after to march in Order; and Rebels contrariwiſe run upon an Head together in Confuſion) conſidering the Delay of Time, and obſerving their Orderly, and not Tumultuary Arming, doubted the worſt. And therefore the wily Youth would not ſet one Foot out of his Ship till he might ſee things were ſure. Wherefore the King's Forces, perceiving that they could draw on no more than thoſe that were formerly landed, ſet upon them, and cut them in pieces, ere they could fly back to their Ships. In which Skirmiſh (beſides thoſe that fled and were ſlain) there were taken about an Hundred and fifty Perſons. Which, for that the King thought that to puniſh a few for Example was Gentleman's-play, but for Raſcal-people, they were to be cut off every Man, eſpecially in the begin- 1495.

Kent Loyal to the King.

ning

(a) Not a 1000 Men, Sir F. W. An. Hen. VII. Cap. X.
(b) 'Twas not the Earl of Kildare, but his Brother the Lord Thomas Howard that was ſlain at Stokefield. Ibid. Cap. III.
(c) The Engliſh Statutes were admitted in Ireland in old Times. Thoſe Laws that were now made did not in a long Time paſs beyond the Engliſh Pale. Ibid. Cap. X. Poynings arreſted the Earl of Kildare and ſent him Priſoner to England.

1495. ning of an Enterprize; and likewise for that he saw that Perkin's Forces would now consist chiefly of such Rabble, and Scum of desperate People; he therefore hang'd them all for the greater terrour. They were brought to London, all rail'd in Ropes, like a Team of Horses in a Cart; and were executed some of them at London, and Wapping, and the rest at divers Places upon the Sea-Coast of Kent, Sussex, and Norfolk, for Sea-marks or Light-houses, to teach Perkin's People to avoid the Coast. The King being advertised of the Landing of the Rebels, thought to leave his Progress: But being certify'd the next day that they were partly defeated, and partly fled, he continued his Progress, and sent Sir Richard Guilford into Kent in Message. Who, calling the Country together, did much commend (from the King) their Fidelity, Manhood, and well-handling of that Service; and gave them all Thanks, and (in private) promis'd Reward to some Particulars.

The Rabble that follow'd Perkin, hang'd in Companies.

The Serjeants were, Mr. Mordant, Higham, Kingsmil, Conuby, Butler, Yaxley, Frowick, Oxenbridge and Constable.

Upon the Sixteenth of November (this being the Eleventh Year of the King) was holden the Serjeants-Feast at Ely-Place; there being Nine Serjeants of that Call. The King, to honour the Feast, was present with his Queen at the Dinner; being a Prince, that was ever ready to grace and countenance the Professors of the Law; having a little of that, That as he governed his Subjects by his Laws, so he governed his Laws by his Lawyers.

This Year also the King entred into League with the Italian Potentates, for the Defence of Italy against France. For King Charles had conquer'd the Realm of Naples, and lost it again, in a kind of Felicity of a Dream. He pass'd the whole Length of Italy without Resistance: So that it was true which Pope Alexander was wont to say; That the Frenchmen came into Italy, with Chalk in their Hands, to mark up their Lodgings, rather than with Swords to Fight. He likewise entred and won, in effect, the whole Kingdom of Naples it self, without striking stroke. But presently thereupon he did commit and multiply so many Errors, as was too great a Task for the best Fortune to overcome. He gave no Contentment to the Barons of Naples, of the Faction of the Angeovines; but scatter'd his Rewards according to the mercenary Appetites of some about him. He put all Italy upon their Guard, by the seizing and holding of Ostia, and the protecting of the Liberty of Pisa; which made all Men suspect that his Purposes look'd further, than his Title of Naples. He fell too soon at difference with Ludovico Sfortia; who was the Man that carried the Keys which brought him in, and shut him out. He neglected to extinguish some Relicks of the War. And lastly, in regard of his easy Passage through Italy without Resistance, he entred into an overmuch despising of the Arms of the Italians: Whereby he left the Realm of Naples at his Departure so much the less provided. So that not long after his Return, the whole Kingdom revolted to Ferdinando the Younger, and the French were quite driven out. Nevertheless, Charles did make both great Threats and great Preparations to re-enter Italy once again. Wherefore at the instance of divers of the States of Italy (and especially of Pope Alexander) there was a League concluded between the said Pope, Maximilian King of Romans, Henry King of England, Ferdinando and Isabella, King and Queen of Spain (for so they are constantly placed in the Original Treaty throughout) Augustissimo Barbadico, Duke of Venice, and Ludovico Sfortia, Duke of Milan, for the common defence of their Estates. Wherein though Ferdinando of Naples was not nam'd as principal; yet, no doubt, the Kingdom of Naples was tacitly included, as a Fee of the Church. 1495.

The Fr. King's Errors in his Expedition to Naples.

There died also this Year Cecile Dutchess of York, Mother to King Edward IV. at her Castle of Barkhamsted, being of extreme Years; and who had liv'd to see Three Princes of her Body crown'd, and Four murther'd. She was Buried at Foderingham by her Husband.

This Year also the King call'd his Parliament: where many Laws were made, of a more Private and Vulgar Nature, than ought to detain the Reader of an History. And it may be justly suspected by the Proceedings following, that as the King did excel in good Commonwealth Laws; so nevertheless he had, in secret, a Design to make use of them, as well for collecting of Treasure, as for correcting of Manners; and so, meaning thereby to harrow his People, did accumulate them the rather.

The principal Law that was made this Parliament, was a Law of a strange Nature: rather Just, than Legal; and more Magnanimous than Provident. This Law did Ordain, That no Person, that did assist in Arms, or otherwise, the King for the time being, should after be Impeached therefore, or Attainted, either by the Course of the Law, or by Act of Parliament: But, if any such Act of Attainder did happen to be made, it should be Void and of none Effect; For that it was agreeable to Reason of Estate, that the Subject should not enquire of the Justness of the King's Title, or Quarrel; and it was agreeable to good Conscience, that (whatsoever the Fortune of the War were) the Subject should not suffer for his Obedience. The spirit of this Law was wonderful Pious and Noble: being like in matter of War, unto the spirit of David in matter of Plague, who said, If I have sinned, strike me; but what have these sheep done? Neither wanted this Law Parts of prudent and deep foresight. For, it did the better take away Occasion for the People to busie themselves, to pry into the King's Title; for that howsoever it fell, their Safety was already provided for. Besides, it could not but greatly draw unto him the Love and Hearts of the People, because he seem'd more careful for them than for himself. But yet nevertheless, it did take off from his Party, that great Tie and Spur of Necessity, to Fight and go Victors out of the Field; considering their Lives and Fortunes were put in Safety, and protected, whether they stood to it or ran away. But the Force and Obligation of this Law was in it self Illusory, as to the latter part of it; by a precedent Act of Parliament, to bind or frustrate a Future. For a Supreme and Absolute Power cannot conclude it self, neither can that which is in Nature revocable be made fix'd, no more than if a Man should appoint or declare by his Will, that if he made any Latter Will, it should be Void. And for the Case of the Act of Parliament, there is a notable President of it in King Henry the VIII's Time; who doubting he might dye in the Minority of his Son, procur'd an Act to Pass, That no Statute made during the Minority of the King should bind him or his Successors, except it were confirmed by the King under his Great Seal, at his full Age. But the first Act that passed in King Edward the VI's Time, was an Act of Repeal of that former Act; at which time nevertheless the King was Minor. But things that do not bind, may satisfie for the time. 1495.

A strange Law.

There was also made a shoaring or underpropping Act for the Benevolence; to make the Sums which any Person had agreed to pay, and nevertheless were not brought in, to be leviable by 1495. by Course of Law. Which Act did not only bring in the Arrears, but did indeed countenance the whole Business, and was pretended to be made at the Desire of those that had been forward to pay.

A good Law. This Parliament also was made that good Law, which gave the Attaint upon a False Verdict between Party and Party, which before was a kind of Evangile, irremediable. It extends not to causes Capital, as well because they are for the most part at the King's Suit; as because in them (if they be follow'd in Course of Indictment) there passeth a double Jury, the Indictors, and the Triers; and so not Twelve Men, but Four and twenty. But it seemeth that was not the only Reason; for this Reason holdeth not in the Appeal. But the great Reason was, lest it should tend to the Discouragement of Jurors in Cases of Life and Death; if they should be subject to Suit and Penalty, where the Favour of Life maketh against them. It extendeth not also to any Suit, where the Demand is under the Value of Forty Pounds; for that in such Cases of Petty Value, it would not quit the Charge to go about again.

There was another Law made against a branch of Ingratitude in Women, who having been advanced by their Husbands, or their Husbands Ancestors, should alien, and thereby seek to defeat the Heirs, or those in Remainder, of the Lands, whereunto they had been so advanced. The Remedy was, by giving Power to the next, to enter for a Forfeiture.

An Act pass'd for Suing in Forma Pauperis. There was also enacted that Charitable Law, for the Admission of poor Suiters In Forma Pauperis, without Fee to Counsellor, Attorney, or Clerk, whereby Poor Men became rather Able to Vex, than Unable to Sue. There were divers other good Laws made that Parliament, as we said before: But we still observe our manner, in selecting out those, that are not of a Vulgar Nature.

The King this while, tho' he sate in Parliament, as in full Peace, and seem'd to account of the Designs of Perkin (who was now return'd into Flanders) but as a May-Game; yet having the Composition of a Wise King (Stout without, and Apprehensive within) had given order for the watching of Beacons upon the Coasts, and erecting more where they stood too thin, and had a careful Eye where this wandering Cloud would break. But Perkin advised to keep his Fire (which hitherto burn'd as it were upon green Wood) alive, with continual blowing; Sail'd again into Ireland, whence he had formerly departed, rather upon the Hopes of France, than upon any Unreadiness or Discouragement he found in that People. But in the space of time between, the King's Diligence and Poyning's Commission, had so settled things there, as there was nothing left for Perkin, but the blustring Affection of wild and naked People. Wherefore he was advis'd by his Council, to seek Aid of the King of Scotland; a Prince Young and Valourous, and in good Terms with his Nobles and People, and ill-affected to King Henry. At this time also both Maximilian and Charles of France began to bear no good will to the King. The one being displeased with the King's Prohibition of Commerce with Flanders: The other holding the King for suspect, in regard of his late entry into League with the Italians. Wherefore besides the open Aids of the Dutchess of Burgundy, which did with Sails and Oars put on and advance Perkin's Designs, there wanted not some secret Tides from Maximilian and Charles, which did further his Fortunes. Insomuch as they, both by their secret Letters and Messages, recommended him to the King of Scotland. 1495.

Perkin therefore coming into Scotland upon those Hopes, with a well appointed Company, was by the King of Scots * (being formerly well prepared) honourably welcom'd, and soon after his Arrival admitted to his Presence in a Solemn manner. For the King receiv'd him in State in his Chamber of Presence, accompany'd with divers of his Nobles. And Perkin well attended, as well with those that the King had sent before him, as with his own Train, entred the Room where the King was, and coming near to the King, and bowing a little to embrace him, he retired some Paces back, and with a loud Voice (that all that were present might hear him) made his Declaration in this manner: * James the 4th.

Perkin's Declaration to the Scottish King.

" HIgh and Mighty King, your Grace, and " these your Nobles here present, may " be pleased benignly to bow your Ears, to " hear the Tragedy of a Young Man, that by " Right ought to hold in his Hand the Ball of " a Kingdom; but by Fortune is made Himself " a Ball, tossed from Misery to Misery, and from " Place to Place. You see here before you the " Spectacle of a Plantagenet, who hath been carried from the Nursery to the Sanctuary; from " the Sanctuary to the direful Prison; from the " Prison, to the Hand of the cruel Tormentor; " and from that Hand, to the wide Wilderness " (as I may truly call it) for so the World hath " been to me. So that he that is born to a " great Kingdom, hath not Ground to set his " foot upon, more than this where he now " standeth, by your Princely Favour. Edward " the Fourth, late King of England, (as your " Grace cannot but have heard) left two Sons; " Edward, and Richard Duke of York, both very " young. Edward the Eldest, succeeded their " Father in the Crown, by the Name of King " Edward V. But Richard Duke of Glouce- " ster, their Unnatural Uncle, first thirsting " after the Kingdom, through Ambition, and " afterwards thirsting for their Blood, out of " Desire to secure himself, imploy'd an Instru- " ment of his (confident to him, as he thought) " to murther them both. But this Man that " was imploy'd to execute that execrable Tra- " gedy, having cruelly Slain King Edward, the Edward the Fifth murder'd. " Eldest of the two, was moved partly by Re- " morse, and partly by some other mean, to " save Richard his Brother; making a Report " nevertheless to the Tyrant, that he had per- " form'd his Commandment for both Brethren. " This Report was accordingly believ'd, and " publish'd generally. So that the World hath " been possessed of an Opinion that they both " were barbarously made away, tho' ever Truth " hath some sparks that fly abroad until it " appear in due time, as this hath had. But Al- " mighty God that stopped the Mouth of the " Lion, and saved little Joas from the Tyran- " ny of Athaliah, when she massacred the King's " Children; and did save Isaac, when the hand " was stretch'd forth to Sacrifice him; preserv'd " the second Brother. For I my self, that stand " here in your Presence, am that very Richard " Duke of York, Brother of that Infortunate " Prince, King Edward V. now the most right- " ful surviving Heir-Male to that Victorious and " most Noble Edward, of that Name the Fourth, " late King of England. For the manner of my " Escape, it is fit it should pass in Silence, or " (at least) in a more secret Relation: for that " it may concern some alive, and the Memory of " some

1495. " ſome that are Dead. Let it ſuffice to think, " that I had then a Mother living, a Queen, " and one that expected daily ſuch a Command- " ment from the Tyrant, for the murthering " of her Children. Thus in my tender Age " eſcaping by God's Mercy out of London, I " was ſecretly convey'd over Sea. Where, after " a time, the Party that had me in Charge, " (upon what new Fears, change of Mind, or " Practice God knoweth) ſuddenly forſook me. " Whereby I was forced to wander abroad, and " to ſeek mean Conditions for the ſuſtaining of " my Life. Wherefore diſtracted between ſeve- " ral Paſſions, the one of Fear to be known, leſt " the Tyrant ſhould have a new Attempt upon " me; the other of Grief and Diſdain to be un- " known, and to live in that baſe and ſervile " manner that I did; I reſolved with my ſelf " to expect the Tyrant's Death, and then to " put my ſelf into my Siſter's hands, who was " next Heir to the Crown. But in this Seaſon, " it happen'd one Henry Tidder, Son to Edmond " Tidder Earl of Richmond, to come from France " and enter into the Realm, and by ſubtile and " foul Means to obtain the Crown of the ſame, " which to me rightfully appertain'd. So that " it was but a Change from Tyrant to Tyrant. " This Henry, my extream and mortal Enemy, " ſo ſoon as he had Knowledge of my being " alive, imagined and wrought all the ſubtil " Ways and Means he could, to procure my " final Deſtruction. For my mortal Enemy hath " not only falſely ſurmiſed me to be a feign'd " Perſon, giving me Nick-names, ſo abuſing the " World; but alſo to defer and put me from " entry into England, hath offer'd large Sums of " Money, to corrupt the Princes and their Mini- " ſters, with whom I have been retained; and " made importune Labours to certain Servants a " bout my Perſon, to Murther or Poiſon me, and " others to forſake and leave my Righteous " Quarrel and to depart from my Service, as " Sir Robert Clifford, and others. So that every " Man of Reaſon may well perceive that Henry, " calling himſelf King of England, needed not " to have beſtow'd ſuch great Sums of Treaſure, " nor ſo to have buſy'd himſelf with importune " and inceſſant Labour and Induſtry, to com- " paſs my Death and Ruin, if I had been ſuch " a feign'd Perſon. But the truth of my Cauſe " being ſo manifeſt, moved the moſt Chriſtian " King Charles, and the Lady Dutcheſs Dowa- " ger of Burgundy, my moſt dear Aunt, not on- " ly to Acknowledge the Truth thereof, but " lovingly to aſſiſt me. But it ſeemeth that God " above (for the good of this whole Iſland, " and the knitting of theſe two Kingdoms of " England and Scotland in a ſtrait Concord and " Amity, by ſo great an Obligation) had re- " ſerv'd the placing of me in the Imperial " Throne of England, for the Arms and Succours " of your Grace. Neither is it the firſt time " that a King of Scotland hath ſupported them, " that were bereft and ſpoiled of the Kingdom " of England; as of late (in freſh Memory) it " was done in the Perſon of Henry VI. Where- " fore for that your Grace hath given clear " Signs, that you are in no Noble Quality infe- " riour to your Royal Anceſtors; I, ſo diſtreſſed " a Prince, was hereby moved to come and put " my Self into your Royal Hands, deſiring your " Aſſiſtance to recover my Kingdom of England; " promiſing faithfully to bear my Self towards " your Grace no otherwiſe, than if I were your 1495. " own Natural Brother, and will upon the Re- " covery of mine Inheritance, gratefully do " you all the Pleaſure that is in my utmoſt " Power.

After Perkin had told his Tale, King James anſwer'd bravely and wiſely, That whatſoever he were, he ſhould not repent him of putting himſelf into his hands. And from that time forth, tho' there wanted not ſome about him, that would have perſwaded him, that all was but an Illuſion; yet notwithſtanding, either taken by Perkin's amiable and alluring Behaviour, or inclining to the Recommendation of the great Princes abroad, or willing to take an Occaſion of a War againſt King Henry, he entertain'd him in all things, as became the Perſon of Richard Duke of York; embraced his Quarrel; and (the more to put it out of Doubt, that he took him to be a great Prince, and not a Repreſentation only) he gave Conſent, that this Duke ſhould take to Wife the Lady Katherine Gordon, Daughter to the E. of Huntley, being a near Kinſwoman to the King himſelf, and a young Virgin of excellent Beauty and Vertue.

The Scots King favours Perkin.

Perkin marries the Lady Katherine Gordon, Daughter to the E. of Huntley.

Not long after, (d) the King of Scots in Perſon, with Perkin in his Company, entred with a great Army (though it conſiſted chiefly of Borderers, being raiſed ſomewhat ſuddenly) into Northumberland. And Perkin for a Perfume before him as he went, cauſed to be publiſh'd a Proclamation of this Tenor following, in the Name of Richard Duke of York, true Inheritor of the Crown of England.

The King of Scots invades England.

" IT hath pleaſed God, who putteth down " the Mighty from their Seat, and exalteth " the Humble, and ſuffereth not the Hopes of " the Juſt to periſh in the end, to give us means " at the length, to ſhew our Selves armed unto " our Lieges and People of England. But far be " it from us, to intend their Hurt and Dam- " mage, or to make War upon them, otherwiſe " than to deliver our Self and them from Ty- " ranny and Oppreſſion. For, our mortal Ene- " my Henry Tidder, a falſe Uſurper of the Crown " of England, (which to us by Natural and Li- " neal Right appertaineth) knowing in his own " Heart our undoubted Right, (we being the " very Richard Duke of York, younger Son, and " now ſurviving Heir-Male of the Noble and " Victorious Edward IV. late King of England) " hath not only deprived us of our Kingdom, " but likewiſe by all foul and wicked means " ſought to betray us, and bereave us of our " Life. Yet if his Tyranny only extended it " ſelf to our Perſon (altho' our Royal Blood " teacheth us to be ſenſible of Injuries) it ſhould " be leſs to our Grief. But this Tidder, who " boaſteth himſelf to have Overthrown a Ty- " rant, hath ever ſince his firſt Entrance into " his uſurped Reign, put little in Practice but " Tyranny and the Feats thereof.

The Original of this Proclamation remaineth with Sir Robert Cotton, a worthy Preſerver and Treaſurer of rare Antiquities: from whoſe Manuſcripts I have had much light for the furniſhing of this Work.

" For King Richard our Unnatural Uncle, al- " tho' Deſire of Rule did blind him, yet in his " other Actions (like a true Plantagenet) was " Noble, and lov'd the Honour of the Realm, " and the Contentment and Comfort of his No- " bles and People. But this our Mortal Enemy " (agreeable to the Meanneſs of his Birth) hath " trodden under foot the Honour of this Na- " tion; ſelling our beſt Confederates for Money, (d) Maximilian the Emperor, Charles the Eighth. King of France, and Margaret Dutcheſs of Burgundy, wrote to the Scots King in Favour of this Counterfeit. Sir J. W. Cap. 9.

" and

1495. by Course of Law. Which Act did not only bring in the Arrears, but did indeed countenance the whole Business, and was pretended to be made at the Desire of those that had been forward to pay.

A good Law. This Parliament also was made that good Law, which gave the Attaint upon a False Verdict between Party and Party, which before was a kind of Evangile, irremediable. It extends not to causes Capital, as well because they are for the most part at the King's Suit; as because in them (if they be follow'd in Course of Indictment) there passeth a double Jury, the Indictors, and the Triers; and so not Twelve Men, but Four and twenty. But it seemeth that was not the only Reason; for this Reason holdeth not in the Appeal. But the great Reason was, lest it should tend to the Discouragement of Jurors in Cases of Life and Death; if they should be subject to Suit and Penalty, where the Favour of Life maketh against them. It extendeth not also to any Suit, where the Demand is under the Value of Forty Pounds; for that in such Cases of Petty Value, it would not quit the Charge to go about again.

There was another Law made against a branch of Ingratitude in Women, who having been advanced by their Husbands, or their Husbands Ancestors, should alien, and thereby seek to defeat the Heirs, or those in Remainder, of the Lands, whereunto they had been so advanced. The Remedy was, by giving Power to the next, to enter for a Forfeiture.

An Act pass'd for Suing in Forma Pauperis. There was also enacted that Charitable Law, for the Admission of poor Suiters In Forma Pauperis, without Fee to Counsellor, Attorney, or Clerk, whereby Poor Men became rather Able to Vex, than Unable to Sue. There were divers other good Laws made that Parliament, as we said before: But we still observe our manner, in selecting out those, that are not of a Vulgar Nature.

The King this while, tho' he sate in Parliament, as in full Peace, and seem'd to account of the Designs of Perkin (who was now return'd into Flanders) but as a May-Game; yet having the Composition of a Wise King (Stout without, and Apprehensive within) had given order for the watching of Beacons upon the Coasts, and erecting more where they stood too thin, and had a careful Eye where this wandering Cloud would break. But Perkin advised to keep his Fire (which hitherto burn'd as it were upon green Wood) alive, with continual blowing; Sail'd again into Ireland, whence he had formerly departed, rather upon the Hopes of France, than upon any Unreadiness or Discouragement he found in that People. But in the space of time between, the King's Diligence and Poyning's Commission, had so settled things there, as there was nothing left for Perkin, but the blustring Affection of wild and naked People. Wherefore he was advis'd by his Council, to seek Aid of the King of Scotland; a Prince Young and Valourous, and in good Terms with his Nobles and People, and ill-affected to King Henry. At this time also both Maximilian and Charles of France began to bear no good will to the King. The one being displeased with the King's Prohibition of Commerce with Flanders; The other holding the King for suspect, in regard of his late entry into League with the Italians. Wherefore besides the open Aids of the Dutchess of Burgundy, which did with Sails and Oars put on and advance Perkin's Designs, there wanted not some secret Tides from Maximilian and Charles, which did further his Fortunes. Insomuch as they, both by their secret Letters and Messages, recommended him to the King of Scotland. 1495.

Perkin therefore coming into Scotland upon those Hopes, with a well appointed Company, was by the King of Scots * (being formerly well prepared) honourably welcom'd, and soon after his Arrival admitted to his Presence in a Solemn manner. For the King receiv'd him in State in his Chamber of Presence, accompany'd with divers of his Nobles. And Perkin well attended, as well with those that the King had sent before him, as with his own Train, entred the Room where the King was, and coming near to the King, and bowing a little to embrace him, he retired some Paces back, and with a loud Voice (that all that were present might hear him) made his Declaration in this manner: * James the 4th.

Perkin's Declaration to the Scottish King.

" HIgh and Mighty King, your Grace, and
" these your Nobles here present, may " be pleased benignly to bow your Ears, to " hear the Tragedy of a Young Man, that by " Right ought to hold in his Hand the Ball of
" a Kingdom; but by Fortune is made Himself
" a Ball, tossed from Misery to Misery, and from " Place to Place. You see here before you the " Spectacle of a Plantagenet, who hath been car" ried from the Nursery to the Sanctuary; from
" the Sanctuary to the direful Prison; from the " Prison, to the Hand of the cruel Tormentor;
" and from that Hand, to the wide Wilderness
" (as I may truly call it) for so the World hath
" been to me. So that he that is born to a " great Kingdom, hath not Ground to set his " foot upon, more than this where he now
" standeth, by your Princely Favour. Edward
" the Fourth, late King of England, (as your
" Grace cannot but have heard) left two Sons;
" Edward, and Richard Duke of York, both very " young. Edward the Eldest, succeeded their " Father in the Crown, by the Name of King
" Edward V. But Richard Duke of Glouce-
" ster, their Unnatural Uncle, first thirsting
" after the Kingdom, through Ambition, and
" afterwards thirsting for their Blood, out of " Desire to secure himself, imploy'd an Instru-
" ment of his (confident to him, as he thought)
" to murther them both. But this Man that " was imploy'd to execute that execrable Tra-
" gedy, having cruelly Slain King Edward, the " Eldest of the two, was moved partly by Re-
" morse, and partly by some other mean, to
" save Richard his Brother; making a Report
" nevertheless to the Tyrant, that he had per-
" form'd his Commandment for both Brethren.
" This Report was accordingly believ'd, and " publish'd generally. So that the World hath
" been possessed of an Opinion that they both
" were barbarously made away, tho' ever Truth
" hath some sparks that fly abroad until it
" appear in due time, as this hath had. But Al-
" mighty God that stopped the Mouth of the " Lion, and saved little Joas from the Tyran-
" ny of Athaliah, when she massacred the King's " Children; and did save Isaac when the hand
" was stretch'd forth to [illegible]; preserv'd
" the second Brot[illegible]lf, that stan[illegible]
" here in your [illegible] very
" Duke of [illegible]
" Prince, [illegible]
" ful su[illegible]
" mo[illegible]
" lar[illegible]
" El[illegible]
" (
" ;

Edward the Fifth murder'd.

1495. " ſome that are Dead. Let it ſuffice to think, " that I had then a Mother living, a Queen, " and one that expected daily ſuch a Command- " ment from the Tyrant, for the murthering " of her Children. Thus in my tender Age " eſcaping by God's Mercy out of London, I " was ſecretly convey'd over Sea. Where, after " a time, the Party that had me in Charge, " (upon what new Fears, change of Mind, or " Practice God knoweth) ſuddenly forſook me. " Whereby I was forced to wander abroad, and " to ſeek mean Conditions for the ſuſtaining of " my Life. Wherefore diſtracted between ſeve- " ral Paſſions, the one of Fear to be known, leſt " the Tyrant ſhould have a new Attempt upon " me; the other of Grief and Diſdain to be un- " known, and to live in that baſe and ſervile " manner that I did; I reſolved with my ſelf " to expect the Tyrant's Death, and then to " put my ſelf into my Siſter's hands, who was " next Heir to the Crown. But in this Seaſon, " it happen'd one Henry Tidder, Son to Edmond " Tidder Earl of Richmond, to come from France " and enter into the Realm, and by ſubtile and " foul Means to obtain the Crown of the ſame, " which to me rightfully appertain'd. So that " it was but a Change from Tyrant to Tyrant. " This Henry, my extream and mortal Enemy, " ſo ſoon as he had Knowledge of my being " alive, imagined and wrought all the ſubtil " Ways and Means he could, to procure my " final Deſtruction. For my mortal Enemy hath " not only falſely ſurmiſed me to be a feign'd " Perſon, giving me Nick-names, ſo abuſing the " World; but alſo to defer and put me from " entry into England, hath offer'd large Sums of " Money, to corrupt the Princes and their Mini- " ſters, with whom I have been retained; and " made importune Labours to certain Servants a- " bout my Perſon, to Murther or Poiſon me, and " others to forſake and leave my Righteous " Quarrel and to depart from my Service, as " Sir Robert Clifford, and others. So that every " Man of Reaſon may well perceive that Henry, " calling himſelf King of England, needed not " to have beſtow'd ſuch great Sums of Treaſure, " nor ſo to have buſy'd himſelf with importune " and inceſſant Labour and Induſtry, to com- " paſs my Death and Ruin, if I had been ſuch " a feign'd Perſon. But the truth of my Cauſe " being ſo manifeſt, moved the moſt Chriſtian " King Charles, and the Lady Dutcheſs Dow- " ger of Burgundy, my moſt dear Aunt, not on- " ly to Acknowledge the Truth thereof, but " lovingly to aſſiſt me. But it ſeemeth the Pow- " above (for the good of this whole Iſland " and the knitting of theſe two Kingdoms of " England and Scotland in a firm Union and " Amity, by ſo great an Alliance) hath pre- " ſerv'd the placing of me in the Imperial " Throne of England, for you have underſtood " of your Grace [illegible] " that a King of [illegible] " that were [illegible] " of England; or of [illegible] " was done in the Parts of [illegible] " re for that your Grace [illegible] " ns, that you are [illegible] " er to your Royal [illegible] " Prince [illegible] " my S[illegible] " Aſſi[illegible] " Pro[illegible]

1495. " your Grace no otherwiſe, than if I were your " own Natural Brother, and will upon the Re- " covery of mine Inheritance, gratefully do " you all the Pleaſure that is in my utmoſt " Power.

After Perkin had told his Tale, King James anſwer'd bravely and wiſely, That whatſoever he were, he ſhould not repent him of putting himſelf into his hands. And from that time forth, tho' there wanted not ſome about him, that would have perſwaded him, that all was but an Illuſion; yet notwithſtanding, either taken by Perkin's a- miable and alluring Behaviour, or inclining to the Recommendation of the great Princes a- broad, or willing to take an Occaſion of a War againſt King Henry, he entertain'd him in all things, as became the Perſon of Richard Duke of York; embraced his Quarrel; and (the more to put it out of Doubt, that he took him to be a great Prince, and not a Repreſentation only) he gave Conſent, that this Duke ſhould take to Wife the Lady Katherine Gordon, Daughter to the E. of Huntley, being a near Kinſwoman of the King himſelf, and a young Virgin of excellent Beauty and Vertue.

The King of Scots [illegible] years [illegible]

Not long after, (d) the King of Scots [illegible] ſon, with Perkin in his Company, entred [illegible] a great Army (though it ſmelled chiefly [illegible] Borderers, being raiſed [illegible] Northumberland. And Perkin for a Reputation [illegible] fore him as he went, [illegible] Proclamation of [illegible] Name of Richard Duke of York, [illegible] the Crown of England.

" IT hath pleaſed God, [illegible] " the Mighty [illegible] " the Humble, and [illegible] " the Juſt or puniſh [illegible] " at the Height, or [illegible] " our Liege and [illegible] " is from us, [illegible] " ſought, or [illegible] " that is done or [illegible] " many and [illegible] " our Sure [illegible] " of England [illegible] " and [illegible] " Throne [illegible]

[illegible] I [illegible] .o [illegible] me [illegible] om- [illegible] ugh: [illegible] ders, [illegible] one Mi- Joſeph a Black- ſmith a chief Re- bel. Bodmin; deſirous to Flammock, bel. [illegible] bours com- Flamock a Lawyer Law was on heads the mongſt them. Rebels. as if he could [illegible] nd never break [illegible], that Subſidies [illegible] ied in this Caſe; [illegible] for that the Law [illegible] by ſervice of Eſ- The Cor- niſh Men for Eſcu- age Ser- vice. much leſs when all [illegible] e but a Pretence [illegible] nd therefore that [illegible] nd now like Sheep [illegible] on Harneſs, and [illegible] ls: Yet to do no [illegible] eliver the King [illegible]

St[illegible]

1495. " and making Merchandize of the Blood, Eſtates, " and Fortunes of our Peers and Subjects, by " feigned Wars and diſhonourable Peace, only " to enrich his Coffers. Nor unlike hath been " his hateful Miſ-government, and evil Deport- " ments at Home. Firſt, he hath (to fortify " his falſe Quarrel) cauſed divers Nobles of this " our Realm (whom he held Suſpect, and ſtood " in Dread of) to be cruelly murther'd; as " our Couſin Sir William Stanley Lord Chamber- " lain, Sir Simon Mountfort, Sir Robert Ratcliffe, " William Dawbeney, Humphrey Stafford, and ma- " ny others, beſides ſuch as have dearly bought " their Lives with intolerable Ranſoms. Some " of which Nobles are now in the Sanctuary. " Alſo he hath long kept, and yet keepeth in " Priſon, our right entirely wel-beloved Coſen " Edward, Son and Heir to our Uncle Duke of " Clarence, and others; with-holding from them " their rightful Inheritance, to the intent they " ſhould never be of Might and Power to Aid " and Aſſiſt us at our need, after the Duty of " their Liegeances. He alſo married by Com- " pulſion certain of our Siſters, and alſo the Si- " ſter of our ſaid Coſen the Earl of Warwick, " and divers other Ladies of the Royal Blood, " certain of his Kinſmen and Friends of ſimple " and low Degree; and putting apart all well- " diſpoſed Nobles, he hath none in Favour and " Truſt about his Perſon, but Biſhop Fox, Smith, " Bray, Lovel, Oliver King, David Owen, Riſe- " ley, Turberville, Tiler, Cholmley, Empſon, James " Hobart, John Cut, Garth, Henry Wyat, and ſuch " other Caitiffs and Villains of Birth, which by " ſubtil Inventions and Pilling of the People, " have been the principal Finders, Occaſioners, " and Counſellors of the Miſ-rule and Miſchief " now reigning in England.

" We remembring theſe Premiſſes, with the " great and execrable Offences daily commit- " ted, and done by our foreſaid great Enemy, " and his Adherents, in breaking the Liberties " and Franchiſes of our Mother the Holy Church, " upon Pretences of Wicked and Heatheniſh Po- " licy, to the high Diſpleaſure of Almighty " God; beſides the manifold Treaſons, abomi- " nable Murthers, Man-ſlaughters, Robberies, " Extortions, the daily Pilling of the People, " by Diſmes, Taxes, Tallages, Benevolences, " and other unlawful Impoſitions, and grievous " Exactions, with many other heinous Effects, " to the likely Deſtruction and Deſolation of " the whole Realm: ſhall by God's Grace, and " the Help and Aſſiſtance of the great Lords " of our Blood, with the Counſel of other ſad " Perſons, ſee that the Commodities of our " Realm be imploy'd to the moſt Advantage " of the ſame; the entercourſe of Merchandize " betwixt Realm and Realm, to be miniſtred " and handled, as ſhall more be to the Com- " mon-weal and Proſperity of our Subjects; " and all ſuch Diſmes, Taxes, Tallages, Bene- " volences, unlawful Impoſitions, and grievous " Exactions, as be above rehearſed, to be fore- " done and laid apart, and never from hence- " forth to be called upon, but in ſuch Caſes " as our Noble Progenitors Kings of England, " have of old Time been accuſtom'd to have " the Aid, Succour, and Help of their Subjects " and true Liege-men.

" And further, we do out of our Grace and " Clemency, hereby as well Publiſh and Pro- " miſe to all our Subjects Remiſſion and free " Pardon of all By-paſt Offences whatſoever, " againſt our Perſon, or Eſtate, in adhering to " our ſaid Enemy, by whom (we know well) " they have been miſ-led, if they ſhall within " time convenient ſubmit themſelves unto us. 1495. " And for ſuch as ſhall come with the foremoſt, " to aſſiſt our righteous Quarrel, we ſhall make " them ſo far Partakers of our Princely Favour " and Bounty, as ſhall be highly for the Com- " fort of them and theirs, both during their " Life, and after their Death. As alſo we ſhall " by all means, which God ſhall put into our " hands, demean our ſelves to give Royal Con- " tentment to all Degrees and Eſtates of our " People, maintaining the Liberties of Holy " Church in their entire, preſerving the Ho- " nours, Privileges, and Preheminences of our " Nobles from Contempt or Diſparagement, " according to the Dignity of their Blood. We " ſhall alſo Unyoak our People from all heavy " Burthens and Endurances, and confirm our " Cities, Boroughs, and Towns, in their Char- " ters and Freedoms, with Inlargement, where " it ſhall be deſerv'd; and in all Points give " our Subjects cauſe to think, that the bleſſed " and debonaire Government of our Noble Fa- " ther King Edward (in his laſt times) is in " us revived.

" And for as much as the putting to Death, " or taking alive of our ſaid Mortal Enemy, " may be a mean to ſtay much Effuſion of Blood, " which otherwiſe may enſue, if by Compulſion " or fair promiſes, he ſhall draw after him any " number of our Subjects to reſiſt us; which we " deſire to avoid (though we be certainly infor- " med that our ſaid Enemy is purpoſed and pre- " pared to fly the Land, having already made " over great Maſſes of the Treaſure of our " Crown, the better to ſupport him in Forreign " Parts) we do hereby declare, that whoſoever " ſhall take or diſtreſs our ſaid Enemy (though " the Party be of never ſo mean a Condition) Perkin promiſes a 10000*l.* " he ſhall be by us rewarded with a Thouſand Reward " Pound in Money, forthwith to be laid down to any " to him, and an Hundred Marks by the Year that ſhall " of Inheritance; beſides that he may otherwiſe take or " merit, both toward God and all good People, kill King " for the deſtruction of ſuch a Tyrant. Henry.

" Laſtly, we do all Men to wit, and herein " we take alſo God to witneſs, That whereas " God hath moved the Heart of our Deareſt " Couſin, the King of Scotland, to Aid us in " Perſon, in this our Righteous Quarrel; it is " altogether without any Pact or Promiſe, or ſo " much as Demand of any thing, that may pre- " judice our Crown or Subjects: But contrari- " wiſe with Promiſe on our ſaid Couſin's part, " that whenſoever he ſhall find us in ſufficient " ſtrength to get the upper Hand of our Ene- " my (which we hope will be very ſuddenly) " he will forthwith peaceably return into his " own Kingdom; contenting himſelf only with " the Glory of ſo Honourable an Enterpriſe, " and our true and faithful Love and Amity. " Which we ſhall ever (by the Grace of " Almighty God) ſo order, as ſhall be to " the great Comfort of both Kingdoms.

But Perkins Proclamation did little edifie with the People of England; neither was he the better welcome for the company he came in. Wherefore the King of Scotland ſeing none came in to Perkin, nor none ſtirred any where in his Favour, turned his enterprife into a Rode; and waſted and deſtroyed the Country of Northumberland, with Fire and Sword. But hearing that there were Forces coming againſt him, and not willing that they ſhould find his Men heavy and laden with Booty, he returned into Scotland with great Spoils, deferring further Proſecution, till another time. It is ſaid, that Perkin acting the A. D. 1496. What effect Perkins Proclamation had.

part

1496. part of a Prince handſomly, when he ſaw the Scottiſh fell to waſt the Country, came to the King in a paſſionate manner, making great lamentation, and deſired, That that might not be the manner of making the War; for that no Crown was ſo dear to his Mind, as that he deſired to purchaſe it with the Blood and ruin of his Country. Whereunto the King anſwered half in ſport; that he doubted much, he was careful for that that was none of his, and that he ſhould be too good a Steward for his Enemy, to ſave the Country to his uſe.

The Decay of Trade by the War.

By this Time, being the eleventh Year of the King, the Interruption of Trade between the Engliſh and the Flemmiſh, began to pinch the Merchants of both Nations very ſore. Which moved them, by all means they could deviſe, to affect and diſpoſe their Soveraigns reſpectively, to open the Entercourſe again. Wherein, time favoured them. For the Arch-Duke and his Council began to ſee, that Perkin would prove but a Runnagate, and Citizen of the World; and that it was the part of Children to fall out about Babies. And the King on his part, after the Attempts upon Kent and Northumberland, began to have the Buſineſs of Perkin in leſs Eſtimation; ſo as he did not put it to account, in any Conſultation of State. But that that moved him moſt, was, that being a King that loved Wealth and Treaſure, he could not endure to have Trade ſick, nor any Obſtruction to continue in the Gate-vein, which diſperſed that Blood. And yet he kept State ſo far, as firſt to be ſought unto. Wherein the Merchant-Adventurers likewiſe, (being a ſtrong Company at that time, and well underſet with Rich Men, and good order) did hold out bravely; taking off the Commodities of the Kingdom, though they lay dead upon their Hands for want of Vent. At the laſt, Commiſſioners met at London, to treat. On the King's part; Biſhop Fox Lord Privy Seal, Viſcount Wells, Kendal Prior of Saint Johns, Warham Maſter of the Rolls, who began to gain much upon the King's Opinion; Urſwick, who was almoſt ever one; and Riſeley. On the Arch-Duke's part, the Lord Bevers his Admiral, the Lord Verunſel Preſident of Flanders, and others. Theſe concluded a perfect Treaty, both of Amity and Intercourſe, between the King and the Arch-Duke; containing Articles both of State, Commerce and Free-fiſhing. This is that Treaty, which the Flemmings call at this Day, Intercurſus Magnus; both becauſe it is more compleat, than the precedent Treaties, of the Third and Fourth Years of the King: and chiefly to give it a Difference, from the Treaty that followed in the one and twentieth Year of the King: which they call Intercurſus Malus. In this Treaty, there was an expreſs Article againſt the Reception of the Rebels of either Prince by other; purporting, that if any ſuch Rebel ſhould be required by the Prince whoſe Rebel he was, of the Prince Confederate, that forthwith the Prince Confederate ſhould by Proclamation command him to avoid the Country. Which if he did not within fifteen Days, the Rebel was to ſtand proſcrib'd, and put out of Protection. But nevertheleſs in this Article, Perkin was not named, neither perhaps contained, becauſe he was no Rebel. But by this means his Wings were clipt of his Followers, that were Engliſh. And it was expreſly compriſed in the Treaty, that it ſhould extend to the Territories of the Dutcheſs Dowager. After the Intercourſe thus reſtored, the Engliſh Merchants came again to their Manſion at Antwerp, where they were received with Proceſſion and great Joy.

Commiſſioners about Trade.

Articles made between the King and the Arch-Duke.

The Engliſh Merchants receiv'd at Antwerp with Joy and Proceſſions.

The Winter following, being the Twelfth Year of his Reign, the King called again his Parliament: where he did much exaggerate both the Malice, and the cruel Predatory War lately made by the King of Scotland; That that King, being in Amity with him, and no ways provok'd, ſhould ſo burn in Hatred towards him, as to drink of the Lees and Dreggs of Perkin's Intoxication, who was every where elſe detected and diſcarded: And that when he perceived it was out of his Reach, to do the King any Hurt, he had turned his Arms upon unarmed and unprovided People, to ſpoil only and depopulate, contrary to the Laws both of War and Peace: Concluding, that he could neither with Honour, nor with the ſafety of his People, to whom he did owe Protection, let paſs theſe Wrongs unrevenged. The Parliament underſtood him well, and gave him a Subſidy, limited to the Sum of one hundred and twenty thouſand Pounds, beſides two Fifteens. For his Wars were always to him as a Mine of Treaſure, of a ſtrange kind of Ore; Iron at the Top, and Gold and Silver at the bottom. At this Parliament (for that there had been ſo much time ſpent in making Laws the Year before, and for that it was called purpoſely in reſpect of the Scottiſh War) there were no Laws made to be remembred. Only there paſſed a Law, at the Sute of the Merchant-Adventurers of England, againſt the Merchant-Adventurers of London, for Monopolizing and exacting upon the Trade: Which it ſeemeth they did, a little to ſave themſelves, after the hard time they had ſuſtained by want of Trade. But thoſe Innovations were taken away by Parliament.

1496.

King Henry's Wars gainful to him.

But it was fatal to the King, to fight for his Money. And though he avoided to fight with Enemies abroad, yet he was ſtill enforced to fight for it with Rebels at home. For no ſooner began the Subſidy to be levied in Corn-wall, but the People there began to grudge and murmur. The Corniſh being a Race of Men, ſtout of Stomack, mighty of Body and Limb, and that lived hardly in a barren Country, and many of them could (for a need) live under Ground, that were Tinners; they muttered extreamly, that it was a thing not to be ſuffered, that for a little Stir of the Scots, ſoon blown over, they ſhould be thus grinded to Powder with Payments: And ſaid, it was for them to pay, that had too much, and lived idlely. But they would eat the Bread they got with the Sweat of their Brows, and no Man ſhould take it from them. And as in the Tides of People once up, there want not commonly ſtirring Winds to make them more rough: So this People did light upon two Ringleaders, or Captains of the Rout. The one was one Michael Joſeph, a Blackſmith or Farrier of Bodmin; a notable talking Fellow, and no leſs deſirous to be talked of. The other was Thomas Flammock, a Lawyer; who by telling his Neighbours commonly upon any occaſion, that the Law was on their ſide, had gotten great ſway amongſt them. This Man talked Learnedly, and as if he could tell how to make a Rebellion, and never break the Peace. He told the People, that Subſidies were not to be granted nor levied in this Caſe; that is, for Wars of Scotland (for that the Law had provided another Courſe, by ſervice of Eſcuage, for thoſe Journeys) much leſs when all was quiet, and War was made but a Pretence to Poll and Pill the People: And therefore that it was good they ſhould not ſtand now like Sheep before the Shearers, but put on Harneſs, and take Weapons in their Hands: Yet to do no Creature hurt; but go and deliver the King a

The Corniſh Men rebel.

Joſeph a Blackſmith a chief Rebel.

Flamock a Lawyer heads the Rebels.

The Corniſh Men for Eſcuage Service.

1497. Strong Petition, for the laying down of thoſe grievous Payments, and for the Puniſhment of thoſe that had given him that Counſel; to make others beware how they did the like in time to come: And ſaid, for his part he did not ſee how they could do the Duty of true Engliſh Men, and good Liege Men, except they did deliver the King from ſuch wicked Ones that would deſtroy both him and the Country. Their Aim was at Arch Biſhop Morton, and Sir Reginold Bray, who were the King's Skreens in this Envy.

After that theſe two, Flammock and the Black-ſmith, had by Joynt and ſeveral Pratings, found Tokens of Conſent in the Multitude, they offered themſelves to lead them, until they ſhould hear of better Men to be their Leaders; which they ſaid would be ere long: Telling them further, that they would be but their Servants, and firſt in every Danger; but doubted not but to make both the Weſt End and the Eaſt End of England to meet in ſo good a Quarrel; and that all (rightly underſtood) was but for the King's Service. The People, upon theſe Seditious Inſtigations, did Arm (moſt of them with Bows, and Arrows, and Bills, and ſuch other Weapons of Rude and Country People) and forthwith under the Command of their Leaders (which in ſuch Caſes is ever at pleaſure) marched out of Corn-wall, through Devonſhire, und Taunton in Somerſetſhire, without any Slaughter, Violence, or Spoil of the Country. At Taunton they killed, in fury, an Officious and eager Commiſſioner for the Subſidy, whom they called the Provoſt of Perin. Thence they marched to Wells: where the Lord Audley (with whom their Leaders had, before, ſome ſecret Intelligence) a Noble-man of an Ancient Family, but unquiet and popular, and aſpiring to Ruin, came in to them, and was by them (with great Gladneſs and Cries of Joy) accepted as their General; they being now proud, that they were led by a Noble-man. The Lord Audley led them on from Wells to Saliſbury, and from Salisbury to Wincheſter. Thence the fooliſh People, who (in effect) led their Leaders, had a Mind to be led into Kent; fancying, that the People there would joyn with them, contrary to all Reaſon or Judgment; conſidering, the Kentiſh-men had ſhewed great Loyalty and Affection to the King ſo lately before. But the rude People had heard Flammock ſay, that Kent was never conquered, and that they were the freeſt People of England. And, upon theſe vain Noiſes, they looked for great matters at their Hands, in a Cauſe which they conceited to be for the Liberty of the Subject. But when they were come into Kent, the Country was ſo well ſettled, both by the King's late kind Uſage towards them, and by the Credit and Power of the Earl of Kent, the Lord Abergavenny, and the Lord Cobham, as neither Gentleman nor Yeoman came in to their Aid; which did much damp and diſmay many of the ſimpler ſort: Inſomuch, as divers of them did ſecretly fly from the Army, and went home. But the ſturdier ſort, and thoſe that were moſt engaged, ſtood by it, and rather waxed proud, than fail'd in Hopes and Courage. For as it did ſomewhat appall them, that the People came not in to them; ſo it did no leſs encourage them, that the King's Forces had not ſet upon them, having marched from the Weſt unto the Eaſt of England. Wherefore they kept on their Way, and encamped upon Black-heath, between Greenwich and Eltham; threatning either to bid Battel to the King (for now the Seas went higher than to Morton, and Braie) or to take London within his view; imagining with themſelves, there to find no leſs Fear, than Wealth. 1497.

A Commiſſioner for the Taxes Murder'd.

The Rebels chooſe the Lord Audley for their General.

The Loyalty of the Kentiſh Men.

But to return to the King. When firſt he heard of this Commotion of the Corniſh-men, occaſioned by the Subſidy, he was much troubled therewith: Not for it ſelf, but in regard of the Concurrence of other Dangers, that did hang over him at that time. For he doubted leaſt a War from Scotland, a Rebellion from Cornwall, and the Practices and Conſpiracies of Perkin and his Partakers, would come upon him at once; Knowing well, that it was a dangerous Triplicity to a Monarchy, to have the Arms of a Forreiner, the Diſcontents of Subjects, and the Title of a Pretender, to meet. Nevertheleſs, the Occaſion took him in ſome part well provided. For as ſoon as the Parliament had broken up, the King had preſently raiſed a Puiſſant Army, to War upon Scotland. And King James of Scotland likewiſe, on his part, had made great Preparations either for Defence, or for new aſſayling of England. But as for the King's Forces, they were not only in preparation, but in readineſs preſently to ſet forth, under the Conduct of Dawbeney, the Lord Chamberlain. But as ſoon as the King underſtood of the Rebellion of Cornwall, he ſtayed thoſe Forces, retaining them for his own Service and Safety. But therewithal he diſpatched the Earl of Surry into the North, for the Defence and ſtrength of thoſe Parts, in caſe the Scots ſhould ſtir. But for the Courſe he held towards the Rebels, it was utterly differing from his former Cuſtom, and Practice; which was ever full of Forwardneſs and Celerity, to make head againſt them, or to ſet upon them as ſoon as ever they were in Action. This he was wont to do. But now, beſides that he was attempered by Years, and leſs in Love with Dangers, by the continued Fruition of a Crown; it was a time when the various Appearance to his Thoughts of Perils of ſeveral Natures, and from divers Parts, did make him judge it his beſt and ſureſt Way, to keep his Strength together, in the Seat and Center of his Kingdom. According to the Ancient Indian Emblem; in ſuch a ſwelling Seaſon, To hold the Hand upon the middle of the Bladder, that no ſide might riſe. Beſides, there was no neceſſity put upon him, to alter this Counſel. For neither did the Rebels ſpoil the Country; in which Caſe it had been Diſhonour to abandon his People: Neither on the other ſide, did their Forces gather or encreaſe, which might haſten him to precipitate and aſſail them, before they grew too ſtrong. And laſtly, both Reaſon of Eſtate and War ſeemed to agree with this Courſe; For that Inſurrections of baſe People are commonly more furious in their Beginnings. And by this means alſo he had them the more at Vantage, being tyred and harraſſed with a long March; and more at Mercy, being cut off far from their Country, and therefore not able by any ſuddain Flight to get to retreat, and to renew the Troubles.

When therefore the Rebels were encamped on Black-Heath, upon the Hill, whence they might behold the City of London, and the fair Valley about it: the King knowing well, that it ſtood him upon, by how much the more he had hitherto protracted the time in not encountring them, by ſo much the ſooner to diſpatch with them, that it might appear to have been no Coldneſs in foreſlowing, but Wiſdom in chooſing his time; reſolved with all ſpeed to aſſail them, and yet with that Providence, and Surety, as ſhould leave little to Venture or Fortune. And having very great and puiſſant Forces about him, the better to maſter all Events and Accidents, 1497. Accidents, he divided them into three Parts. The first was led by the Earl of Oxford in chief, assisted by the Earls of Essex and Suffolk These Noblemen were appointed, with some Cornets of Horse, and Bands of Foot, and good store of Artillery wheeling about, to put themselves beyond the Hill, where the Rebels were encamped; and to beset all the Skirts and Descents thereof, except those that lay towards London; whereby to have these Wild Beasts (as it were) in a Toil. The second Part of his Forces (which were those that were to be most in Action, and upon which he relied most for the Fortune of the Day) he did assign to be led by the Lord Chamberlain, who was appointed to set upon the Rebels in Front, from that side which is toward London. The third Part of his Forces (being likewise great and brave Forces) he retained about himself, to be ready upon all Events, to restore the Fight, or consummate the Victory; and mean while, to secure the City. And for that purpose he encamped in Person in St George's Fields, putting himself between the City, and the Rebels. But the City of London (especially at the first) upon the near encamping of the Rebels, was in great Tumult: As it useth to be with wealthy and Populous Cities (especially those, which, for Greatness and Fortune, are Queens of their Regions) who seldom see out of their Windows, or from their Towers, an Army of Enemies. But that which troubled them most, was the Conceit, that they dealt with a Rout of People, with whom there was no Composition, or Condition, or orderly treating if need were; but likely to be bent altogether upon Rapin and Spoil. And although they had heard, that the Rebels had behaved themselves quietly and modestly, by the way as they went; yet they doubted much, that would not last, but rather make them more hungry, and more in appetite, to fall upon Spoil in the end. Wherefore there was great running to and fro of People, some to the Gates, some to the Walls, some to the Water side; giving themselves Alarms, and Panick Fears continually. Nevertheless, both Tate the Lord Mayor, and Shaw and Haddon the Sheriffs, did their Parts stoutly and well, in arming and ordering the People. And the King likewise did adjoin some Captains of Experience in the Wars, to advise and assist the Citizens. But soon after, when they understood that the King had so ordered the Matter, that the Rebels must winn three Battels, before they could approach the City, and that he had put his own Person between the Rebels and them, and that the great Care was rather how to impound the Rebels, that none of them might escape, than that any doubt was made to vanquish them; they grew to be quiet and out of Fear. The rather, for the Confidence they reposed which (was not small) in the three Leaders, Oxford, Essex, and Dawbeny; all, Men famed and loved amongst the People. As for Jasper Duke of Bedford, whom the King used to employ with the first in his Wars, he was then sick, and dyed soon after.

It was the Two and twentieth of June, and a Saturday (which was the Day of the Week the King fancied) when the Battel was fought; though the King had by all the Art he could devise, given out a false Day, as if he prepared to give the Rebels Battel on the Monday following, the better to find them unprovided, and in disarray. The Lords that were appointed to circle the Hill, had some Days before planted themselves (as at the Receipt) in Places convenient. In the afternoon towards the Decline of the Day (which was done, the better to keep the Rebels in Opinion that they should not fight that Day) the Lord Dawbeny marched on towards them, and first beat some Troops of them from Detford-bridge, where they fought manfully; but being in no great number were soon driven back, and fled up to their main Army upon the Hill. The Army, at that time hearing of the Approach of the King's Forces, were putting themselves in Array, not without much Confusion. But neither had they placed upon the first high ground towards the Bridge, any Forces to second the Troops below, that kept the Bridge; neither had they brought forwards their Main Battel (which stood in Array far into the Heath) near to the Ascent of the Hill. So that the Earl with his Forces mounted the Hill, and recovered the Plain, without Resistance. The Lord Dawbeney charged them with great Fury; Insomuch, as it had like (by accident) to have brandled the Fortune of the Day. For, by inconsiderate Forwardness in fighting in the Head of his Troops, he was taken by the Rebels; but immediately rescued, and delivered. The Rebels maintained the Fight for a small time, and for their Persons shewed no want of Courage: But being ill armed, and ill led, and without Horse and Artillery, they were with no great Difficulty cut in pieces, and put to flight. And for their Three Leaders; the Lord Audley, the Black-smith, and Flammock (as, commonly the Captains of Commotions are but half-coura-ged Men) suffered themselves to be taken alive. The number slain on the Rebels part, were some † Two thousand Men; their Army amounting (as it is said) unto the Number of Sixteen thousand. The rest were (in effect) all taken; for that the Hill, as was said, was encompassed with the King's Forces round about. On the King's Part there dyed about Three hundred; most of them shot with Arrows, which were reported to be of the length of a Taylor's Yard: So strong and mighty a Bow, the Cornish Men were said to draw.

The Victory, thus obtained, the King created divers Bannerets, as well upon Black-heath, where his Lieutenant had won the Field (whither he rode in Person to perform the said Creation) as in St George's Fields, where his own Person had been encamped. And for Matter of Liberality, he did (by open Edict) give the Goods of all the Prisoners, unto those that had taken them; either to take them in Kind, or compound for them as they could. After matter of Honour and Liberality, followed matter of Severity and Execution. The Lord Audley was led from Newgate to Tower-Hill, in a Paper Coat painted with his own Arms; the Arms reversed, the Coat torn, and he at Tower-hill beheaded. † Flammock and the Black-smith were hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tiburn; The Black-smith taking Pleasure upon the Hurdle (as it seemeth by Words that he uttered) to think that he should be Famous in aftertimes. The King was once in mind to have sent down Flammock, and the Black-smith, to have been executed in Cornwall, for the more Terrour. But, being advertised, that the Country was yet unquiet and boiling, he thought better not to irritate the People further. All the rest were pardoned by Proclamation, and to take out their Pardons under Seal, as many as would. So that, more than the Blood drawn in the Field, the King did satisfy himself with the Lives of only three Offenders, for the Expiation of this great Rebellion.

It was a strange thing, to observe the Variety and Inequality of the King's Executions and Pardons. And a Man would think it, at the first, a kind of Lottery or Chance. But, looking into a Tumult in London.

The Battel of Blackheath.

1497. Ld. Dawbeny fights the Rebels.

† Stow writes there were 300 of the Rebels slain, and 1500 taken Prisoners. Hall, that there were above 2000 slain, and a vast number taken.

The number of the Rebels.

The length of the Cornish Men's Arrows.

The Lord Audley and the Cornish Rebels Executed.

† On the 24th of June.

1497. it more nearly, one ſhall find there was Reaſon for it; much more perhaps, than (after ſo long a diſtance of Time) we can now diſcern. In the Kentiſh Commotion (which was but an Handfull of Men) there were executed to the number of One hundred and fifty; and, in this ſo mighty a Rebellion but three: Whether it were, that the King put to accompt the Men that were ſlain in the Field: or that he was not willing to be ſevere in a Popular Cauſe; or that the harmleſs behaviour of this People (that came from the Weſt of England, to the Eaſt, without Miſchief almoſt, or ſpoil of the Country) did ſomewhat mollify him, and move him to Compaſſion; or laſtly, that he made a great difference between People, that did rebel upon Wantonneſs, and them that did rebel upon Want.

After the Corniſh Men were defeated, there came from Calice to the King, an honourable Ambaſſage from the French King, which had arrived at Calice a Month before, and there was ſtayed in reſpect of the Troubles; but honourably entertained and defrayed.

The King, at their firſt coming, ſent unto them, and prayed them to have Patience, till a little Smoak, that was raiſed in his Country, were over; which would ſoon be: Slighting (as his Manner was) that openly, which nevertheleſs he intended ſeriouſly.

This Ambaſſage concerned no great Affair; but only the Prolongation of Days for Payment of Monies, and ſome other Particulars of the Frontiers. And it was (indeed) but a wooing Ambaſſage; with good Reſpects to entertain the King in good Affection: But nothing was done or handled, to the Derogation of the King's late Treaty with the Italians.

The Scotch King enters England with an Army.

But, during that time that the Corniſh Men were in their March towards London, the King of Scotland (well advertiſed of all that paſſed, and knowing himſelf ſure of War from England, whenſoever thoſe Stirs were appeaſed) neglected not his Opportunity; but thinking the King had his Hands full, entred the Frontiers of England again with an Army, and beſieged the Caſtle of Norham in Perſon, with part of his Forces, ſending the reſt to Forrage the Country. But

Fox Biſhop of Durham, Provident againſt the Scots.

Fox, Biſhop of Dureſme (a wiſe Man, and one that could ſee through the Preſent, to the Future) doubting as much before, had cauſed his Caſtle of Norham to be ſtrongly fortified, and furniſhed, with all kind of Munition: And had mann'd it likewiſe, with a very great number of tall Soldiers, more than for the proportion of the Caſtle; reckoning rather upon a ſharp Aſſault, than a long Siege. And for the Country likewiſe, he had cauſed the People to withdraw their Cattel and Goods into faſt Places, that were not of eaſie approach; and ſent in Poſt to the Earl of Surrey (who was not far off in Yorkſhire) to come in diligence to the Succour. So as the Scottiſh King both failed of doing good upon the Caſtle, and his Men had but a catching Harveſt of their Spoils. And when he underſtood, that the Earl of Surrey was coming on with great Forces, he returned back into Scotland.

The Earl of Surrey enters Scotland.

The Earl finding the Caſtle freed, and the Enemy retired, purſued with all celerity into Scotland; hoping to have overtaken the Scottiſh King, and to have given him Battel; but not attaining him in time, ſat down before the Caſtle of Aton (one of the ſtrongeſt Places then eſteemed, between Barwick and Edenborough) which in a ſmall time he took. And ſoon after, the Scotiſh King retiring further into his Country, and the Weather being extraordinary foul and ſtormy, the Earl returned into England. So that the Expeditions on both parts were (in effect) but a Caſtle taken, and a Caſtle diſtreſſed; not anſwerable to the Puiſſance of the Forces, nor to the Heat of the Quarrel, nor to the Greatneſs of the Expectation. 1497.

He takes Aton Caſtle.

Amongſt theſe Troubles both Civil and External, came into England from Spain Peter Hialas, ſome call him Elias (ſurely he was the forerunner of the good Hap, that we enjoy at this Day. For, his Ambaſſage ſet the Truce between England and Scotland; the Truce drew on the Peace; the Peace the Marriage; and the Marriage the Union of the Kingdoms) a Man of great Wiſdom, and (as thoſe times were) not unlearned; ſent from Ferdinando and Iſabella King's of Spain unto the King, to treat a Marriage between Katherine their ſecond Daughter, and Prince Arthur. This Treaty was by him ſet in a very good way, and almoſt brought to Perfection. But it ſo fell out by the way, that upon ſome Couference which he had with the King touching this Buſineſs, the King (who had a great Dexterity in getting ſuddenly into the Boſome of Ambaſſadors of foreign Princes, if he liked them; Inſomuch as he would many times communicate with them of his own Affairs, yea and employ them in his Service) fell into Speech and Diſcourſe incidently, concerning the ending of the Debates and Differences with Scotland. For the King naturally did not love the barren Wars with Scotland, though he made his Profit of the Noiſe of them. And he wanted not in the Council of Scotland, thoſe that would adviſe their King to meet him at the half way, and to give over the War with England; pretending to be good Patriots, but indeed favouring the Affairs of the King. Only his heart was too great to begin with Scotland for the Motion of Peace. On the other ſide, he had met with an Ally of Ferdinando of Arragon, as fit for his Turn as could be. For after that King Ferdinando had, upon aſſured Confidence of the Marriage to ſucceed, taken upon him the Perſon of a Fraternal Allie to the King, he would not let (in a Spaniſh Gravity) to counſel the King in his own Affairs. And the King on his Part not being wanting to himſelf, but making uſe of every Man's Humours, made his Advantage of this in ſuch things as he thought either not Decent, or not Pleaſant to proceed from himſelf; putting them off as done by the Counſel of Ferdinando. Wherefore he was content that Hialas (as in a Matter moved and adviſed from Hialas himſelf) ſhould go into Scotland, to treat of a Concord between the two Kings. Hialas took it upon him: And coming to the Scottiſh King, after he had with much Art brought King James to hearken to the more ſafe and quiet Councils, wrote unto the King, that he hoped that Peace would with no great difficulty cement and cloſe, if he would ſend ſome wiſe and temperate Counſellour of his own, that might treat of the Conditions. Whereupon the King directed Biſhop Fox (who at that time was at his Caſtle of Norham) to confer with Hialas, and they both to treat with ſome Commiſſioners deputed from the Scottiſh King. The Commiſſioners on both Sides met. But after much Diſpute upon the Articles and Conditions of Peace, propounded upon either part, they could not conclude a Peace. The chief Impediment thereof was the Demand of the King to have Perkin deliver'd into his Hands, as a Reproach to all Kings, and a Perſon not protected by the Law of Nations. The King of Scotland on the other ſide peremptorily denied ſo to do; ſaying, That he (for his part) was no Competent Judge of Perkin's Title: But that he had received him as a Suppliant, protected

The Riſe of the Union of England and Scotland.

1497.

1497. tected him as a Perſon fled for Refuge, eſpouſed him with his Kinſwoman, and aided him with his Arms, upon the belief that he was a Prince; And therefore that he could not now with his Honour ſo unrip and (in a ſort) put a Lye upon all that he had ſaid and done before, as to deliver him up to his Enemies. The Biſhop likewiſe (who had certain Proud Inſtructions from the King, at the leaſt in the Front, tho' there were a pliant Clauſe at the Foot, that remitted all to the Biſhop's Diſcretion, and requir'd him by no Means to break off in ill Terms) after that he had failed to obtain the Delivery of Perkin, did move a ſecond Point of his Inſtructions; which was, that the Scottiſh King would give the King an Enterview in Perſon at Newcaſtle. But this being reported to the Scottiſh King, his Anſwer was, That he meant to treat a Peace, and not to go a begging for it. The Biſhop alſo (according to another Article of his Inſtructions) demanded Reſtitution of the Spoils taken by the Scottiſh, or Damages for the ſame. But the Scottiſh Commiſſioners anſwer'd, That that was but as Water ſpilt upon the Ground, which could not be gotten up again; and that the King's People were better able to bear the Loſs, than their Maſter to repair it. But in the end (as Perſons capable of Reaſon) on both Sides they made rather a kind of Receſs, than a Breach of Treaty, and concluded upon a Truce for ſome Months following. But the King of Scotland, tho' he would not formally retract his Judgment of Perkin, wherein he had engaged himſelf ſo far; yet in his private Opinion, upon often Speech with the Engliſhmen, and divers other Advertiſements, began to ſuſpect him for a Counterfeit. Wherefore in a Noble faſhion he call'd him unto him, and recounted the Benefits and Favours that he had done him, in making him his Ally, and in provoking a Mighty and Opulent King by an Offenſive War in his Quarrel, for the ſpace of two Years together. Nay more, that he had refuſed an Honourable Peace, whereof he had a fair Offer, if he would have deliver'd him; and that to keep his Promiſe with him, he had deeply offended both his Nobles and People, whom he might not hold in any long Diſcontent. And therefore requir'd him to think of his own Fortunes, and to chooſe out ſome fitter place for his Exile: Telling him withal, that he could not ſay, but the Engliſh had forſaken him before the Scottiſh; for that upon two ſeveral Trials, none had declar'd themſelves on his Side. But nevertheleſs he would make good what he ſaid to him at his firſt Receiving; which was, That he ſhould not repent him, for putting himſelf into his hands; For that he would not caſt him off, but help him with Shipping and means to Tranſport him where he ſhould Deſire. Perkin, not deſcending at all from his Stage-like Greatneſs, anſwer'd the King in few words, That he ſaw his time was not yet come; But whatſoever his Fortunes were, he ſhould both think and ſpeak Honour of the King. Taking his leave, he would not think on Flanders, doubting it was but hollow Ground for him, ſince the Treaty of the Arch Duke concluded the Year before; but took his Lady, and ſuch Followers as would not leave him, and ſail'd over into Ireland (f).

This Twelfth year of the King, a little before this time, Pope Alexander (who loved beſt thoſe Princes that were furtheſt off, and with whom he had leaſt to do) taking very thankfully the King's late entrance into League, for the Defence of Italy, did remunerate him with an Hallow'd Sword, and Cap of Maintenance ſent by his Nuncio. Pope Innocent had done the like, but it was not received in that Glory. For the King appointed the Mayor and his Brethren to meet the Pope's Orator at London-Bridge, and all the Streets between the Bridge-foot and the Palace of Paul's (where the King then lay) were garniſh'd with the Citizens, ſtanding in their Liveries. And the Morrow after (being All-Hallow's Day) the King, attended with many of his Prelates, Nobles, and Principal Courtiers, went in Proceſſion to Paul's, and the Cap and Sword were born before him. And after the Proceſſion, the King himſelf remaining ſeated in the Quire, the Lord Archbiſhop upon the Greece of the Quire, made a long Oration, ſetting forth the Greatneſs and Eminency of that Honour, which the Pope (in theſe Ornaments and Enſigns of Benediction) had done the King; and how rarely, and upon what high Deſerts they uſed to be beſtow'd. And then recited the King's principal Acts and Merits, which had made him appear worthy in the Eyes of his Holineſs of this great Honour.

1497. The Pope preſents K. Henry with a conſecrated Sword.

All this while the Rebellion of Cornwall (whereof we have ſpoken) ſeem'd to have no relation to Perkin; ſave that perhaps Perkin's Proclamation had ſtricken upon the right Vein, in promiſing to lay down Exactions and Payments, and ſo had made them now and then have a Kind thought on Perkin. But now theſe Bubbles by much ſtirring began to meet, as they uſe to do upon the top of Water. The King's Lenity (by that time the Corniſh Rebels, who were taken and pardon'd, and (as it was ſaid) many of them ſold by them that had taken them, for Twelve-Pence and Two Shillings apiece, were come down into their Country) had rather imbolden'd them, than reclaim'd them. Inſomuch, as they ſtuck not to ſay to their Neighbours and Country-men, That the King did well to Pardon them, for that he knew he ſhould leave few Subjects in England, if he hang'd all that were of their Mind: And began whetting and inciting one another to renew the Commotion. Some of the ſubtileſt of them, hearing of Perkins being in Ireland, found means to ſend to him to let him know, that if he would come over to them, they would ſerve him.

When Perkin heard this News, he began to take heart again, and advis'd upon it with his Council which were principally three; Herne a Mercer, that fled for Debt; Skelton a Taylor, and Aſtley a Scrivener: for Secretary Frion was gone. Theſe told him that he was mightily overſeen, both when he went into Kent, and when he went into Scotland: The one being a Place ſo near London, and under the King's Noſe; and the other, a Nation ſo diſtaſted with the People of England, that if they had lov'd him never ſo well, yet they would never have taken his part in that Company. But if he had been ſo happy as to have been in Cornwall at the firſt when the People began to take Arms there, he had been crown'd at Weſtminſter before this time. For, theſe Kings (as he had now Experience) would ſell poor Princes for Shoes: But he muſt rely wholly upon People; and therefore adviſed him to Sail over with all poſſible ſpeed into Cornwall. Which, accordingly he did; having (f) He arriv'd at Cork the 26th of July; where ſome out of Affection, others for Deſire of Change flock'd to him; among whom, 'tis ſaid, was Maurice Earl of Deſmond. The Mayor and Citizens of Waterford notify'd his Arrival to the King, and as they had bravely defended themſelves againſt Simnel's Adherents, ſo they did the ſame now againſt Perkins; for which they were taken into the King's eſpecial Favour. Sir J. W. Cap. XIII.

1497. ving in his Company four ſmall Barks, with ſome Sixſcore or Sevenſcore fighting Men. (g) He arriv'd in September at Whitſand-Bay, and forthwith came to Bodmin, the Blackſmith's Town: where there aſſembled unto him to the number of Three Thouſand Men of the rude People. There he ſet forth a New Proclamation, ſtroaking the People with fair Promiſes, and humouring them with Invectives againſt the King and his Government. And, as it fareth with Smoke, that never loſeth it ſelf till it be at the higheſt; he did now before his end raiſe his Stile, intituling himſelf no more Richard Duke of York, but Richard the IVth, King of England. His Council adviſed him by all means, to make himſelf Maſter of ſome good walled Town; as well to make his Men find the Sweetneſs of rich Spoils, and to allure to him all looſe and loſt People, by like hopes of Booty; as to be a ſure Retreat to his Forces, in caſe they ſhould have any ill Day, or unlucky Chance in the Field. Wherefore they took heart to them, and went on, and beſieged the City of Exeter, the principal Town for Strength and Wealth in thoſe Parts.

When they were come before Exeter, they forbare to uſe any Force at the firſt; but made continual Shouts and Out-cries, to terrifie the Inhabitants. They did likewiſe in divers places Call and Talk to them from under the Walls, to joyn with them, and be of their Party; telling them, That the King would make them another London, if they would be the firſt Town that ſhould Acknowledge him. But they had not the Wit to ſend to them, in any orderly faſhion, Agents or Choſen Men to tempt them, and to treat with them. The Citizens on their part ſhew'd themſelves Stout and Loyal Subjects. Neither was there ſo much as any Tumult or Diviſion amongſt them: but all prepar'd themſelves for a Valiant Defence, and making good the Town. For well they ſaw that the Rebels were of no ſuch Number or Power, that they needed to fear them as yet: and well they hoped, that before their Numbers encreaſed, the King's Succours would come in. And, howſoever, they thought it the extremeſt of Evils, to put themſelves at the Mercy of thoſe hungry and diſorderly People. Wherefore ſetting all things in good Order within the Town, they nevertheleſs let down with Cords, from ſeveral parts of the Walls privily, ſeveral Meſſengers (that, if one came to Miſchance, another might paſs on) which ſhould advertiſe the King of the State of the Town, and implore his Aid. Perkin alſo doubted that Succours would come ere long; and therefore reſolved to uſe his utmoſt Force to aſſault the Town: And for that purpoſe, having mounted Scaling-Ladders in divers places upon the Walls, made at the ſame inſtant an Attempt to force one of the Gates: But having no Artillery nor Engines, and finding that he could do no good by ramming with Logs of Timber, nor by the uſe of Iron Bars and Iron Crows, and ſuch other means at hand, he had no way left him but to ſet one of the Gates on Fire: which he did. But the Citizens, well perceiving the Danger, before the Gate could be fully conſum'd, block'd up the Gate, and ſome ſpace about it on the inſide with Faggots and other Fuel: which they likewiſe ſet on fire, and ſo repuls'd Fire with Fire: And, in the mean time, raiſed up Rampiers of Earth, and caſt up deep Trenches, to ſerve inſtead of Wall and Gate. And for the Eſcalades, they had ſo bad Succeſs, as the Rebels were driven from the Walls, with the Loſs of Two hundred Men. 1497.

Exeter beſieg'd by Perkin.

The Loyalty of the Citizens.

The King when he heard of Perkin's Siege of Exeter, made Sport with it, and ſaid to them that were about him, That the King of Rake-hells was Landed in the Weſt, and that he hoped now to have the honour to ſee him, which he could never yet do. And it appear'd plainly to thoſe that were about the King, that he was indeed much joy'd with the News of Perkin's being in Engliſh Ground, where he could have no Retreat by Land; thinking now that he ſhould be cured of thoſe privy Stitches which he had long had about his Heart, and had ſometimes broken his Sleeps in the mid'ſt of all his Felicity. And to ſet all Mens Hearts on fire, he did by all poſſible means let it appear, that thoſe, who ſhould now do him Service to make an end of theſe Troubles, ſhould be no leſs accepted of him, than he that came upon the Eleventh Hour and had the whole Wages of the Day. Therefore now (like the end of a Play) a great Number came upon the Stage at once. He ſent the Lord Chamberlain and the Lord Brook and Sir Rice ap Thomas, with expedite Forces to ſpeed to Exeter, to the Reſcue of the Town, and to ſpread the Fame of his own following in Perſon with a Royal Army. The Earl of Devonſhire and his Son, with the Caroes, and the Fulfordes, and other principal Perſons of Devonſhire (uncall'd from the Court, but hearing that the King's Heart was ſo much bent upon this Service) made haſt with Troops, that they had raiſed, to be the firſt that ſhould ſuccour the City of Exeter, and prevent the King's Succours. The Duke of Buckingham likewiſe, with many Brave Gentlemen, put themſelves in Arms, not ſtaying either the King's or the Lord Chamberlain's coming on, but making a Body of Forces of themſelves, the more to indear their Merit; ſignifying to the King their Readineſs, and deſiring to know his Pleaſure. So that according to the Proverb, In the coming down, every Saint did help. 1497.

K. Henry calls Perkin King of Rake-bells.

Perkin hearing this Thunder of Arms and Preparations againſt him from ſo many Parts, raiſed his Siege, and march'd to Taunton; beginning already to Squint one Eye upon the Crown, and another upon the Sanctuary: Tho' the Corniſhmen were become, like Metal often fir'd and quench'd, churliſh, and that would ſooner break than bow; Swearing and Vowing not to leave him, till the uttermoſt drop of their Blood were ſpilt. He was at his riſing from Exeter between Six and Seven thouſand Strong, many having come unto him after he was ſet before Exeter, upon Fame of ſo great an Enterpriſe, and to partake of the Spoil; Tho' upon the raiſing of his Siege, ſome did ſlip away. When he was come near Taunton, he diſſembled all Fear, and ſeemed all the Day to uſe Diligence in preparing all things ready to fight. But about Midnight, he fled with Threeſcore Horſe to Bewley in the New-Forreſt, where he and divers of his Company regiſtred themſelves Sanctuary-Men, leaving his Corniſh-Men to the four Winds: But yet thereby eaſing them of their Vow, and uſing his wonted Compaſſion, Not to be by when his Subjects blood ſhould be ſpilt. The King, as ſoon as he heard of Perkin's Flight, ſent preſently Five hundred Horſe to purſue and apprehend him, before he ſhould get either to the Sea, or to that ſame little Iſland, call'd a Sanctuary. But they came too late for the latter of theſe. Therefore

In Hampſhire.

(g) His Wife came alſo with him.

all

1497. all they could do, was to beſet the Sanctuary, and to maintain a ſtrong Watch about it, till the King's Pleaſure were further known. As for the reſt of the Rebels, they (being deſtituted of their Head) without Stroke ſtricken, ſubmitted themſelves unto the King's Mercy. And the King, who commonly drew Blood (as Phyſicians do) rather to ſave Life than to ſpill it, and was never Cruel when he was Secure; now he ſaw the Danger was paſt, pardon'd them all in the end, except ſome few deſperate Perſons which he reſerv'd to be Executed, the better to ſet off his Mercy towards the reſt. There were alſo ſent with all ſpeed ſome Horſe to St. Michael's Mount in Cornwall, where the Lady Katherine Gordon was left by her Husband, whom in all Fortunes ſhe entirely loved; adding the Vertues of a Wife to the Vertues of her Sex. The King ſent in the greater Diligence, not knowing whether ſhe might be with Child; whereby the Buſineſs would not have ended in Perkin's Perſon. When ſhe was brought to the King, it was commonly ſaid, that the King receiv'd her not only with Compaſſion, but with Affection; Pity giving more Impreſſion to her excellent Beauty. Wherefore comforting her (to ſerve as well his Eye as his Fame) he ſent her to his Queen to remain with her; giving her very Honourable Allowance for the Support of her Eſtate: which ſhe enjoy'd both during the King's Life and many Years after. The Name of the White-Roſe (which had been given to her Husband's Falſe Title) was continued in common Speech to her true Beauty.

The Lady Katherine Gordon, Perkin's Wife royally entertain'd by the King.

The King went forwards on his Journey, and made a Joyful entrance into Exeter, where he gave the Citizens great Commendations and Thanks; and taking the Sword he wore, from his Side, he gave it to the Mayor, and commanded it ſhould be ever after carried before him. There alſo he cauſed to be executed ſome of the Ring-leaders of the Corniſh-men, in Sacrifice to the Citizens, whom they had put in fear, and Trouble. At Exeter the King conſulted with his Council, whether he ſhould offer Life to Perkin if he would quit the Sanctuary, and voluntarily ſubmit himſelf. The Council were divided in Opinion. Some adviſed the King to take him out of Sanctuary perforce, and to put him to Death, as in a Caſe of Neceſſity, which in it ſelf diſpenſeth with conſecrated Places and Things. Wherein they doubted not alſo, but the King ſhould find the Pope tractable to ratify his Deed, either by Declaration, or (at leaſt) by Indulgence. Others were of Opinion (ſince all was now ſafe, and no further Hurt could be done) that it was not worth the expoſing of the King to new Scandal and Envy. A third ſort fell upon the Opinion that it was not poſſible for the King ever, either to ſatisfie the World well touching the Impoſture, or to learn out the bottom of the Conſpiracy, except by Promiſe of Life and Pardon, and other fair Means, he ſhould get Perkin into his Hands. But they did all in their Preambles much bemoan the King's Caſe, with a kind of Indignation at his Fortune, That a Prince of his High Wiſdom and Vertue, ſhould have been ſo long, and ſo oft exercis'd and vex'd with Idols. But the King ſaid, that it was the Vexation of God Almighty himſelf, to be vexed with Idols, and therefore that that was not to trouble any of his Friends. And that for himſelf, he always deſpiſed them; but was griev'd that they had put his People to ſuch Trouble and Miſery. But (in Concluſion) he lean'd to the third Opinion, and ſo ſent ſome to deal with Perkin. Who ſeeing himſelf Priſoner, and deſtitute of all Hopes, having try'd Princes and People, Great and Small, and found all either Falſe, Faint, or Unfortunate, did gladly accept of the Condition. The King did alſo (while he was at Exeter) appoint the Lord Darcy and others, Commiſſioners, for the Fining of all ſuch as were of any Value, and had any Hand or partaking in the Aid or Comfort of Perkin or the Corniſh-men, either in the Field or in the Flight.

K. Henry gives the Mayor of Exeter the Sword he wore to be carried before Him.

Divers Opinions of what was to be done with Perkin.

1498.

The Lord Darcy, Sir Aenias Paulet, and Dr. Sherburne.

These Commiſſioners proceeded with ſuch Strictneſs and Severity, as did much obſcure the King's Mercy in ſparing of Blood, with the bleeding of ſo much Treaſure. Perkin was brought unto the King's Court, but not to the King's Preſence; tho' the King (to ſatisfie his Curioſity) ſaw him ſometimes out of a Window, or in Paſſage. He was in ſhew at Liberty, but guarded with all Care and Watch that was poſſible, and willed to follow the King to London. But from his firſt Appearance upon the Stage, in his new Perſon of a Sycophant or Juggler, inſtead of his former Perſon of a Prince, all Men may think how he was expoſed to the Deriſion, not only of the Courtiers, but alſo of the Common People, who flock'd about him as he went along; that one might know afar off where the Owl was by the Flight of Birds. Some Mocking, ſome Wondring, ſome Curſing, ſome prying and picking Matter out of his Countenance and Geſture to Talk of. So that the falſe Honour and Reſpects which he had ſo long enjoy'd, was plentifully repay'd in Scorn and Contempt. As ſoon as he was come to London, the King gave alſo the City the Solace of this May-Game. For he was conveigh'd leiſurely on Horſeback (but not in any Ignominious faſhion) through Cheapſide and Cornwall to the Tower; and from thence back again unto Weſtminſter, with the Churm of a thouſand Taunts and Reproaches. But to amend the Show, there follow'd a little diſtance of Perkin, an inward Councellor of his, one that had been Serjeant-Farrier to the King. This Fellow when Perkin took Sanctuary, choſe rather to take an Holy-Habit than an Holy-Place, and clad himſelf like an Hermit, and in that Weed wander'd about the Country till he was diſcover'd and taken. But this Man was bound Hand and Foot upon the Horſe, and came not back with Perkin, but was left at the Tower, and within few Days after Executed. Soon after, now that Perkin could tell better what himſelf was, he was diligently Examined; and after his Confeſſion taken, an Extract was made of ſuch Parts of them, as were thought fit to be divulged, which was Printed and diſpers'd Abroad. Wherein the King did himſelf no Right. For as there was a laboured Tale of Particulars, of Perkin's Father, and Mother, and Grandſire, and Grandmother, and Uncles, and Coſens, by Names and Sirnames, and from what places he Travell'd up and down; ſo there was little or nothing to purpoſe of any thing concerning his Deſigns, or any Practices that had been held with him; nor the Dutcheſs of Burgundy her ſelf (that all the World did take knowledge of, as the Perſon that had put Life and Being into the whole Buſineſs) ſo much as nam'd or pointed at. So that Men miſſing of that they look'd for, look'd about for they knew not what, and were in more doubt than before. But the King choſe rather not to ſatisfie, than to kindle Coals. At that time alſo it did not appear by any new Examinations or Commitments, that any other Perſon of Quality was Diſcover'd or Appeach'd, tho' the King's Cloſeneſs made that a Doubt-Dormant.

Perkin Submits, and is brought to the King's Court.

About this time, a great Fire in the Night-time ſuddenly began at the King's Palace of Sheen, near unto the King's own Lodgings, whereby

The Palace at Richmond Built.

1498. by a great part of the Building was consumed, with much costly Houshold-stuff; which gave the King occasion of Building from the Ground that fine Pile of Richmond, which is now standing.

Sebastian Gabot's Voyage for Discoveries.

Somewhat before this time also there fell out a memorable Accident: There was one Sebastian Gabato, a Venetian, dwelling in Bristow, a Man seen and expert in Cosmography and Navigation. This Man seeing the Success, and emulating perhaps the Enterprize of Christopherus Columbus in that fortunate Discovery towards the Southwest, which had been by him made some Six Years before; conceited with himself, that Lands might likewise be discover'd towards the Northwest. And surely it may be he had more firm and pregnant Conjectures of it, than Columbus had of this at the first. For the two great Islands of the Old and New World, being (in the shape and making of them) broad towards the North, and pointed towards the South; it is likely, that the Discovery first began where the Lands did neerest meet. And there had been before that time a Discovery of some Lands, which they took to be Islands, and were indeed the Continent of America towards the Northwest. And it may be, that some Relation of this Nature coming afterwards to the Knowledge of Columbus, and by him suppress'd, (desirous rather to make his Enterprize the Child of his Science and Fortune, than the Follower of a former Discovery) did give him better assurance, that all was not Sea, from the West of Europe and Africk unto Asia, than either Seneca's Prophecy, or Plato's Antiquities, or the Nature of the Tides, and Land-winds, and the like, which were the Conjectures that were given out, whereupon he should have rely'd. Tho' I am not ignorant that it was likewise laid unto the casual and wind-beaten Discovery (a little before) of a Spanish Pilot, who died in the House of Columbus. But this Gabato bearing the King in hand, that he would find out an Island endued with rich Commodities, procur'd him to Man and Victual a Ship at Bristol, for the Discovery of that Island; with whom ventur'd also three small Ships of London-Merchants, fraught with some gross and slight Wares, fit for Commerce with barbarous People. He sail'd (as he affirm'd at his Return, and made a Card thereof) very far Westwards, with a Quarter of the North, on the North-side of Tierra de Labrador, until he came to the Latitude of Sixty seven Degrees and an half, finding the Seas still open. It is certain also, that the King's Fortune had a tender of that great Empire of the West-Indies. Neither was it a Refusal on the King's part, but a Delay by Accident, that put by so great an Acquest. For Christopherus Columbus refused by the King of Portugal (who would not embrace at once both East and West) imploy'd his Brother Bartholomeus Columbus unto King Henry, to Negociate for his Discovery. And it so fortun'd, that he was taken by Pirats at Sea; by which accidental Impediment he was long ere he came to the King. So long, that before he had obtain'd a Capitulation with the King for his Brother; the Enterprize by him was Atchieved, and so the West-Indies by Providence were then reserv'd for the Crown of Castilia. Yet this sharpen'd the King so, that not only in this Voyage, but again in the 16th Year of his Reign, and likewise in the 18th thereof, he granted forth new Commissions, for the Discovery and Investing of unknown Lands.

Christopher and Bartholomew Columbus, invite the King to a Discovery of the West-Indies.

An Accident Trivial in its self, great in Effect.

In this Fourteenth Year also (by God's wonderful Providence, that boweth things unto his Will, and hangeth great Weights upon small Wyers) there fell out a trifling and untoward Accident, that drew on great and happy Effects. 1498. During the Truce with Scotland, there were certain Scottish Young Gentlemen that came into Norham Town, and there made merry with some of the English of the Town. And having little to do, went sometimes forth, and would stand looking upon the Castle. Some of the Garrison of the Castle, observing this their doing twice or thrice, and having not their Minds purg'd of the late ill Blood of Hostility, either suspected them, or quarrelled them for Spies. Whereupon they fell at ill Words, and from Words to Blows; so that many were wounded of either Side, and the Scottish-men (being Strangers in the Town) had the worst. In so much as some of them were Slain, and the rest made haste Home. The Matter being complain'd on, and often debated before the Wardens of the Marches of both Sides, and no good Order taken, the King of Scotland took it to himself, and being much kindled, sent a Herald to the King to make Protestation, That if Reparation were not done, according to the Conditions of the Truce, his King did denounce War. The King (who had often try'd Fortune, and was inclin'd to Peace) made Answer, 'That what had been done, was 'utterly against his Will, and without his Privity. 'But if the Garrison-Souldiers had been in fault, 'he would see them punish'd, and the Truce in 'all Points to be preserv'd. But this Answer seem'd to the Scottish King but a Delay, to make the Complaint breath out with time; and therefore it did rather exasperate him, than satisfie him. Bishop Fox, understanding from the King, that the Scottish King was still Discontent and Impatient, being troubled that the Occasion of breaking of the Truce should grow from his Men, sent many humble and deprecatory Letters to the Scottish King to appease him. Whereupon King James, mollify'd by the Bishop's Submiss and Eloquent Letters, wrote back unto him, 'That tho' he were in part moved by his Let-'ters, yet he should not be fully satisfied, except 'he spake with him; as well about the com-'pounding of the present Differences, as about 'other Matters, that might concern the good 'of both Kingdoms. The Bishop advising first with the King, took his Journey for Scotland. The meeting was at Melrosse, an Abbey of the Cestercians, where the King then abode. The King first roundly utter'd unto the Bishop his Offence conceiv'd for the insolent Breach of Truce, by his Men of Norham-Castle. Whereunto Bishop Fox made such an humble and smooth Answer, as it was like Oyl into the Wound, whereby it began to heal. And this was done in the Presence of the King and his Council. After, the King spake with the Bishop apart, and open'd himself unto him, saying, 'That 'these temporary Truces and Peaces were soon 'made, and soon broken: But that he desir'd a 'straiter Amity with the King of England, discovering his Mind; That if the King would give him in Marriage the Lady Margaret, his Eldest Daughter, that indeed might be a Knot indissoluble. That he knew well what Place and Authority the Bishop deservedly had with his Master. Therefore, if he would take the Business to heart, and deal in it effectually, he doubted not but it would succeed well. The Bishop answer'd soberly, 'That he thought him-'self rather happy, than worthy, to be an In-'strument in such a Matter; but would do his 'best Endeavour. Wherefore the Bishop returning to the King, and giving Account what had passed, and finding the King more than well-disposed in it, gave the King Advice; First, to

The Princess Margaret desir'd in Marriage by the Scots King.

1499. proceed

1499. proceed to a Concluſion of Peace, and then to go on with the Treaty of Marriage, by degrees. Hereupon a Peace was concluded, which was publiſhed a little before Chriſtmas, in the Fourteenth Year of the King's Reign, to continue for both the Kings Lives, and the Over-liver of them, and a year after. In this Peace there was an Article contained, that no Engliſh Man ſhould enter into Scotland, and no Scottiſh Man into England, without Letters Commendatory from the Kings of either Nation. This at the firſt Sight might ſeem a Means to continue a Strangeneſs between the Nations; but it was done, to lock in the Borderers.

The Kings third Son Edmund is born and dyes.

This Year there was alſo born to the King a third Son, who was Chriſtened by the Name of Edmund, and ſhortly after dyed. And much about the ſame time came News of the Death of Charles the French King; For whom there were celebrated Solemn and Princely Obſequies.

It was not long, but Perkin (who was made of Quick-ſilver, which is hard to hold or impriſon) began to ſtir. For deceiving his Keepers, he took him to his Heels, and made ſpeed to the Sea Coaſts. But preſently all Corners were laid for him, and ſuch diligent Purſuit and Search made, as he was fain to turn back, and get him to the Houſe of Bethleem, called the Priory of Shyne, (which had the priviledge of Sanctuary) and put himſelf into the Hands of the Prior of that Monaſtery. The Prior was thought an Holy Man, and much reverenced in thoſe Days. He came to the King, and beſought the King for Perkin's Life only; leaving him otherwiſe to the King's Diſcretion. Many about the King were again more hot than ever, to have the King to take him forth, and hang him. But the King (that had an high Stomack, and could not hate any that he deſpiſed) bid, Take him forth, and ſet the Knave in the Stocks. And ſo promiſing the Prior his Life, he cauſed him to be brought forth. And within two or three Days after, * upon a Scaffold, ſet up in the Palace Court at Weſtminſter, he was Fettered and ſet in the Stocks, for the whole Day. And the next Day after, the like was done by him at the Croſs in Cheap-ſide, and in both Places he read his Confeſſion, of which we made mention before; and was from Cheap-ſide, conveyed and laid up in the Tower. Notwithſtanding all this, the King was (as was partly touch'd before) grown to be ſuch a Partner with Fortune, as no Body could tell what Actions the one, and what the other owned. For it was believed generally, that Perkin was betrayed, and that this Eſcape was not without the King's Privity, who had him all the time of his Flight in a Line; and that the King did this to pick a Quarrel with him to put him to Death, and to be rid of him at once. But this is not probable. For that the ſame Inſtruments who obſerved him in his Flight, might have kept him from getting into Sanctuary.

Perkin is put in the Stocks.

* On the 15*th* of June.

But it was ordained, that this Winding Ivy of a Plantagenet, ſhould kill the true Tree it ſelf. For Perkin, after he had been a while in the Tower, began to inſinuate himſelf into the Favour and kindneſs of his Keepers, Servants to the Lieutenant of the Tower, Sir John Digby, being four in Number; Strangways, Blewet, Aſtwood, and Long-Roger. Theſe Varlets, with Mountains of Promiſes, he ſought to corrupt, to obtain his Eſcape. But knowing well, that his own Fortunes were made ſo contemptible, as he could feed no Man's Hopes (and by hopes he muſt Work, for Rewards he had none) he had contrived with himſelf a vaſt and Tragical Plot; which was, to draw into his Company Edward Plantagenet Earl of Warwick, then Priſoner in the Tower; whom the weary Life of a long Impriſonment, and the often and renewing Fears of being put to Death, had ſoftned to take any impreſſion of Counſel for his Liberty. This young Prince he thought theſe Servants would look upon, though not upon himſelf. And therefore after that by ſome Meſſage by one or two of them, he had taſted of the Earl's Conſent; it was agreed, that theſe four ſhould murder their Maſter the Lieutenant, ſecretly in the Night, and make their beſt of ſuch Money and portable Goods of his, as they ſhould find ready at Hand, and get the Keys of the Tower, and preſently let forth Perkin and the Earl. But this Conſpiracy was revealed in time, before it could be executed. And in this again the Opinion of the King's great Wiſdom did ſurcharge him with a Siniſter Fame, that Perkin was but his Bait, to entrap the Earl of Warwick. And in the very inſtant while this Conſpiracy was in working (as if that alſo had been the King's induſtry) it was fatal, that there ſhould break forth a Counterfeit Earl of Warwick, a Cordwainers Son, whoſe Name was * Ralph Wilford; a young Man, taught and ſet on by an Auguſtine Frier, called Patriarck. They both from the parts of Suffolk, came forwards into Kent, where they did not only privily and underhand give out, that this Wilford was the true Earl of Warwick, but alſo the Frier finding ſome light Credence in the People, took the Boldneſs in the Pulpit to declare as much, and to incite the People to come in to his Aid. Whereupon they were both preſently apprehended, and the young Fellow executed, * and the Frier condemned to perpetual Impriſonment. This alſo happening ſo opportunely, to repreſent the danger to the King's Eſtate, from the Earl of Warwick, and thereby to colour the King's Severity that followed; together with the Madneſs of the Frier, ſo vainly and deſperately to divulge a Treaſon, before it had gotten any manner of Strength; and the ſaving of the Frier's Life, which nevertheleſs was (indeed) but the Priviledge of his Order; and the Pity in the common People (which if it run in a ſtrong Stream, doth ever caſt up Scandal and Envy) made it generally rather talked, than believed, that all was but the King's device. But howſoever it were, hereupon Perkin (that had offended againſt Grace now the third Time) was at the laſt proceeded with, and by Commiſſioners of Oyer and Determiner, arraigned at Weſtminſter, * upon divers Treaſons committed and perpetrated after his coming on Land within this Kingdom (for ſo the Judges adviſed, for that he was a Forreigner) and condemned, and a few days after executed at Tyburn. Where he did again openly read his Confeſſion, and take it upon his Death to be true. This was the end of this little Cockatrice of a King, that was able to deſtroy thoſe that did not eſpy him firſt. It was one of the longeſt Plays of that kind, that hath been in Memory; and might perhaps have had another End, if he had not met with a King both Wiſe, Stout, and Fortunate.

A Counterfeit Earl of Warwick.

* A Shoemakers Son of London.

Hanged.

* On Shrove-Tueſday.

* On the 16*th* of November.

Perkin Warbeck hang'd at Tyburn.

As for Perkin's three Counſellors, they had regiſtred themſelves Sanctuary-Men when their Maſter did. And whether upon Pardon obtained, or continuance within the Priviledge, they came not to be proceeded with.

1499. John Water. The Mayor of Cork hanged.

There was executed with Perkin the Mayor of Cork, and his Son (b), who had been principal Abettors of his Treasons. And soon after were likewise condemned eight other Persons, about the Tower-Conspiracy, whereof four were the Lieutenant's Men. But of those Eight but two were executed. And immediately after * was arraigned before the Earl of Oxford (then for the time High Steward of England) the poor Prince the Earl of Warwick; not for the Attempt to escape simply (for that was not acted; And besides, the Imprisonment not being for Treason, the Escape by Law could not be Treason) But for Conspiring with Perkin to raise Sedition, and to destroy the King. And the Earl confessing the Inditement had Judgment, and was shortly after * beheaded on Tower-hill.

* The 21st of Novem.

* On the 28th of Novemb. Earl of Warwick executed.

This was also the end not only of this Noble and Commiserable Person Edward the Earl of Warwick eldest Son to the Duke of Clarence, but likewise of the Line Male of the Plantagenets, which had flourished in great Royalty and Renown, from the time of the Famous King of England King Henry the Second. Howbeit it was a Race often dipped in their own Blood. It hath remained since only transplanted into other Names, as well of the Imperial Line, as of other Noble Houses. But it was neither Guilt of Crime, nor Reason of State, that could quench the Envy that was upon the King for this Execution. So that he thought good to export it out of the Land, and to lay it upon his new Allie Ferdinando King of Spain. For these two King's understanding one another at half a Word, so it was that there were Letters shewed out of Spain, whereby in the Passages concerning the Treaty of the Marriage, Ferdinando had written to the King in plain Terms, that he saw no Assurance of his Succession, as long as the Earl of Warwick lived; and that he was loth to send his Daughter to Troubles and Dangers. But hereby, as the King did in some part remove the Envy from himself; so he did not observe, that he did withall bring a kind of Malediction and Infausting upon the Marriage, as an ill Prognostick. Which in Event so far proved true, as both Prince Arthur enjoyed a very small Time after the Marriage, and the Lady Katherine, her self (a sad and a Religious Woman) long after, when King Henry the eight his Resolution of a Divorce from her was first made known to her, used some Words; That she had not offended: but it was a Judgment of God, for that her former Marriage was made in Blood; meaning that of the Earl of Warwick.

The King hated for it.

Blood not unrevenged.

A great Plague.

This fifteenth Year of the King there was a great Plague, both in London and in divers parts of the Kingdom. Wherefore the King after often Change of Places (whether to avoid the danger of the Sickness, or to give occasion of an Enterview with the Arch-Duke, or both) sail'd over || with his Queen to Calice. Upon his coming thither, the Arch-Duke sent an Honourable Ambassage unto him, as well to welcome him into those Parts, as to let him know, that (if it pleased him) he would come and do him Reverence. But it was said withal; That the King might be pleased to appoint some Place, that were out of any Walled Town or Fortress, for that he had denied the same upon like Occasion to the French King. And though he said, he made a great Difference between the two Kings, yet he would be loth to give a President, that might make it after to be expected at his Hands, by another whom he trusted less. The King accepted of the Courtesie, and admitted of his Excuse, and appointed the Place to be at St. Peter's Church without Calice. But withal he did visit the Arch-Duke with Ambassadors sent from himself, which were the Lord Saint John, and the Secretary; unto whom the Arch-Duke did the Honour, as (going to Mass at Saint Omers) to set the Lord Saint John on his right Hand, and the Secretary on his left, and so to ride between them to Church. The Day appointed for the || Enterview, the King went on Horse-back some distance from Saint Peter's Church, to receive the Arch-Duke. And upon their approaching, the Arch-Duke made haste to light, and offered to hold the King's Stirrop at his allighting; which the King would not permit, but descending from Hoseback, they embraced with great Affection, and withdrawing into the Church to a Place prepared, they had long Conference, not only upon the Confirmation of former Treaties, and the freeing of Commerce, but upon Cross Marriages, to be had between the Duke of York the King's second Son, and the Arch-Duke's Daughter; and again between Charles the Arch-Duke's Son and Heir, and Mary the King's second Daughter. But these Blossoms of unripe Marriages, were but Friendly wishes, and the Airs of loving Entertainment; though one of them came afterwards to conclusion in Treaty, though not in Effect. But during the time that the two Princes conversed and communed together in the Suburbs of Calice, the Demonstrations on both sides were passing hearty and Affectionate, especially on the part of the Arch-Duke. Who (besides that he was a Prince of an excellent good Nature) being conscious to himself, how dryly the King had been used by his Counsel in the matter of Perkin, did strive by all means to recover it in the King's Affection And having also his Ears continually beaten with the Counsels of his Father and Father-in-Law, who (in respect of their jealous hatred against the French King) did always advise the Arch-Duke to anchor himself upon the Amity of King Henry of England; was glad upon this Occasion, to put in Ure and Practice their Precepts, calling the King Patron, and Father, and Protector, (These very Words the King repeats; when he certified of the loving Behaviour of the Archduke to the City) and what else he could devise, to express his Love and observance to the King. There came also to the King the Governour of Picardy, and the Bailiff of Amiens, sent from Lewis the French King to do him Honour, and to give him Knowledge of his Victory and winning of the Dutchy of Milan. It seemeth the King was well pleased with the Honours he received from those Parts, while he was at Calice. For he did himself certify all the News and Occurences of them in every particular, from Calice, to the Mayor and Aldermen of London, which (no doubt) made no small Talk in the City. For the King, though he could not entertain the good Will of the Citizens, as Edward the fourth did; yet by Affability and other Princely Graces, did ever make very much of them, and apply himself to them.

1500. Enterview between the King and Arch-duke.

|| Whitsun Tuesday.

The Kings Affability and kindness to the Citizens of London.

This Year also died John Morton, Archbishop of Canterbury, Chancellor of England, and Cardinal. He was a wise Man, and an Eloquent, but in his nature harsh, and haughty; much accepted by the Arch-Bishop Morton dyed in the Year 1500 See Hol. p. 788.

Cardinal Morton's Death and Character.

|| In the beginning of May.

(b) As for Philip John Water's Son he was afterwards Pardoned by the King's Clemency. The Citizens of Cork were also pardoned. Sir J. Ware. Cap. XV.

King,

1500. King, but envied by the Nobility, and hated of the People. Neither was his Name left out of Perkin's Proclamation for any good will, but they would not bring him in amongſt the King's Caſting-Counters, becauſe he had the Image and Superſcription upon him of the Pope, in his Honour of Cardinal. He won the King with Secrecy and Diligence, but chiefly becauſe he was his old Servant in his leſs Fortunes: And alſo for that (in his Affections) he was not without an inveterate Malice againſt the Houſe of York, under whom he had been in Trouble. He was willing alſo to take Envy from the King, more than the King was willing to put upon him. For the King cared not for Subterfuges, but would ſtand Envy, and appear in any thing that was to his Mind; which made Envy ſtill grow upon him more univerſal, but leſs daring. But in the Matter of Exactions, time did after ſhew, that the Biſhop in feeding the King's Humour, did rather temper it. He had been by Richard the Third committed (as in Cuſtody) to the Duke of Buckingham, whom he did ſecretly incite to revolt from King Richard. But after the Duke was engaged, and thought the Biſhop ſhould have been his chief Pilot in the Tempeſt, the Biſhop was gotten into the Cock-boat, and fled over beyond Seas. But whatſoever elſe was in the Man, he deſerveth a moſt happy Memory, in that he was the Principal Mean of joyning the two Roſes. He died of great Years, but of ſtrong Health and Powers. †

† He was ſucceeded by Henry Dean Biſhop of Saliſbury.

A Jubile at Rome.

The next Year, which was the Sixteenth Year of the King, and the Year of our Lord One thouſand five hundred, was the Year of Jubile at Rome. But Pope Alexander, to ſave the Hazzard and Charges of Mens Journeys to Rome, thought good to make over thoſe Graces by Exchange, to ſuch as would pay a convenient Rate, ſeeing they could not come to fetch them. For which purpoſe was ſent into England Jaſper Pons, a Spaniard, the Pope's Commiſſioner, better choſen than were the Commiſſioners of Pope Leo, afterwards employed for Germany; for he carried the Buſineſs with great Wiſdom, and ſemblance of Holineſs. In ſo much as he levied great Sums of Money within this Land to the Pope's Uſe, with little or no Scandal. It was thought the King ſhared in the Money. But it appeareth by a Letter which Cardinal Adrian, the King's Penſioner, wrote to the King from Rome ſome few Years after, that this was not ſo. For this Cardinal, being to perſwade Pope Julius on the King's behalf, to expedite the Bull of Diſpenſation for the Marriage between Prince Henry and the Lady Katherine, finding the Pope difficile in granting thereof, doth uſe it as a principal Argument concerning the King's Merit towards that See, that he had touched none of thoſe Deniers, which had been levied by Pons in England. But that it might the better appear (for the Satisfaction of the common People) that this was Conſecrate Money, the ſame Nuntio brought unto the King a Brief from the Pope, wherein the King was Exhorted and Summoned to come in Perſon againſt the Turk. For that the Pope (out of the Care of an Univerſal Father) ſeeing almoſt under his Eyes the Succeſſes and Progreſſes of that great Enemy of the Faith, had had in the Conclave, and with the Aſſiſtance of the Ambaſſadors of forreign Princes, divers Conſultations about an Holy War, and a General Expedition of Chriſtian Princes againſt the Turk. Wherein it was agree'd, and thought fit, that the Hungarians, Polonians, and Bohemians ſhould make a War upon Thracia; The French and Spaniards upon Grecia; and that the Pope (willing to ſacrifice himſelf in ſo good a Cauſe) in Perſon and in Company of the King of England, the Venetians, and ſuch other States as were great in maritime Power, would ſail with a puiſſant Navy through the Mediterrane unto Conſtantinople. And that to this end, his Holineſs had ſent Nuncio's to all Chriſtian Princes; as well for a Ceſſation of all Quarrels and Differences amongſt themſelves, as for ſpeedy Preparations and Contributions of Forces and Treaſure for this Sacred Enterprize.

The Pope invites the King to a holy War.

To this the King, (who underſtood well the Court of Rome) made an Anſwer rather Solemn, than Serious. Signifying,

"THat no Prince on Earth ſhould be more "forward and obedient, both by his Per- "ſon, and by all his poſſible Forces, and For- "tunes, to enter into this ſacred War, than "himſelf. But that the diſtance of Place was "ſuch, as no Forces that he ſhould raiſe for the "Seas, could be levied or prepared, but with "double the Charge, and double the Time (at "the leaſt) that they might be from the other "Princes, that had their Territories nearer "adjoyning. Beſides, that neither the Manner "of his Ships (having no Gallies) nor the "Experience of his Pilots and Mariners could "be ſo apt for thoſe Seas, as theirs. And there- "fore that his Holineſs might do well, to move "one of thoſe other Kings, who lay fitter for "the Purpoſe, to accompany him by Sea. "Whereby both all things would be ſooner put "in Readineſs, and with leſs Charge, and the "Emulation and Diviſion of Command, which "might grow between thoſe Kings of France "and Spain, if they ſhould both joyn in the "War by Land upon Grecia, might be wiſely "avoided. And that for his Part, he would "not be wanting in Aids and Contribution. "Yet notwithſtanding, if both theſe Kings "ſhould refuſe, rather than his Holineſs ſhould "goe alone, he would wait upon him, as ſoon "as he could be ready. Always provided, "that he might firſt ſee all Differences of the "Chriſtian Princes amongſt themſelves, fully "laid down and appeaſed (as for his own Part "he was in none.) And that he might have "ſome good Towns upon the Coaſt in Italy put "into his Hands, for the Retreat and ſafegard "of his Men.

With this Anſwer Jaſper Pons returned, nothing at all diſcontented. And yet this Declaration of the King (as ſuperficial as it was) gave him that Reputation abroad, as he was not long after elected by the Knights of the Rhodes, Protector of their Order; All things multiplying to Honour in a Prince, that had gotten ſuch high Eſtimation for his Wiſdome and Sufficiency.

The Knights of Rhodes elect King Henry Protector of their Order.

1501. There were these two last Years some Proceedings against Hereticks, which was rare in this King's Reign, and rather by Penances, than by Fire. The King had (though he were no good Schoolman) the Honour to convert one of them by Dispute at Canterbury.

The King converts an Heretick by Dispute.

This Year also, though the King were no more haunted with Sprites, for that by the Sprinkling partly of Blood, and partly of Water, he had chased them away; yet nevertheless he had certain Apparitions, that troubled him, still shewing themselves from one Region, which was the House of York. It came so to pass, that the Earl of Suffolk, Son to Elizabeth, eldest Sister to King Edward the Fourth, by John Duke of Suffolk, her second Husband, and Brother to John Earl of Lincoln, that was slain at Stock-field, being of an hasty and cholerick Disposition, had killed a Man in his Fury; whereupon the King gave him his Pardon. But either willing to leave a Cloud upon him, or the better to make him feel his Grace, produced him openly to plead his Pardon. This wrought in the Earl, as in a haughty Stomack it useth to doe; for the Ignominy printed deeper than the Grace, Wherefore he being discontent, fled secretly into Flanders, unto his Aunt the Dutchess of Burgundy. The King startled at it. But being taught by Troubles, to use fair and timely Remedies, wrought so with him by Messages, (The Lady Margaret also growing by often failing in her Alchymie, weary of her Experiments, and partly being a little sweetned, for that the King had not touched her name in the Confession of Perkin) that he came over again upon good Terms, and was reconciled to the King.

† Prince Arthur married to the Princess Katherine of Spain.

† In the beginning of the next Year, being the seventeenth of the King, the Lady Catherine, fourth Daughter of Ferdinando and Isabella, King and Queen of Spain, arrived in England, at Plymouth, the second of October and was married to Prince Arthur in Pauls, the fourteenth of November following, The Prince being then about fifteen Years of Age*, and the Lady about eighteen. The Manner of her receiving, the Manner of her Entry, into London ||, and the Celebrity of the Marriage were performed * with great and true Magnificence, in regard of Cost, Shew, and Order. The chief Man that took the Care was Bishop Fox; who was not only a Grave Counsellor for War or Peace, but also a good Surveyor of Works, and a good Master of Ceremonies, and any thing else that was fit for the Active Part, belonging to the Service of Court, or State of a great King. This Marriage was almost seven Years in Treaty; which was in part caused by the Tender Years of the Marriage-couple, especially of the Prince. But the true Reason was, that these two Princes, being Princes of great Policy and profound Judgment, stood a great time looking one upon another's Fortunes, how they would go; knowing well that in the mean time, the very Treatie it self gave abroad in the World a Reputation of a strait Conjunction, and Amity between them; which served on both Sides to many Purposes, that their several Affairs required, and yet they continued still free. But in the End, when the Fortunes of both Princes did grow every Day more and more Prosperous and Assured, and that looking all about them, they saw no better Conditions, they shut it up. 1501.

|| On the 12th of November.

The Marriage Money the Princess brought (which was turned over to the King by Act of Renunciation) was Two hundred thousand Ducats. Whereof One hundred thousand were payable ten Days after the Solemnization, and the other Hundred thousand at two Payments Annual; but part of it to be in Jewels and Plate, and a due Course set down to have them justly and indifferently prized. The Joynture or Advancement of the Lady, was the third Part of the Principality of Wales, and of the Dukedom of Cornwall, and the Earldom of Chester, to be after set forth in severalty. And in Case She came to be Queen of England, her Advancement was left Indefinite, but thus; That it should be as great, as ever any former Queen of England had.

The Princess Katherine's Jointure or Dowry.

In all the Devices and Conceits of the Triumphs of this Marriage, there was a great deal of Astronomy. The Lady being resembled to Hesperus, and the Prince to Arcturus, and the old King Alphonsus (that was the greatest Astronomer of King's, and was Ancestor to the Lady) was brought in to be the Fortune-teller of the Match. And whosoever had those Toys in Compiling, they were not altogether Pedantical. But you may be sure that King Arthur, the Britton, and the Descent of the Lady Catherine from the House of Lancaster, was in no wise forgotten. But (as it should seem) it is not good to fetch Fortunes from the Stars. For this young Prince (that drew upon him at that time, not only the Hopes and Affections of his Country, but the Eyes and Expectation of Forreiners) after a few Months, in the beginning of April, deceased at Ludlow Castle, where he was sent to keep his Residance and Court, as Prince of Wales. Of this Prince in respect he dyed so young, and by Reason of his Father's manner of Education, that did cast no great Lustre upon his Children, there is little particular Memory. Only thus much remaineth, that he was very studious and learned, beyond his Years, and beyond the Custom of great Princes.

Devices at Prince Arthur's Marriage.

2d April, A. D. 1502.

He dies at Ludlow Castle.

King Henry's Behaviour towards his Children.

There was a Doubt ripped up in the Times following, when the Divorce of King Henry the Eight from the Lady Catherine did so much Busie the World, whether Arthur was bedded with his Lady or no, whereby that Matter in Fact (of Carnal Knowledge) might be made part of the Case. And it is true, that the Lady herself denied it, or at least her Council stood upon it, and would not blanch that Advantage, although the Plentitude of the Pope's Power of Dispensing was the main Question. And this Doubt was kept long open, in Respect of the two Queen's that Succeeded, Mary and Elizabeth, whose Legitimations were Incompatible one with another, though their Succession was settled by Act of Parliament. And the Times that favoured Queen Mary's Legitimation would have it believed, that there was no Carnal Knowledge between Arthur and Katherine. Not that they

† She arrived as Stow says on the 4th of October which is not the beginning of the Year, she was married the 14th of November Si. J. Ware.

* He was born according to the Lord Bacon p. 8. in September 1486 and so he must be 15 Years and 2 Months old. According to Hollinshead he was born in September 1488 and then hew as but 13 Years and 2 Months. See Hol. p. 769.

would

1502. A Doubt long in debate between two Parties.

would seem to derogate from the Pope's absolute Power, to dispence even in that Case; but only in Point of Honour, and to make the Case more Favourable and Smooth. And the Times that favoured Queen Elizabeth's Legitimation (which were the longer, and the latter) maintained the contrary. So much there remaineth in Memory, that it was half a Year's time between the Creation of Henry Prince of Wales, and Prince Arthur's Death; which was construed to be, for to expect a full time, whereby it might appear, whether the Lady Catherine were with Child by Prince Arthur, or no. Again, the Lady her self procured a Bull, for the better Corroboration of the Marriage, with a Clause of (vel forsan cognitam) which was not in the first Bull. There was given in Evidence also, when the Cause of the Divorce was handled, a pleasant Passage, which was; That in a Morning Prince Arthur, upon his up-rising from Bed with her, called for Drink, which he was not accustomed to doe, and finding the Gentleman of his Chamber that brought him the Drink to smile at it, and to note it, he said merrily to him; That he had been in the middest of Spain, which was an hot Region, and his Journey had made him dry, and that if the other had been in so hot a Clime, he would have been drier than he. Besides, the Prince was upon the Point of Sixteen Years of Age when he died, and forward. and able in Body.

The 18th of Februry.

The February following, Henry Duke of York was created Prince of Wales, and Earl of Chester and Flint. For the Dukedom of Cornwall devolved to him by Statute. The King also being fast handed, and loth to part with a Second Dowrie, but chiefly being Affectionate both by his Nature, and out of Politick Considerations to continue the Alliance with Spain, prevailed with the Prince (though not without some Reluctation, such as could be in those Years, for he was not twelve Years of Age) to be contracted with the Princess Katherine. The secret Providence of God ordaining that Marriage, to be the Occasion of great Events and Changes.

Prince Henry contracted to the Princess Katherine.

The same Year were the Espousals of James King of Scotland, with the Lady Margaret, the King's eldest Daughter; which was done by Proxie, and published at Pauls Cross, the Five and twentieth of January, and Te Deum solemnly sung. But certain it is, that the Joy of the City thereupon shewed, by Ringing of Bells, and Bon-fires, and such other Incence of the People, was more than could be expected, in a Case of so great and fresh Enmity between the Nations; especially in London, which was far enough off from feeling any of the former Calamities of the War. And therefore might be truly attributed to a Secret Instinct and Inspiring (which many times runneth not only in the Hearts of Princes, but in the Pulse and Veins of People) touching the Happiness thereby to ensue in time to come. This Marriage was in August following consummate at Edenborough. The King bringing his Daughter as far as Colli-Weston on the Way, and then consigning her to the Attendance of the Earl of Northumberland; who with a great Troop of Lords and Ladies of Honour, brought her into Scotland, to the King her Husband.

The Princess Margaret marry'd to James the 4th King of Scotland.

This Marriage had been in Treaty by the space of almost three Years, from the time that the King of Scotland did first open his Mind to Bishop Fox. The Sum given in Marriage by the King, was Ten thousand Pounds. And the Jointure and Advancement assured by the King of Scotland, was Two thousand Pounds a Year, after King James his Death, and one thousand Pounds a Year in present, for the Lady's Allowance or Maintenance. This to be set forth in Lands, of the best and most certain Revenue. During the Treaty, it is reported, that the King remitted the Matter to his Council; And that some of the Table in the Freedom of Councellors (the King being present) did put the Case; that if God should take the King's two Sons without issue, that then the Kingdom of England would fall to the King of Scotland, which might be Prejudice to the Monarchy of England. Whereunto the King himself replied; That if that should be, Scotland would be but an Accession to England, and not England to Scotland, for that the Greater would draw the less. And that it was a safer Union for England, than that of France. This passed as an Oracle, and silenced those that moved the Question.

1503. The Princess Margaret's Jointure in Scotland.

The same Year was fatal, as well for Deaths, as Marriages, and that with equal Temper. For the Joys and Feasts of the two Marriages, were compensed with the mournings, and Funerals of Prince Arthur (of whom we have spoken) and of Queen Elizabeth, who died in Child-bed in the Tower, † and the Child lived not long after. There dyed also that Year Sir Reginold Bray, who was noted to have had with the King the greatest Freedom of any Councellor; but it was but a Freedom, the better to set off Flattery. Yet he bare more than his just Part of Envy, for the Exactions.

Queen Elizabeth's Death.

† On the 11 of February.

At this time the King's Estate was very prosperous, secured by the Amity of Scotland, strengthened by that of Spain, cherished by that of Burgundy, all Domestick Troubles quenched, and all Noise of War (like a Thunder a far off) going upon Italy. Wherefore Nature, which many times is happily contained, and refrained by some Bands of Fortune, began to take Place in the King; carrying (as with a strong Tide) his Affections and Thoughts unto the gathering and heaping up of Treasure. And as Kings do more easily find Instruments for their Will and Humour, than for their Service and Honour; He had gotten for his Purpose, or beyond his Purpose, two Instruments, Empson and Dudley, (whom the People esteemed as his Horse-Leeches and Shearers) bold Men, and careless of Fame, and took Toll of their Master's Grist. Dudley was of a good Family, Eloquent, and one that could put Hateful Business into good Language. But Empson, that was the Son of a Sieve-maker, triumphed always upon the Deed done, putting off all other Respects whatsoever. These two Persons being Lawyers in Science, and Privy Councellors in Authority (as the Corruption of the best things is the worst) turned Law and Justice into Worm-wood and Rapine. For first, their Manner was to cause divers Subjects to be Indicted of sundry Crimes, and so far forth to proceed in Form of Law; But when the Bills were found, then presently to commit them. And nevertheless not to produce them to any resonable time to their Answer, but to suffer them to languish long in Prison, and by sundry artificial Devices and Terrours, to extort from them great Fines and Ransoms, which they termed Compositions and Mitigations.

Empson and Dudley the King's Horse-Leeches.

Neither

1504. Neither did they (towards the end) obſerve ſo much as the half-Face of Juſtice, in proceeding by Indictment; but ſent forth their Precepts to attach Men, and convent them before themſelves and ſome others, at their private Houſes, in a Court of Commiſſion, and there uſed to ſhuffle up a Summary proceeding by Examination, without Trial of Jury; aſſuming to themſelves there, to deal both in Pleas of the Crown, and Controverſies Civil.

Then did they alſo uſe to enthrall and charge the Subjects Lands with Tenures in Capite, by finding falſe Offices, and thereby to Work upon them for Wardſhips, Liveries, Primier Seiſines, and Alienations, (being the Fruits of thoſe Tenures) refuſing upon divers Pretexts and Delays, to admit Men to traverſe thoſe falſe Offices, according to the Law. Nay, the King's Wards after they had accompliſhed their full Age, could not be ſuffered to have Livery of their Lands, without paying exceſſive Fines, far exceeding all reaſonable Rates. They did alſo vex Men with Informations of Intruſion upon ſcarce colourable Titles.

How Outlawries were puniſhed.

When Men were Out-lawed in Perſonal Actions, they would not permit them to purchaſe their Charters of Pardon, except they paid great and intollerable Sums; ſtanding upon the ſtrict Point of Law, which upon Out-lawries giveth Forfeiture of Goods. Nay, contrary to all Law and Colour, they maintained, the King ought to have the half of Mens Lands and Rents, during the Space of full two Years, for a Pain in Caſe of Out-lawry. They would alſo ruffle with Jurors, and inforce them to find as they would direct, and (if they did not) Convent them, Impriſon them, and Fine them,

These and many other Courſes, fitter to be buried than repeated, they had of Preying upon the People; both like tame Hawks for their Maſter, and like wild Hawks for themſelves; in ſo much as they grew to great Riches and Subſtance. But their principal working was upon Penall Laws, wherein they ſpared none, great nor ſmall; nor conſidered whether the Law were poſſible, or impoſſible, in Uſe or Obſolete: But raked over all old and new Statutes, though many of them were made with intention rather of Terrour, than of Rigour; having ever a Rabble of Promoters, Queſtmongers, and leadings Jurors at their Command, ſo as they could have any thing found either for Fact or Valuation.

The King's Diligence to get Money.

There remaineth to this Day a Report, that the King was on a time entertained by the Earl of Oxford (that was his Principal Servant, both for War and Peace) nobly and ſumptuouſly, at his Caſtle at Heningham. And at the King's going away, the Earl's Servants ſtood (in a ſeemly Manner) in their Livery Coats, with Cogniſances, ranged on both ſides, and made the King a Lane. The King called the Earl unto him and ſaid; My Lord, I have heard much of your Hoſpitality, but I ſee it is greater than the Speech. Theſe handſome Gentlemen and Yeomen, which I ſee on both ſides of me, are ſure your menial Servants. The Earl ſmiled, and ſaid; It may pleaſe your Grace, that were not for mine eaſe. They are moſt of them my Retainers, that are come to do me ſervice at ſuch a time as this, and chiefly to ſee your Grace. The King ſtarted a little, and ſaid; By my Faith (my Lord) I thank you for my good Chear, but I may not endure to have my Laws broken in my ſight. My Atturney muſt ſpeak with you. And it is part of the Report, that the Earl compounded for no leſs than fifteen thouſand Marks. And to ſhew further the King's extreme Diligence; I do remember to have ſeen long ſince a Book of Accompt of Empſon's, that had the King's Hand almoſt to every Leafe, by way of Signing, and was in ſome Places poſtilled in the Margent with the Kings Hand likewiſe, where was this Remembrance.

1505. The Earl of Oxford fin'd 15000 Marks for having Retainers.

" Item, received of ſuch a one, five Marks, for the Pardon to be procured; and if the Pardon do not paſs, the Money to be repayed; except the Party be ſome other ways ſatisfied.

A remarkable Memorandum of King Henry.

And over againſt this Memorandum (of the King's own Hand)

Otherwiſe ſatisfied

Which I do the rather mention, becauſe it ſhews in the King a Nearneſs, but yet with a kind of Juſtneſs. So theſe little Sands and Grains of Gold and Silver (as it ſeemeth) helped not a little to make up the great Heap and Bank.

But mean while (to keep the King awake) the Earl of Suffolk having been too gay at Prince Arthur's Marriage, and ſunk himſelf deep in Debt, had yet once more a Mind to be a Knight-Errant, and to ſeek Adventures in Forreign Parts. And taking his Brother with him, fled again into Flanders. That (no doubt) which gave him Confidence, was the great Murmur of the People againſt the King's Government. And being a Man of a light and raſh Spirit, he thought every Vapour would be a Tempeſt. Neither wanted he ſome Party within the Kingdom. For the Murmur of People awakes the Diſcontents of Nobles, and again, that calleth up commonly ſome Head of Sedition. The King reſorting to his wonted and tried Arts, cauſed Sir Robert Curſon, Captain of the Caſtle at Hammes (being at that time beyond Sea, and therefore leſs likely to be wrought upon by the King) to fly from his Charge, and to fain himſelf a Servant of the Earl's. This Knight, having Inſinuated himſelf into the Secrets of the Earl, and finding by him upon whom chiefly he had either Hope or Hold, advertiſed the King thereof in great Secrecy. But nevertheleſs maintained his own Credit and inward Truſt with the Earl. Upon whoſe Advertiſements, the King attached William Courtney, Earl of Devonſhire, his Brother-in-Law, married to the Lady Katherine, Daughter to King Edward the Fourth; William De-la-Pole, Brother to the Earl of Suffolk; Sir James Tirrel, and Sir John Windham, and ſome other meaner Perſons, and committed them to Cuſtody. George Lord Abergavennie, and Sir Thomas Green, were at the ſame time apprehended; but as upon leſs Suſpicion, ſo in a freeer Reſtraint, and were ſoon after delivered. the Earl of Devonſhire, being intereſſed in the Blood of York, that was rather Feared than Nocent; yet as one, that might be the Object of others Plots and Deſigns, remained Priſoner in the Tower, during the King's Life. William De-la-pole, was alſo long reſtrained

Earl of Suffolk flies into Flanders.

1504. Blood revenged. Sir James Tirrell executed, Hol. say's he was beheaded on the 6th of May 1503.

ed, though not so straitly. But for Sir James Tirrel (against whom the Blood of the Innocent Princes, Edward the Fifth, and his Brother, did still cry from under the Altar) and Sir John Windham, and the other meaner ones, they were attainted and executed; The two Knights beheaded. Nevertheless, to confirm the Credit of Curson (who belike had not yet done all his Feats of Activity) there was published at Paul's Cross, about the time of the said Executions, † the Pope's Bull of Excommunication and Curse, against the Earl of Suffolk, and Sir Robert Curson, and some others by Name, and likewise in general against all the Abettors of the said Earl. Wherein it must be confessed, that Heaven was made too much to bow to Earth, and Religion to Policy. But soon after, Curson (when he saw time) returned into England, and withall into wonted Favour with the King, but worse Fame with the People. Upon whose Return the Earl was much dismayed, and seeing himself destitute of Hopes (the Lady Margaret also by tract of Time, and bad Success, being now become Cool in those Attempts) after some wandering in France, and Germany, and certain little Projects, no better than Squibbs of an Exiled Man, being tired out, retired again into the Protection of the Arch-Duke Philip in Flanders, who by the Death of Isabella, was at that time King of Castile, in the Right of Joan his Wife.

† It could not be about the time of the Executions, for they were Curst the first Sunday in November. See Hol. p. 790. The King's Enemies Curst at Paul's Cross.

This Year † (being the Nineteenth of his Reign) the King called his Parliament. Wherein a Man may easily guess, how absolute the King took himself to be with his Parliament, when Dudley that was so hateful, was made Speaker of the House of Commons. In this Parliament, there were not made any Statutes memorable, touching publick Government. But those that were, had still the Stamp of the King's Wisdom and Policy.

† On the 25th of January. A Parliament call'd and Dudley chosen Speaker.

There was a Statute made for the disannulling of all Patents of Lease, or Grant, to such as came not upon lawful Summons, to serve the King in his Wars, against the Enemies or Rebels, or that should depart without the King's Licence; with an Exception of certain Persons of the Long-robe. Providing nevertheless, that they should have the King's Wages, from their House, till their Return home again. There had been the like made for Offices, and by this Statute it was extended to Lands. But a Man may easily see by many Statutes made in this King's time, that the King thought it safest, to assist Martial Law, by Law of Parliament.

Forreign Manufactures prohibited.

Another Statute was made, prohibiting the bringing in of Manufactures of Silk wrought by it self, or mixt with any other Thread. But it was not of Stuffs of whole piece (for that the Realm had of them no Manufacture in use at that time) but of knit-Silk, or Texture of Silk; as Ribbands, Laces, Caules, Points, and Girdles, &c. which the People of England could then well skill to make. This Law pointed at a true Principle: That where forreign Materials are but Superfluities, forreign Manufactures should be prohibited. For that will either banish the Superfluity or gain the Manufacture.

There was a Law also of Resumption of Patents of Gaols, and the Re-annexing of them to the Sheriswicks; Priviledged Officers being no less an Interruption of Justice, than priviledged Places.

There was likewise a Law to restrain the Bylaws or Ordinances of Corporations, which many times were against the Prerogative of the King, the Common-law of the Realm, and the Liberty of the Subject, being Fraternities in Evil. It was therefore Provided, that they should not be put in Execution, without the Allowance of the Chancellor, Treasurer, and the two Chief-Justices, or three of them, or of the two Justices of Circuit where the Corporation was. 1505.

Another Law was (in effect) to bring in the Silver of the Realm to the Mint, in making all clipped, minished, or impayred Coins of Silver, not to be current in Payments; without giving any Remedy of Weight, but with an Exception only of a reasonable Wearing, which was nothing in respect of the Incertainty; and so (upon the Matter) to set the Mint on Work, and to give way to New Coins of Silver, which should be then minted.

There likewise was a long Statute against Vagabonds, wherein two things may be noted; the one the Dislike the Parliament had of Gaoling of them, as that which was chargeable, pesterous, and of no open Example. The other, that in the Statutes of this King's time, (for this of the Nineteenth Years is not the only Statute of that kind) there are ever coupled, the Punishment of Vagabonds, and the Forbidding of Dice, and Cards, and unlawful Games unto Servants and mean People, and the putting down and suppressing of Ale houses, as Strings of one Root together, and as if the one were Unprofitable, without the other.

Retainers Suppresst by Act of Parliament.

As for Riot and Retainers, there passed scarce any Parliament in this time without a Law against them, the King ever having an Eye to Might, and Multitude.

There was granted also that Parliament a Subsidy, both for the Temporalty and the Clergy. And yet nevertheless, ere the Year expired, there went out Commissions for a general Benevolence, though there were no Wars; no Fears. The same Year the City gave Five thousand Marks, for Confirmation of their Liberties; a thing fitter for the Beginnings of Kings Reigns, than the latter Ends. Neither was it a small Matter, that the Mint gained upon the late Statute, by the Recoinage of Groats and Half-Groats, now Twelve-pences and Six-pences. As for Empson and Dudley's Mills, they did grind more than ever. So that it was a strange thing, to see what Golden Showrs poured down upon the King's Treasury at once. The last Payments of the Marriage-money from Spain; The Subsidy; The Benevolence; The Recoinage; The Redemption of the Cities Liberties; The Casualties. And this is the more to be marvelled at, because the King had then no Occasions at all of Wars or Troubles. He had now but one Son, and one Daughter unbestowed. He was Wise; He was of an high Mind; He needed not to make Riches his Glory. He did excell in so many things else; save that certainly Avarice doth ever find in it self Matter of Ambition. Belike he thought to leave his Son such a Kingdom, and such a Mass of Treasure, as he might choose his Greatness where he would.

A General Benevolence.

The Londoners purchase the Confirmation of their Liberty.

This Year † was also kept the Serjeants Feast, which was the second Call in this King's Days.

About * this time Isabella, Queen of Castile, deceased; a right Noble Lady, and an Honour to her Sex, and Times, and the Corner-stone of the Greatness of Spain, that hath followed. This Accident the King took not for News at large, but thought it had a great Relation to his own Affairs; especially in two Points. The one, for Example; the other for consequence. First, he conceived that the Case of Ferdinando of Aragon, after the Death of Queen Isabella, was his own Case, after the Death of his own Queen: and the Case of Joan the Heir unto Castile, was the

† On the 13th of November the Serjeants were. Rob. Brudnell, Will. Grevill, Tho. Marrow, George Edgore, John Moor, John Cutler, Tho. Eliot, Guy Palmes, Lewis Pollard, and Will. Fairfax.

† On the 26th of Novemb.

1505. the Caſe of his own Son Prince Henry. For if both of the Kings had their Kingdoms, in the Right of their Wives, they deſcended to the Heirs, and did not accrew to the Husbands. And although his own Caſe had both Steel and Parchment, more than the other (that is to ſay, a Conqueſt in the Field, and an Act of Parliament) yet notwithſtanding, that Natural Title of Deſcent in Blood, did (in the Imagination even of a Wiſe Man) breed a Doubt, that the other two were not ſafe nor ſufficient. Wherefore he was wonderful diligent, to inquire and obſerve what became of the King of Arragon, in holding and continuing the Kingdom of Caſtile. And wether he did hold it in his own Right, or as Adminiſtrator to his Daughter; And whether he were like to hold it in Fact, or to be put out by his Son-in-Law. Secondly, he did revolve in his Mind, that the State of Chriſtendom might by this late Accident have a Turn. For whereas before Time himſelf, with the Conjunction of Arragon and Caſtile (which then was one) and the Amity of Maximilian and Philip his Son the Arch-Duke, was far too ſtrong a Party for France; he began to fear, that now the French King (who had great Intereſt in the Affections of Philip the young King of Caſtile) and Philip himſelf, now King of Caſtile, (who was in ill Terms with his Father in Law about the preſent Government of Caſtile) And thirdly Maximilian, Philip's Father (who was ever variable, and upon whom the ſureſt Aim that could be taken, was that he would not be long, as he had been laſt before) would, all three being potent Princes, enter into ſome ſtrait League and Confederation amongſt themſelves. Whereby though he ſhould not be endangered, yet he ſhould be left to the poor Amity of Arragon. And whereas he had been heretofore a kind of Arbiter of Europe, he ſhould now goe leſs, and be over-topped by ſo great a Conjunction. He had alſo (as it ſeems) an Inclination to marry, and bethought himſelf of ſome fit Conditions abroad. And amongſt other's, he had heard of the Beauty and Vertuous Behaviour of the young Queen of Naples, the Widow of Ferdinando the younger, being then of Matronal Years of Seven and twenty. By whoſe Marriage he thought that the Kingdom of Naples (having been a Goal for a time between the King of Arragon, and the French King, and being but newly ſettled) might in ſome part be depoſited in his Hands, who was ſo able to keep the Stakes. Therefore he ſent in Ambaſſage or Meſſage three Confident Perſons; Francis Marſin, James Bray-brook, and John Stile, upon two ſeveral Inquiſitions rather than Negotiations. The one touching the Perſon and Condition of the young Queen of Naples. The other touching all particulars of Eſtate, that concerned the Fortunes and Intentions of Ferdinando. And becauſe they may obſerve beſt who themſelves are obſerved leaſt, he ſent them under colourable Pretexts; giving them Letters of Kindneſs and Complement from Katherine the Princeſs, to her Aunt, and Niece, the old and youug Queen of Naples, and delivering to them alſo a Book of new Articles of Peace; which notwithſtanding it had been delivered unto Doctor de Puebla, the Legier Ambaſſador of Spain here in England, to be ſent; yet for that the King had been long without hearing from Spain, he thought good thoſe Meſſengers, when they had been with the two Queens, ſhould likewiſe paſs on to the Court of Ferdinando, and take a Copy of the Book with them. The Inſtructions touching the Queen of Naples were ſo curious and exquiſite, being as Articles whereby to direct a Survey, or framing a Particular of her Perſon, for Complexion, Favour, Feature, Stature, Health, Age, Cuſtoms, Behaviour, Conditions, and Eſtate, as if the King had been young, a Man would have jndged him to be Amorous; but being Ancient, it ought to be Interpreted, that ſure he was very Chaſt, for that he meant to find all things in one Woman, and ſo to ſettle his Affections, without ranging. But in this Match he was ſoon cooled, when he heard from his Ambaſſadors, that this young Queen had had a goodly Joynture in the Realm of Naples, well anſwered during the time of her Unkle Frederick, yea, and during the time of Lewis the French King, in whoſe Diviſion her Revenue fell; but ſince the time that the Kingdom was in Ferdinando's Hands, all was aſſigned to the Army, and Garriſons there, and ſhe received only a Penſion or Exhibition out of his Coffers. 1505.

The other part of the Inquiry had a grave and diligent Return, informing the King at full of the preſent State of King Ferdinando. By this Report it appeared to the King, that Ferdinando did continue the Government of Caſtile as Adminiſtrator unto his Daughter Joan, by the Title of Queen Iſabella's Will, and partly by the Cuſtom of the Kingdom, as he pretended. And that all Mandates and Grants were expedited in the name of Joan his Daughter, and himſelf as Adminiſtrator, without mention of Philip, her Husband. And that King Ferdinando, howſoever he did diſmiſs himſelf of the name of King of Caſtile, yet meant to hold the Kingdom, without accompt, and in abſolute Command.

It appeareth alſo, that he flattered himſelf with hopes, that King Philip would permit unto him the Government of Caſtile during his Life; which he had layed his Plot to work him unto, both by ſome Counſellors of his about him, which Ferdinando had at his Devotion, and chiefly by Promiſe, that in caſe Philip gave not Way unto it, he would marry ſome young Lady, whereby to put him by the Succeſſion of Arragon and Granada, in caſe he ſhould have a Son. And laſtly, by repreſenting unto him that the Government of the Burgundians, till Philip were by continuance in Spain made as natural of Spain, would not be endured by the Spaniards. But in all thoſe things (though wiſely laid down and conſidered) Ferdinando fail'd; but that Pluto was better to him, than Pallas.

In the ſame Report alſo, the Ambaſſadors being mean Men, and therefore the more free, did ſtrike upon a ſtring which was ſomewhat dangerous. For they declared plainly, that the People of Spain, both Nobles and Commons, were better affected unto the part of Philip (ſo he brought his Wife with him) than to Ferdinando; and expreſſed the Reaſon to be, becauſe he had impoſed upon them many Taxes, and Tallages, which was the King's own Caſe between him and his Son.

There was alſo in this Report a Declaration of an Overture of Marriage, which Amaſon the Secretary of Ferdinando had made unto the Ambaſſadors in great ſecret, between Charles Prince of Caſtile and Mary the King's ſecond Daughter; aſſuring the King, that the Treaty of Marriage then on Foot, for the ſaid Prince and the Daughter of France, would break; and that ſhe the ſaid Daughter of France ſhould be married to Angoleſme, that was the Heir Apparent of France.

There was a touch alſo of a ſpeech of Marriage between Ferdinando and Madam de Foix, a Lady of the Blood of France, which afterwards indeed ſucceeded. But this was reported as Learned in France, and ſilenced in Spain. 1505.

The

505. The King by the Return of this Ambaſſage, which gave great light unto his Affairs, was well inſtructed, and prepared how to carry himſelf between Ferdinando King of Arragon, and Philip his Son-in-law, King of Caſtile; reſolving with himſelf, to do all that in him lay to keep them at one within themſelves; But howſoever that ſucceeded, by a moderate Carriage and bearing the Perſon of a Common-Friend, to loſe neither of their Friendſhips; but yet to run a courſe more entire with the King of Arragon, but more laboured and officious with the King of Caſtile. But he was much taken with the Overture of Marriage with his Daughter Mary; both becauſe it was the greateſt Marriage of Chriſtendom, and for that it took hold of both Allies.

But to corroborate his Alliance with Philip, the Winds gave him an Enterview. For Philip chooſing the Winter-Seaſon, the better to ſurprize the King of Arragon, ſet forth with a great Navy out of Flanders for Spain in the Month of January, the One and Twentieth Year of the King's Reign. But himſelf was ſurprized with a cruel Tempeſt, that ſcatter'd his Ships upon the ſeveral Coaſts of England. And the Ship wherein the King and Queen were (with two other ſmall Barks only) torn, and in great peril to eſcape the Fury of the Weather, thruſt into Weymouth. King Philip himſelf, having not been uſed (as it ſeems) to Sea, all wearied and extream Sick, would needs land to refreſh his Spirits, tho' it was againſt the Opinion of his Council, doubting it might breed Delay, his Occaſions requiring Celerity.

The Rumour of the Arrival of a Puiſſant Navy upon the Coaſt, made the Country arm. And Sir Thomas Trenchard with Forces ſuddenly raiſed, not knowing what the Matter might be, came to Weymouth. Where underſtanding the Accident, he did in all Humbleneſs and Humanity invite the King and Queen to his Houſe; and forthwith diſpatched Poſts to the Court. Soon after came Sir John Caroe likewiſe, with a great Troop of Men well arm'd; uſing the like Humbleneſs and Reſpect towards the King, when he knew the Caſe. King Philip doubting that they, being but Subjects, durſt not let him paſs away again, without the King's notice and leave, yielded to their Entreaties, to ſtay till they heard from the Court. The King as ſoon as he heard the News, commanded preſently the Earl of Arundel, to go to Viſit the King of Caſtile, and let him underſtand, That as he was very Sorry for his Miſhap, ſo he was glad that he had eſcap'd the Danger of the Seas, and likewiſe of the Occaſion himſelf had to do him Honour; and deſiring him, to think himſelf as in his own Land; and that the King made all haſt poſſible to come and imbrace him. The Earl came to him in great Magnificence, with a brave Troop of Three hundred Horſe; and (for more State) came by Torch-Light. After he had done the King's Meſſage, King Philip ſeeing how the World went, the ſooner to get away, went upon ſpeed to the King at Windſor, and his Queen follow'd by eaſy Journeys. The two Kings at their Meeting us'd all the Careſſes, and loving Demonſtrations that were poſſible. And the King of Caſtile ſaid pleaſantly to the King, That he was now puniſhed, for that he would not come within his walled Town of Calice, when they met laſt. But the King anſwer'd, That Walls and Seas were nothing, where Hearts were open; and that he was here no otherwiſe, but to be ſerved. After a Day or two's refreſhing, the Kings entred into Speech of renewing the Treaty; The King ſaying, 'That tho' King Philip's Perſon were the 'ſame, yet his Fortunes and State were raiſed. In which Caſe a Renovation of Treaty was uſed amongſt Princes. But while theſe things were in handling, the King chooſing a fit time, and drawing the King of Caſtile into a Room, where they two only were private, and laying his hand civilly upon his Arm, and changing his Countenance a little from a Countenance of Intertainment, ſaid to him; Sir, you have been ſaved upon my Coaſt, I hope you will not ſuffer me to wrack upon yours. The King of Caſtile ask'd him, What be meant by that Speech? I mean it (ſaith the King) by that ſame Harebrain wild Fellow, my Subject, the Earl of Suffolk, who is protected in your Country, and begins to play the Fool, when all others are weary of it. The King of Caſtile anſwer'd, I had thought (Sir) your Felicity had been above thoſe Thoughts. But if it trouble you, I will baniſh him. The King reply'd, Thoſe Hornets were beſt in their Neſt, and worſt when they did fly abroad, that his Deſire was, to have him delivered to him. The King of Caſtile herewith a little confuſed, and in a ſtudy, ſaid, That can I not do with my Honour, and leſs with yours; for you will be thought to have uſed me as a Priſoner. The King preſently ſaid, Then the Matter is at an end. For I will take that Diſhonour upon me, and ſo your Honour is ſaved. The King of Caſtile, who had the King in great Eſtimation, and beſides remembred where he was, and knew not what Uſe he might have of the King's Amity, for that himſelf was new in his Eſtate of Spain, and unſettled, both with his Father in Law, and with his People, compoſing his Countenance, ſaid, Sir, you give Law to me; but ſo will I to you. You ſhall have him, but (upon your Honour) you ſhall not take his Life. The King embracing him, ſaid, Agreed. Saith the King of Caſtile, Neither ſhall it diſlike you, if I ſend to him in ſuch a faſhion as he may partly come with his own good Will. The King ſaid, It was well thought of; and if it pleaſed him, he would joyn with him, in ſending to the Earl a Meſſage to that purpoſe. They both ſent ſeverally, and mean while they continued Feaſting and Paſtimes. The King being (on his part) willing to have the Earl ſure before the King of Caſtile went; and the King of Caſtile being as willing to ſeem to be inforced. The King alſo with many wiſe and excellent Perſwaſions, did adviſe the King of Caſtile to be ruled by the Council of his Father in Law Ferdinando; a Prince ſo Prudent, ſo Experienced, ſo Fortunate. The King of Caſtile (who was in no very good terms with his ſaid Father in Law) anſwer'd, That if his Father in Law would ſuffer him to govern his Kingdoms, he ſhould govern him.

1506. Conference between K. Henry and Philip K. of Caſtile.

There were immediately Meſſengers ſent from both Kings to recall the Earl of Suffolk: Who upon gentle Words uſed to him was ſoon charmed, and willing enough to return; aſſur'd of his Life, and hoping of his Liberty. He was brought through Flanders to Calice, and thence landed at Dover, and with ſufficient Guard delivered and received at the Tower of London. Mean while King Henry (to draw out the time) continued his Feaſtings and Entertainments, and after he had receiv'd the King of Caſtile into the Fraternity of the Garter, and for a Reciprocal had his Son the Prince admitted to the Order of the Golden-Fleece, he accompany'd King Philip and his Queen to the City of London; where they were entertain'd with the greateſt Magnificence and Triumph, that could be upon no greater warning. And as ſoon as the Earl of Suffolk had been convey'd to the Tower (which was the ſerious part) the Jollities had an end, and the Kings took leave. Nevertheleſs during their being here, they in Subſtance concluded

Earl of Suffolk returns.

1506. that Treaty, which the Flemings term Intercursus malus, and bears Date at Windsor; for that there be some things in it more to the Advantage of the English, than of them; especially, for that the Free-fishing of the Dutch upon the Coasts and Seas of England, granted in the Treaty of Undecimo, was not by this Treaty confirmed. All Articles that confirm former Treaties being precisely and warily limited and confirm'd to matter of Commerce only, and not otherwise.

The Free-fishing of the Dutch refus'd to be Confirm'd.

It was observ'd, that the great Tempest which drove Philip into England, blew down the Golden-Eagle from the Spire of Paul's, and in the Fall it fell upon a Sign of the Black-Eagle, which was in Paul's Church-Yard, in the Place where the School-House now standeth, and batter'd it, and brake it down. Which was a strange stooping of a Hawk upon a Fowl. This the People interpreted to be an Ominous Prognostick upon the Imperial House, which was (by Interpretation also) fulfill'd upon Philip the Emperor's Son, not only in the present Disaster of the Tempest, but in that that follow'd. For Philip arriving into Spain, and attaining the Possession of the Kingdom of Castile without Resistance, (insomuch as Ferdinando, who had spoke so great before, was with difficulty admitted to the Speech of his Son in Law) sickned soon after, and Deceased. Yet after such time as there was an Observation by the wisest of that Court, That if he had liv'd, his Father would have gain'd upon him in that sort, as he would have govern'd his Councils and Designs, if not his Affections. By this all Spain return'd into the Power of Ferdinando in state as it was before; the rather, in regard of the Infirmity of Joan his Daughter, who loving her Husband (by whom she had many Children) dearly well, and no less belov'd of him (howsoever her Father, to make Philip ill beloved of the People of Spain, gave out that Philip us'd her not well) was unable in Strength of Mind to bear the Grief of his Decease, and fell distracted of her Wits. Of which Malady her Father was thought no ways to endeavour the Cure, the better to hold his Regal Power in Castile. So that as the Felicity of Charles VIII. was said to be a Dream; so the Adversity of Ferdinando was said likewise to be a Dream, it passed over so soon.

The King would have had Henry the 6th canoniz'd.

About this time the King was desirous to bring into the House of Lancaster Celestial Honour, and became Suitor to Pope Julius, to canonize King Henry VI. for a Saint; the rather in respect of that his famous Prediction of the King's own Assumption to the Crown. Julius referred the Matter (as the manner is) to certain Cardinals, (b) to take the Verification of his holy Acts and Miracles. But it died under the Reference. The general Opinion was that Pope Julius was too Dear, and that the King would not come to his Rates. But it is more probable, That that Pope (who was extremely jealous of the Dignity of the See of Rome, and of the Acts thereof) knowing that King Henry VI. was reputed in the World abroad but for a Simple Man, was afraid it would but diminish the Estimation of that kind of Honour, if there were not a distance kept betwixt Innocents and Saints.

The same Year likewise there proceeded a Treaty of Marriage between the King and the Lady Margaret Dutchess Dowager of Savoy, only Daughter to Maximilian, and Sister to the King of Castile; a Lady Wise, and of great good Fame. This Matter had been in Speech between the two Kings at their Meeting, but was soon after resumed; and therein was imploy'd for his first Piece the King's then Chaplain, and after the great Prelate Thomas Wolsey. It was in the end concluded, with great and ample Conditions for the King, but with Promise De Futuro only. It may be the King was the rather induced unto it, for that he heard more and more of the Marriage to go on between his great Friend and Ally Ferdinando of Arragon, and Madam de Fois, whereby that King began to piece with the French King, from whom he had been always before severed. So fatal a Thing it is, for the greatest and straitest Amities of Kings, at one time or other to have a little of the Wheel. Nay, there is a further Tradition (in Spain, tho' not with us) That the King of Arragon, after he knew that the Marriage between Charles, the young Prince of Castile, and Mary the King's second Daughter went roundly on (which tho' it was first moved by the King of Arragon, yet it was afterwards wholly advanced and brought to Perfection by Maximilian, and the Friends on that Side) entred into a Jealousy, that the King did Aspire to the Government of Castilia, as Administrator during the Minority of his Son in Law; as if there should have been a Competition of Three for that Government; Ferdinando, Grandfather on the Mother's side; Maximilian, Grandfather on the Father's side; and King Henry, Father in Law to the young Prince. Certainly, it is not unlike, but the King's Government (carrying the young Prince with him) would have been perhaps more welcom to the Spaniards, than that of the other Two. For the Nobility of Castilia, that so lately put out the King of Arragon, in favour of King Philip, and had discover'd themselves so far, could not be but in a secret Distrust and Distaste of that King. And as for Maximilian, upon twenty respects he could not have been the Man. But this Purpose of the King's seemeth to me (considering the King's safe Courses, never found to be enterprizing or adventurous) not greatly probable, except he should have had a Desire to breath warmer, because he had ill Lungs. This Marriage with Margaret was protracted from time to time, in respect of the Infirmity of the King, who now in the Two and twentieth of his Reign began to be troubled with the Gout. But the Defluxion taking also into his Breast, wasted his Lungs, so that thrice in a Year (in a kind of Return, and especially in the Spring,) he had great Fits and Labours of the Tissick. Nevertheless, he continued to intend Business with as great Diligence, as before in his Health. Yet so, as upon this warning, he did likewise now more seriously think of the World to come, and of making himself a Saint, as well as King Henry the Sixth, by Treasure better imploy'd, than to be given to Pope Julius. For this Year he gave greater Alms than accustomed, and discharged all Prisoners about the City, that lay for Fees or Debts under Forty Shillings. He did also make hast with Religious Foundations; and in the Year following (which was the Three and twentieth) finished that of the Savoy. And hearing also of the bitter Cries of his People against the Oppressions of Dudley and Empson, and their Complices; partly by Devout Persons about him, and partly by Publick Sermons (the Preachers

1507.

The King gives great Alms.

(b) The Pope by his Bull committed the Examination of this Matter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of London, Winchester and Durham; The Bull is in the Collomais Library. Sir J. W. An. Hen. VII. Cap. XX. 'Tis dated in June, 1504.

doing

1508. doing their Duty therein) He was touch'd with great Remorse for the same. Nevertheless, Empson and Dudley, tho' they could not but hear of these Scruples in the King's Conscience; yet as if the King's Soul and his Money were in several Offices, that the One was not to intermeddle with the Other, went on with as great Rage as ever. For the same Three and twentieth Year was there a sharp Prosecution against Sir William Capel now the second time; and this was for Matters of Misgovernment in his Mayoralty. The great Matter being, that in some Payments he had taken Knowledge of False Moneys, and did not his Diligence to examine and beat it out who were the Offenders. For this and some other things laid to his Charge, he was condemn'd to pay Two thousand Pounds; and being a Man of Stomach, and harden'd by his former Troubles, refused to pay a Mite; and be-like used some untoward Speeches of the Proceedings, for which he was sent to the Tower, and there remain'd till the King's Death. Knesworth likewise, that had been lately Mayor of London, and both his Sheriffs, were for Abuses in their Offices, question'd, and impriſon'd, and deliver'd upon One Thousand four Hundred Pounds paid. Hawis, an Alderman of London, was put in Trouble, and died with Thought and Anguish before his Business came to an End. Sir Lawrence Ailmer, who had likewise been Mayor of London, and his two Sheriffs, were put to the Fine of One Thousand Pounds. * And Sir Lawrence, for refusing to make Payment, was committed to Prison, where he stay'd till Empson himself was committed in his Place.

Sir William Capell Fin'd a second time. He was Mayor, An. 1504.

He was Mayor in the Year 1505.

Sir Lawrence Ailmer was Mayor the year 1507.

* Hol. writes, that they were impriſon'd in the King's-Bench till they had paid 1400 l. Fine, p. 796.

It is no Marvel (if the Faults were so light, and the Rates so heavy) that the King's Treasure of Store that he left at his Death, most of it in secret Places under his own Key and keeping, at Richmond, amounted (as by Tradition it is reported to have done) unto the Sum of near Eighteen hundred Thousand Pounds Sterling; a huge masse of Money, even for these times.

K. Henry left behind him at his Death 1800000 pounds Sterl.

The last Act of State that concluded this King's Temporal Felicity, was the Conclusion of a Glorious Match between his Daughter Mary, and Charles Prince of Castile, afterwards the great Emperor, both being of tender Years. Which Treaty was perfected by Bishop Fox, and other his Commissioners at Calice, the Year before the King's Death. In which Alliance, it seemeth he himself took so high Contentment, as in a Letter which he wrote thereupon to the City of London (commanding all possible Demonstrations of Joy to be made for the same) he expresseth himself, as if he thought he had built a Wall of Brass about his Kingdom. When he had for his Sons in Law, a King of Scotland, and a Prince of Castile and Burgundy. So as now there was nothing to be added to this great King's Felicity, being at the top of all worldly Bliss, (in regard of the high Marriages of his Children, his great Renown throughout Europe, and his scarce credible Riches, and the perpetual Constancy of his prosperous Successes) but an opportune Death, to withdraw him from any Future blow of Fortune. Which certainly (in regard of the great Hatred of his People, and the Title of his Son, being then come to Eighteen Years of Age, and being a bold Prince, and liberal, and that gained upon the People by his very Aspect and Presence) had not been impossible to have come upon him.

To Crown also the last Year of his Reign as well as his first, he did an Act of Piety, Rare and worthy to be taken into Imitation. For he granted forth a General Pardon, as expecting a second Coronation in a better Kingdom. He did also declare in his Will, that his Mind was, that Restitution should be made of those Sums, which had been unjustly taken by his Officers. 1509.

K. Henry's Death.

And thus this Solomon of England (for Solomon also was too heavy upon his People in Exactions) having lived Two and fifty Years, and thereof reigned Three and twenty Years, and Eight Months, being in perfect Memory, and in a most blessed Mind, in a great Calm of a Consuming Sickness passed to a better World, the Two and twentieth of April, 1508. † at his Palace of Richmond, which himself had Built.

A Description of K. Henry VII.

" This King (to speak of him in Terms equal " to his Deserving) was one of the best sort of " Wonders; a Wonder for Wisemen. He had " Parts (both in his Vertues, and his Fortune) " not so fit for a Common-place, as for Obser- " vation. Certainly he was Religious, both in His Wisdom.

His Piety.

" his Affection and Observance. But as he could " see clear (for those times) through Superstition, so he would be blinded (now and then) " by Human Policy. He advanced Church-men; " he was tender in the Privilege of Sanctuaries, " tho' they wrought him much Mischief. He " built and endowed many Religious Foundations, besides his Memorable Hospital of the " Savoy. And yet was he a great Alms-giver in " secret; which shewed, that his Works in Public were Dedicated rather to God's Glory, " than his own. He professed always to love " and seek Peace; and it was his usual Preface " in his Treaties; That when Christ came into " the World, Peace was sung; and when he went " out of the World, Peace was bequeath'd. And this " Vertue could not proceed out of Fear, or Softness; for he was Valiant and Active. and " therefore (no doubt) it was truly Christian " and Moral. Yet he knew the way to Peace, " was not to seem to be desirous to avoid Wars. " Therefore would he make Offers, and Fames " of Wars, till he had mended the Conditions " of Peace. It was also much, that one that " was so great a Lover of Peace, should be so

He was a Lover of Peace.

" happy in War. For his Arms (either in Fo- " reign or Civil Wars) were never Infortunate; " neither did he know what a Disaster meant. " The War of his Coming in, and the Rebellions of the Earl of Lincoln, and the Lord " Awdley were ended by Victory. The Wars of " France and Scotland, by Peaces sought at his " Hands. That of Brittain, by Accident of the " Duke's Death. The Insurrection of the Lord " Lovel, and that of Perkin at Exeter, and in " Kent, by flight of the Rebels before they came " to Blows. So that his Fortune of Arms was " still Inviolate. The rather sure, for that in " the quenching of the Commotions of his Sub- " jects, he ever went in Person. Sometimes " reserving himself to back and second his Lieu- " tenants, but ever in Action; and yet that " was not merely Forwardness, but partly Dis- " trust of others.

His Arms Victorious.

" He did much maintain and countenance his " Laws. Which (nevertheless) was no Impe- " diment to him to work his Will. For it " was so handled, that neither Prerogative, nor

He maintain'd and favour'd the Laws.

† Reckoning from the Day of his Victory of Bosworth, when Sir William Stanly crown'd him in the Field, which was the 22d of August 1485. to the 22d of April 1508. is but 22 Years and 8 Months; whereas he reign'd 23 Years and 8 Months, and dy'd the 22d of April 1509.

1509. How he us'd his Prerogative.

" Profit went to Diminution. And yet as he " would ſometimes ſtrain up his Laws to his " Prerogative, ſo would he alſo let down his " Prerogative to his Parliament. For Mint and " Wars, and Martial Diſcipline, (things of Ab- " ſolute Power) he would nevertheleſs bring to " Parliament. Juſtice was well adminiſtred in " his time, ſave where the King was Party: " Save alſo, that the Council-Table intermedled " too much with Meum and Tuum. For it was " a very Court of Juſtice during his time, eſpe- " cially in the Beginning. But in that part both " of Juſtice and Policy, which is the Durable " part, and cut (as it were) in Braſs or Marble " (which is the making of good Laws) he did " excel. And with his Juſtice, he was alſo a " Merciful Prince. As in whoſe time there were " but three of the Nobility that ſuffer'd; the " Earl of Warwick, the Lord Chamberlain, and " the Lord Awdley. Though the firſt two were " inſtead of Numbers, in the Diſlike and Oblo- " quy of the People. But there were never ſo " great Rebellions expiated with ſo little Blood, " drawn by the hand of Juſtice, as the two Re- " bellions of Black-Heath and Exeter. As for " the Severity uſed upon thoſe which were taken " in Kent, it was but upon a Scum of People. " His Pardons went ever both before and after " his Sword. But then he had withal a ſtrange " kind of interchanging of large and inexpected " Pardons, with ſevere Executions. Which " (his Wiſdom conſider'd) could not be impu- " ted to any Inconſtancy, or Inequality; but " either to ſome Reaſon which we do not now " know, or to a Principle he had ſet unto him- " ſelf, That he would vary, and try both ways in " turn. But the leſs Blood he drew, the more " he took of Treaſure. And (as ſome conſtru'd " it) he was the more ſparing in the one, that " he might be the more preſſing in the other; " for both would have been intollerable. Of " Nature aſſuredly he coveted to accumulate " Treaſure, and was a little Poor in admiring " Riches. The People (into whom there is in- " fuſed, for the Preſervation of Monarchies, a " natural Deſire to diſcharge their Princes, tho' " it be with the unjuſt Charge of their Coun- " cellors and Miniſters) did impute this unto " Cardinal Morton, and Sir Reginold Bray. Who " (as it after appear'd) as Counſellors of ancient " Authority with him, did ſo ſecond his Hu- " mours, as nevertheleſs they did temper them. " Whereas Empſon and Dudley that follow'd, be- " ing Perſons that had no Reputation with him " (otherwiſe than by the ſervile following of his " Bent) did not give way only (as the firſt did) " but ſhape him way to thoſe Extremities, for " which himſelf was touch'd with Remorſe at " his Death, and which his Succeſſor renounc'd, " and ſought to purge. This Exceſs of his, had " at that time many Gloſſes and Interpretations. " Some thought the continual Rebellions where- " with he had been vexed, had made him grow " to hate his People. Some thought it was done " to pull down their Stomachs, and to keep them " low. Some, for that he would leave his Son " a Golden-Fleece. Some ſuſpected he had ſome " high Deſign upon Foreign Parts. But thoſe " perhaps ſhall come neareſt the Truth, that " fetch not their Reaſons ſo far off; but rather " impute it to Nature, Age, Peace, and a Mind " fixed upon no other Ambition or Purſuit. " Whereunto I ſhould add, that having every " day Occaſion to take notice of the Neceſſities " and Shifts for Money of other great Princes " abroad, it did the better (by Compariſon) ſet " off to him the Felicity of full Coffers. As to " his expending of Treaſure, he never ſpar'd " Charge which his Affairs required; and in his " Buildings was Magnificent, but his Rewards " were very limited. So that his Liberality " was rather upon his own State and Memory, " than upon the Deſerts of others.

1509. Magnificent in his Building. Sparing in his Rewards.

" He was of an high Mind, and lov'd his " own Will, and his own Way; as one that re- " vered himſelf, and would Reign indeed. Had " he been a Private Man, he would have been " termed Proud. But in a wiſe Prince, it was " but keeping of Diſtance, which indeed he did " towards all; not admitting any near or full " Approach, neither to his Power or to his Se- " crets. For he was govern'd by none. His Queen " (notwithſtanding ſhe had preſented him with " divers Children, and with a Crown alſo, tho' " he would not acknowledge it) could do no- " thing with him. His Mother he reverenced " much, heard little. For any Perſon agreeable " to him for Society (ſuch as was Haſtings to K. " Edward IV. or Charles Brandon after to K. Hen- " ry VIII.) he had none: Except we ſhould ac- " count for ſuch Perſons, Fox, and Bray, and " Empſon; becauſe they were ſo much with him: " But it was but as the Inſtrument is much with " the Workman. He had nothing in him of " Vain-glory, but yet kept State and Majeſty " to the height; Being ſenſible, That Majeſty " maketh the People bow, but Vain-glory bow- " eth to them.

He was lov'd to Reign indeed.

He was govern'd by none. His Queen had no Power over him, nor his Mother.

He had no Favourites, but Three Miniſters.

He was not Vain-glorious but Majeſtick.

" To his Confederates abroad he was Con- " ſtant and Juſt, but not Open. But rather ſuch " was his Inquiry, and ſuch his Cloſeneſs, as " they ſtood in the Light towards him, and he " ſtood in the Dark to them. Yet without " Strangeneſs, but with a ſemblance of mutual " Communication of Affairs. As for little Envies, " or Emulations upon Foreign Princes (which " are frequent with many Kings) he had never " any; but went ſubſtantially to his own Buſi- " neſs. Certain it is, that though his Reputa- " tion was great at Home, yet it was greater " Abroad. For Foreigners that could not ſee " the Paſſages of Affairs, but made their Judg- " ments upon the Iſſues of them, noted that he " was ever in Strife, and ever a Loſt. It grew " alſo from the Airs which the Princes and " States abroad receiv'd from their Ambaſſadors " and Agents here; which were Attending the " Court in great Number. Whom he did not " only content with Courteſy, Reward, and " Privateneſs; but (upon ſuch Conferences as " paſſed with them) put them in Admiration, " to find his Univerſal Inſight into the Affairs " of the World. Which tho' he did ſuck chiefly " from themſelves; yet that which he had ga- " thered from them all, ſeemed Admirable to " every one. So that they did write ever to " their Superiors in high terms, concerning his " Wiſdom and Art of Rule, nay, when they " were return'd, they did commonly maintain " Intelligence with him. Such a Dexterity he " had to impropriate to himſelf all Foreign In- " ſtruments.

Juſt to his Treaties.

Myſterious.

The Reſpect paid him by Ambaſſadors, and his Uſage to them.

" He was careful and liberal to obtain good " Intelligence from all Parts abroad. Wherein " he did not only uſe his Intereſt in the Lie- " gers here, and his Penſioners which he had " both in the Court of Rome, and other the " Courts of Chriſtendom; but the Induſtry and " Vigilancy of his own Ambaſſadors in Foreign " Parts. For which purpoſe, his Inſtructions " were ever Extream, Curious, and Articulate; " and in them more Articles touching Inquiſi- " tion, than touching Negotiation. Requiring " likewiſe from his Ambaſſadors an Anſwer, in particular

He had good Intelligence.

His Avarice.

His Fame.

1509. " particular distinct Articles, respectively to " his Questions.

" As for his secret Spialls, which he did im- " ploy both at Home and Abroad, by them to " discover what Practices and Conspiracies were " against him, surely his Case required it: He " had such Moles perpetually working and cast- " ing to Undermine him. Neither can it be " reprehended, For if Spialls be lawful against " lawful Enemies, much more against Conspira- " tors and Traytors. But indeed to give them " Credence by Oaths or Curses, that cannot be " well maintained; for those are too holy Vest- " ments for a Disguise. Yet surely there was " this further Good in his employing of these " Flies and Familiars; That as the Use of them " was Cause that many Conspiracies were re- " vealed, so the Fame and Suspicion of them " kept (no doubt) many Conspiracies from be- " ing attempted.

" Towards his Queen he was nothing Uxo- " rious, nor scarce Indulgent; but Compani- " able and Respective, and without Jealousy.

His Affection to his Wife and Children.

" Towards his Children † he was full of Pa- " ternal Affection, Careful of their Education, " aspiring to their High Advancement, regular " to see that they should not want of any due " Honour and Respect, but not greatly willing " to cast any popular Lustre upon them.

His Industry in Affairs of State.

" To his Council he did refer much, and " oft in Person; knowing it to be the Way to " assist his Power, and inform his Judgment. " In which respect also he was fairly patient of " Liberty, both of Advice, and of Vote, till " himself were declar'd. He kept a strait hand

He advanc'd Clergymen and Lawyers.

" on his Nobility, and chose rather to advance " Clergymen and Lawyers, which were more " Obsequious to him, but had less Interest in " the People; which made for his Absoluteness, " but not for his Safety. In so much as (I am

Which was one of the Causes of his Troublesom reign.

" perswaded) it was one of the Causes of his " troublesom Reign: for that his Nobles, tho' " they were Loyal and Obedient, yet did not " Co-operate with him, but let every Man go " his own Way. He was not afraid of an Able " Man, as Lewis XI. was. But contrariwise,

His Chief Officers Civil and Military.

" he was serv'd by the Ablest Men that were to " be found; without which his Affairs could " not have prosper'd as they did. For War, " Bedford, Oxford, Surrey, Dawbeney, Brooke, " Poynings. For other Affairs, Morton, Fox, Bray, " the Prior of Lanthony, Warham, Urswick, Hus- " sey, Frowick, and others. Neither did he care " how Cunning they were, that he did imploy; " for he thought himself to have the Master- " Reach: And as he chose well, so he held them " up well. For it is a strange thing, that tho' " he were a Dark Prince, and infinitely Suspi- " cious, and his Times full of Secret Conspi-

No Counsellor or Servant but the Ld Chamberlain displaced in this Reign.

" racies and Troubles; yet in Twenty four " Years Reign, he never put down, or dis- " composed Counsellor, or near Servant, save " only Stanley, the Lord Chamberlain. As for

In what terms he was with his Subjects as to love, Fear and Reverence.

" the Disposition of his Subjects in general to- " wards him, it stood thus with him; That of " the Three Affections, which naturally tie the " Hearts of the Subjects to their Soveraigns; " Love, Fear, and Reverence; he had the last " in height, the second in good measure, and " so little of the first, as he was beholding to " ther two.

" He was a Prince Sad, Serious and full of 1509. " Thoughts and secret Observations, and full " of Notes and Memorials of his own Hand, " especially touching Persons. As whom to Em- " ploy, whom to Reward, whom to Enquire of, " whom to Beware of, what were the Depen- " dencies, what were the Factions, and the like; " keeping (as it were) a Journal of his Thoughts. He was Sad, Serious, and Thoughtful.

" There is to this day a merry Tale; That his " Monkey (set on as it was thought by one of " his Chamber) tore his Principal Note-Book " all to pieces, when by chance it lay forth. A pleasant Story relating to the King.

" Whereat the Court (which liked not those Pen- " sive Accompts) was almost tickled with Sport.

" He was indeed full of Apprehensions and " Suspitions. But as he did easily take them, Suspicious. " so he did easily check them, and master them: " whereby they were not dangerous, but trou- " bled himself more than others. It is true, his " Thoughts were so many, as they could not " well always stand together; but that which " did good one way, did hurt another. Nei- " ther did he at some times weigh them aright " in their Proportions. Certainly, that Rumour " which did him so much Mischief (That the Duke " of York should be saved, and alive) was (at the Why King Henry promoted the Rumour of the D. of York's being alive.

" first) of his own nourishing; because he would " have more Reason not to Reign in the right " of his Wife. He was affable, and both well " and Fair-spoken; and would use strange " Sweetness and Blandishments of Words, " where he desired to effect or perswade any " thing that he took to Heart. He was rather Rather Studious than Learned.

" Studious than Learned; reading most Books " that were of any worth, in the French Tongue. " Yet he understood the Latin, as appeareth in " that Cardinal Hadrian, and others, who could " very well have written French, did use to write " to him in Latin.

" For his Pleasures, there is no News of them. " And yet by his Instructions to Marsin and Stile No Lover of Pleasure. " touching the Queen of Naples, it seemeth he " could Interrogate well touching Beauty. He " did by Pleasures, as great Princes do by Ban- " quets, come and look a little upon them, and " turn away. For never Prince was more " wholly given to his Affairs, nor in them more " of himself. In so much, as in Triumphs of " Justs, and Tourneys, and Balls, and Masks " (which they then called Disguises) he was ra- " ther a Princely and Gentle Spectator, than " seemed much to be delighted.

" No doubt, in him as in all Men (and most " of all in Kings) his Fortune wrought upon His general Character. " his Nature, and his Nature upon his Fortune. " He attained to the Crown, not only from a " private Fortune, which might indow him with " Moderation; but also from the Fortune of an " Exiled Man, which had quickened in him all " Seeds of Observation and Industry. And his " Times being rather Prosperous, than Calm, " had raised his Confidence by Success, but al- " most marred his Nature by Troubles. His " Wisdom, by often evading from Perils, was " turned rather into a Dexterity to deliver him- " self from Dangers, when they press'd him, than " into a Providence to prevent and remove them " a far off. And even in Nature, the Sight of his " Mind was like some Sights of Eyes; rather strong " at Hand, than to carry a far off. For his Wit in- " creased upon the Occasion; and so much the

---

† He had by his Queen, Elizabeth Daughter to Edward the Fourth, four Sons and four Daughters, Arthur who died five Months after his Marriage to the Princess Katherine of Spain. Henry who married his Brother's Widdow, and Succeeded his Father, by the Name of Henry the Eighth, Edmund and another Son, who died young; Margaret Queen of the Scots, and Mary, who married the French King Lewis the 12th, and afterwards Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. The other two Daughters died in their Childhood.

" more,

1509. " more if the Occaſion were ſharpned by Dan-
" ger. Again, whether it were the Shortneſs of " his Foreſight, or the Strength of his Will, or
" the Dazling of his Suſpitions, or what it was;
" certain it is, that the perpetual Troubles of " his Fortunes (there being no more Matter out
" of which they grew) could not have been with-
" out ſome great Defects, and main Errors in " his Nature, Cuſtoms, and Proceedings, which " he had enough to do to ſave and help, with a
" thouſand little Induſtries and Watches. But
" thoſe do beſt appear in the Story it ſelf. Yet
" take him with all his Defects, if a Man ſhould
" compare him with the Kings his Concurrents,
" in France and Spain, he ſhall find him more
" Politick than Lewis the Twelfth of France, and
" more entire and Sincere than Ferdinando of " Spain. But if you ſhall change Lewis the " Twelfth, for Lewis the Eleventh, who lived a
" little before; then the Conſort is more per" fect. For that Lewis the Eleventh, Ferdinando,
" and Henry, may be eſteemed for the Tres Ma-
" gi of Kings of thoſe Ages. To conclude, If
" this King did no greater Matters, it was long
" of himſelf; for what he minded, he compaſ-
" ſed.

A Compariſon of him with other Princes.

" He was a Comely Perſonage, a little above
" Juſt Stature, well and ſtraight Limmed, but
" ſlender. His Countenance was Reverend, and " a little like a Church-Man: And as it was not
" ſtrange or dark, ſo neither was it Winning

His Perſon.

" or Pleaſing, but as the Face of one well diſ- 1509.
" poſed. But it was to the Diſadvantage of " the Painter; for it was beſt when he ſpake.

" His Worth may bear a Tale or two, that " may put upon him ſomewhat that may ſeem
" Divine. When the Lady Margaret his Mo" ther had diverſe great Sutors for Marriage,
" ſhe dreamed one Night, That one in the like-
" neſs of a Biſhop, in Pontifical Habit, did tender her
" Edmund Earl of Richmond (the Kings Father)
" for her Husband. Neither had ſhe ever any " Child but the King, though ſhe had three Hus-
" bands. One day when King Henry the Sixth
" (whoſe Innocency gave him Holineſs) was
" waſhing his Hands at a great Feaſt, and caſt
" his Eye upon King Henry, then a young Youth,
" he ſaid; This is the Lad, that ſhall poſſeſs quietly
" that, that we now ſtrive for. But that that was
" truely Divine in him, was, that he had the " Fortune of a True Chriſtian, as well as of a
" Great King, in living Exerciſed, and dying
" Repentant. So as he had an happy Warfare
" in both Conflicts, both of Sin, and the Croſs.

Prognoſticks of his having the Crown.

" He was born at Pembroke Caſtle and lyeth
" buried at Weſtminſter, in one of the Statelieſt
" and Daintieſt Monuments of Europe, both for
" the Chappel, and for the Sepulcher. So that
" he dwelleth more richly Dead, in the Monu-
" ment of his Tomb, than he did alive in Rick-
" mond, or any of his Palaces. I could wiſh he " did the like, in this Monument of his Fame.

1509.

The

The Remarkable Occurrences in the Reign of HENRY VII.

IN his ſecond Year, John Percival, the Lord Mayor's Carver, was choſen one of the Sheriffs of London in this manner: Sir Henry Collet the Lord Mayor, took a Cup of Wine, and Drank to John Percival, who waited then at his Table ſtanding bare; the Lord Mayor drinking to him and Stiling him Sheriff of London for the enſuing Year, ſo far made uſe of his Privilege of Election that way, as to cauſe Percival to put on his Hat, and ſit down at the Table; accordingly the Carver ſat down, took on him the Office of Sheriff, and was afterwards Lord Mayor himſelf, and Knighted.

In his ſeventh Year, Robert Fabian was Alderman and Sheriff of London. He wrote a Hiſtory of England and France, from the Creation of the World to the third Year of the Reign of King Henry the 8th.

In his ninth Year, on the 28th of April, Joan Boughton a Widow was Burnt in Smithfield for Hereſie and profeſſing Wickliff's Opinions. In this Year Wheat was ſold in London for four Shillings a Quarter, and Bourdeaux Wine or Claret, for thirty Shillings a Hogſhead.

In the tenth Year of his Reign, the Body of one Alice Hackney, which had been bury'd 175 Years, ever ſince the beginning of the Reign of Edward the 2d, was accidentally dug up in the Church of St. Mary Hill, London: The Skin of the Corps was whole, and the Joynts of the Arms pliable.

In his fifteenth Year, a Peſtilence rag'd in England, which ſwept away no leſs than 30000 Men, Women and Children in one Year in the City of London.

In the ſeventeenth Year of his Reign, Sir John Shaw, then Lord Mayor, firſt caus'd his Brethren the Aldermen to ride to the Water ſide when he went to the Exchequer-Bar by Water to be Sworn. He was alſo the firſt that had the Mayor's Feaſt in Guild Hall, which was before done at Grocer's or Merchant Taylor's Hall. Alſo this Year Sebaſtian Cabot brought three Indians into England. They were Cloath'd in Beaſts Skins, and eat raw Fleſh. Two of them were ſeen two Years after dreſs'd like Engliſh Men, and not to be diſtinguiſh'd from them.

In the Year following, on the 18th Day of January, the firſt Stone of the Chappel known by the Name of Henry the Seventh's Chappel, was laid within the Monaſtery of Weſtminſter by John Iſlip the Abbot, Sir Reginald Bray Knight of the Garter, Dr. Barnes Maſter of the Rolls, Sir Edward Stanhope, and others, aſſiſting at the Ceremonies. The Charges of this Building amounted to no more than fourteen Thouſand Pound, if we may believe our Author.

In the 22d Year of his Reign, the Sweating Sickneſs which happen'd in his firſt Year return'd; but the Cure being known, it was not ſo mortal as the Firſt was.

Beſides the famous Captains mention'd by the Noble Author of this Reign, in his diſcourſing of King Henry VII. he had other Officers of great Valour and Conduct, as

George Earl of Shrewsbury, George Lord Strange, Edward Lord Woodville, Sir Rice ap Thomas, the Lord Morley, and Sir John Cheyney. Thoſe that we name hereafter were Men of Courage and Experience; but being Enemies to the Houſe of Lancaſter, and taking hold of all Opportunities to diſturb King Henry's Government, they Periſhed all of them as Traytors.

John de la Pool Earl of Lincoln, James Touchet, Lord Audley, the Lord Lovel, Sir Humphry Stafford, Sir Thomas Broughton, Sir John Egremond, and Sir Simon Monfort.

The Writers in King Henry VII. time, were

George Ripley a Carmelite Fryer of Boſton. He wrote ſeveral Mathematical Treatiſes; and was after his Death reckoned a Conjurer by the Populace.

Dr. John Ergham a black Fryer born in York, Profeſſor of Divinity at Oxford: He was fond of Prophecies.

John Percival a Carthuſian Monk.

Thomas Maillorie a Welſhman. He wrote of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table.

Thomas Scroop of the Noble Family of the Scroops: He affected to Preach in Sackcloath and bare-Foot. He was ſometimes a Benedictine, ſometimes a Dominican, and ſometimes a Carmelite Fryer. He was at laſt made a Biſhop in Ireland, and liv'd to be near a Hundred Years Old. The latter part of his Life he ſpent like an Anchorite.

John Tonneis an Auguſtine Fryer, wrote a Grammar, which was Printed by Richard chard Pinſon one of the firſt Printers in England.

Geffery, Sirnamed the Grammarian.

John Alcock Biſhop of Ely, Founder of Jeſus Colledge in Cambridge. It was formerly a Nunnery, but the Abbeſs and the Nuns were turned out for their diſſolute Lives.

Stephen Haws, Eſquire, one of the Gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber.

William of Bintree in Norfolk, a Carmelite Fryer of Burnham, and a great Divine.

William Gallion of Lyn, Provincial of the Auguſtine Fryers.

William Celling of Feverſham, a Monk of Canterbury.

Cardinal Thomas Bourchier of the Noble Family of the Bourchiers, Earls of Eſſex: He was firſt Biſhop of Ely, then Archbiſhop of Canterbury. He was advanced to the Purple by Pope Paul II.

Philip Bromierd, a Dominican Fryer a Divine.

Dr. John Miles, L. L. D. of Brazen Colledge in Oxford; which Colledge was Founded in this Reign by William Smith Biſhop of London.

Richard Shireburn Biſhop of Chicheſter, fam'd for his Learning and Eloquence.

Robert Vidvus Vicar of Thaxſtead in Eſſex, Canon of Wells: An excellent Poet ſays Hol.

Dr. Kenighal.

Cardinal Morton, of whom mention is frequently made in this Hiſtory.

Henry Midwel, his Chaplain.

Edmund Dudley, Eſquire, a Lawyer, once Speaker of the Houſe of Commons. He was a main Inſtrument of King Henry's Exactions. He wrote a Book Intituled Arbor Rei Publicæ.

John Buckinham, an excellent Schoolman.

Dr. William Blackneie, a Carmelite Fryer, a Doctor of Divinity, and a Necromancer.

Robert Fabian, Alderman, whom we have elſewhere mentioned, an Hiſtorian.

Bernardus Andreas, who called himſelf Poet Laureat, and Hiſtoriographer Royal. He wrote the Life of King Henry VII.

The End of the First VOLUME.

Bayerische
Staatsbibliothek

AN INDEX

To the First Volume of the Compleat History of ENGLAND.

A.

Abbot, of Battel, his Valour againſt the French, Page 236.

Acton, Sir George and others, hang'd for Sir John Oldcaſtle's pretended Plot, 311.

Adda ſucceeds his Father Ida in the Kingdom of Bernicia, 35.

Adminius, the Son of Cunobeline, baniſh'd his Country, flies to the Emperor Caligula, and ſtirs him up againſt it, 14.

Aganippus, a Gauliſh King, marries Cordelia the Daughter of King Leir, 6.

Agincourt, Battel of, 318.

Agricola, Son of Severianus, ſpreads the Pelagian Doctrine in Britain, 28.

Aidan, a Scotiſh Biſhop, ſent for by Oſwald to ſettle Religion, 42.

Ailmer, Sir Laurence, Lord Mayor of London, how perſecuted by Empſon and Dudley in Henry the Seventh's Reign, 635.

Alaric takes Rome from the Emperor Honorius, 26.

Alban of Verulam with others ſuffers Martyrdom under Dioclefian, 24.

Albanact, one of the three Sons of Brutus, has Albania, now Scotland, for his ſhare in the Kingdom, 5. Defeated and ſlain by Humber King of the Hunns, ibid.

Albany, Alexander Duke of, inſtigates King Edward IV. to a War with Scotland, 478, 479. Made Governour of Scotland by means of the Engliſh Army, 479. The Duke of Glocester's Friendſhip with him, and on what account, ibid.

Albemarl, Edward Plantaginet Duke of. See Aumerl.

Albina, ſaid to be the eldeſt of Dioclefian's fifty Daughters, 2. From her the Name of Albion deriv'd, ibid.

Albion, the ancient Name of this Iſland, 2. from whence deriv'd, ibid.

Alcred, ſlaying Ethelwald, uſurps the Kingdom of the Northumbrians, 48.

Aldfrid recall'd from Ireland, ſucceeds his Brother Ecfrid in the Northumbrian Kingdom, 45. He leaves Ofred, a Child, to ſucceed him, 46.

Aldulf, the Nephew of Ethelwald, ſucceeds King of the Eaſt-Angles, 51.

Alectus treacherouſly ſlays his Friend Carauſius to get the Domion, 23. Is overthrown by Aſclepiodotus, and ſlain, ibid.

Alemannus, reported one of the four Sons of Hiſtion, deſcended from Japhet, and of whom the Alemanni or Germans, 2.

Alençon, Duke of, taken at the Battel of Verneuil, 349. The City betray'd to the Earl of Saliſbury, 350. The Duke releas'd by means of the Duke of Burgundy, 354. His Preſence animates the French, 356. Made General againſt the Engliſh, 360. Takes Joan of Orleans with him, and reduces ſeveral Towns, ibid.

Alexander Cementarius, Sirnam'd Theologus, preaches in King John's Days againſt the Pope's Temporal Power, 169.

Alfage Archbiſhop of Canterbury inhumanely us'd by the Danes, 69. Kill'd out-right by Thrum a Dane, in pity of his Miſery, ibid.

Alfred, the fourth Son of Ethelwolfe, and Succeſſor of his Brother Ethelred, encounters the Danes at Wilton, 55. He gives Battel to the whole Daniſh Power at Edindon, and totally routing them, brings them to terms, 56. He is ſaid to have beſtow'd the Eaſt-Angles on Gytro a Daniſh King, who had been lately baptiz'd, ibid. A long War afterwards maintain'd between him and the Danes, 57, 58. He dies in the thirtieth Year of his Reign, and is bury'd at Winchester, 58. His Noble Character, ibid. and 89.

Alfwold, driving out Eardulfe, uſurps the Kingdom of Northumberland, 50.

Algar Earl of Howland, now Holland, Morcard Lord of Brunne, and Ofgot Governour of Lincoln, ſlaughter a great Multitude of the Danes in Battel with three of their Kings, 55. Overpower'd with Numbers, and drawn into a Snare, Algar dies valiantly fighting, ibid.

Algar the Son of Leofric, baniſh'd by King Edward, joyns with Griffin Prince of South-Wales, 78. Unable to withſtand Harold Earl of Kent, he ſubmits to the King, 79. Baniſh'd, again he recovers his Earldom by force, ibid.

Alipius, made Deputy of the Britiſh Province in the room of Martinus, 25.

Alla begins the Kingdom of Deira in the South part of Northumberland, 35.

Alric King of Kent after Ethelbert the Second, 46. With him dying ends the Race of Hengiſt 49.

Ambroſius Aurelianus, dreaded by Vortimer, 32. Defeats the Saxons in a memorable Battel, ibid. Uncertain whether the Son of Conſtantine the Uſurper, or the ſame with Merlin, and Son of a Roman Conſul, ibid. He ſucceeds Vortigern, as chief Monarch of the Iſle ibid.

Anacletus, the Friend of King Pandraſus, is taken in fight by Brutus, 3. He is forc'd by Brutus to betray his own Countrymen, ibid.

Andragius, one in the Catalogue of ancient Britiſh Kings, 8.

Androgeus, one of Lud's Sons, has London aſſign'd him, and Kent, 8. Forſakes his Claim to the Kingdom, and follows Cæſar's Fortune, 14.

Angels, good and bad, 561.

Anlaff the Dane, with his Army of Iriſh, and Conſtantine King of Scotland, utterly diſcomfited by King Athelſtan, 61.

Anna ſucceeds Sigebert in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Angles, 43. He is ſlain in War by Penda the Mercian, ibid.

Anne Queen, Siſter to the German Emperor, and Wife to Richard II. Her Death and good Character, 271. She favour'd Wickliffe's Doctrines, ibid. Much belov'd by her Husband, ibid.

Anne Queen, Wife to Richard III. and Daughter to the Earl of Warwick, firſt marry'd to Prince Edward, Son to Henry VI. 443. Her ſecond Husband, King Richard, grows weary of her, and ſhe dies, 508, 509. The Turn Buck gives this Event in his Hiſtory, p. 532.

Anne Heireſs of Bretagne, marry'd by Proxy to Maximilian King of the Romans, 598.

Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury forc'd to leave the Realm by William Rufus, 116. He is recall'd by King Henry, 119. His Conteſt with the King, 120.

Antigonus, the Brother of King Pandraſus, taken in Fight by Brutus, 3.

Antoninus, ſent againſt the Caledonians, 23. After the Death of his Father Severus, he takes Hoſtages, and departs to Rome, ibid.

Antwerp, the joyful Reception of the Engliſh Merchants there after a Treaty of Peace and Commerce, 617.

Archigallo depos'd for his Tyranny, 7. Being reſtor'd by his Brother, he becomes a new Man, and reigns worthily, 8.

Archimailus, one in the Number of ancient Britiſh Kings, 8.

Arlette, William the Norman's Mother, marries one Herlain, a Norman Gentleman, 101.

Arminiack, Count de, revolts to the Engliſh, and why, 391, 392. His Daughter affianc'd to Henry VI. ibid. The Match broke off by the Earl of Suffolk, and his Country ruin'd by the Dauphin, ibid.

Armorica in France, peopled by Britains that fled from the Saxons, 31.

Arragon, a King of, depos'd for marrying the Daughter of his Subject, 564.

Arras, Treaty of, between Henry VI. and Charles VII. 376. Comes to nothing, ibid.

Arteville, Jaques Van, gets the Flemings to joyn with Edward III. 215. Kill'd in a Tumult at Ghent, 220.

Arthur, the Victory at Badon-Hill by ſome aſcrib'd to him, which by others is attributed to Ambroſe, 34. Who he was, and whether the Author of ſuch famous Acts as are related of him, ibid. Lord Verulam's Saying of him, 582.

Arthur, Son of Jefferey King John's elder Brother, puts in for the Crown, 159. Is aſſiſted by the French King, ibid. Leaves him, and flies to King John, ibid. Leaves King John, ibid. He is murther'd, 166.

Arthur, eldeſt Son of Henry VII. born, 582. marry'd to Katherine of Spain, 628. Dies, ibid. His Character, ibid. The Diſpute whether he had Carnal Knowledge of the Princeſs, 628, 629.

Artois, Robert de, a main Inſtrument of Philip de Valois's gaining the Crown of France from Edward III. 213. Is diſguſted with King Philip, 214. Inſtigates Edward III. to a War with France, ibid. His Death, 219.

Arviragus, engaging againſt Claudius, keeps up the Battel to a Victory by Perſonating his ſlain Brother Guiderius, 15. Reckon'd fabulous by the Biſhop of Worceſter, 86.

Arundel, Thomas, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, baniſh'd by Richard II. 277. Conſpires with Henry Duke of Lancaſter to depoſe him, 282. His Speech to the Duke to vindicate ſuch a deſign, ibid. His politick Contrivance to ſeize the Perſon of King Richard, 284. His Zeal to have the Duke of Lancaſter elected King, 287. Leads him to the Throne, ibid.

Arundel, Counteſs of, her Speech and Suit to Henry III. 181.

Arundel, Richard Earl of, joyns with the Duke of Glocester to try Michael de la Pool, Richard the Second's Favourite, 256. A Plot to poyſon them, 257. Takes a Fleet of French and Flemings, ibid. His Services miſrepreſented, 258. He reſigns his Office of Admiral, ibid. King Richard II. ſends to ſeize him, 260. He eſcapes, ibid. Another Expedition of his againſt the French, 263. Accus'd by the Duke of Lancaſter of Deſigns againſt him, 271. Seiz'd by King

Richard, and impriſon'd, 276. His defence at his Tryal, 277. His brave End at the Block, ibid. Reckon'd a Martyr by the People, ibid.

Arundel, Fitz-Allen Earl of, beats the French at Beauvais, 167. Takes ſeveral Places, 373. Suppreſſes a Rebellion in Normandy, 374. He is ſlain, ibid.

Arundell, Sir John, his Wickedneſs, 242. And unfortunate Expedition againſt the French, ibid.

Arundel, Thomas, turn'd out of the See of Canterbury, 277. Reſtor'd, 273. A bold Saying of his, 288. He defends the Clergy in Parliament, 290. His Zeal againſt Lollards, and Proſecution of the Lord Cobham, 309. The Judgment of God upon him on that account, 311.

Aſhton, Sir Ralph, made Vice Conſtable of England by the Uſurper Richard III. 529. His Commiſſion, ibid.

Aſſaracus, a Trojan Prince, joyns with Brutus againſt Pandraſus, 3. Another of that Name, together with his Brothers, conquer and ſettle in part of Germany, 5.

Attacots, not known who they were, 86.

Athelſtan, the Son of King Edward the elder by a Concubine, ſolemnly crown'd at Kingſton upon Thames, 61. The Conſpiracy of one Alfred and his Accomplices againſt him diſcover'd, ibid. He gives his Siſter Edgith to Sitric the Dane, but drives out Anlaf and Guthfred out of their Kingdom, ibid. The Story of his dealing with his Brother Edwin queſtion'd as improbable, ibid. He overthrows a vaſt Army of Scots and Iriſh under Anlaff and Conſtantine King of Scotland, ibid. He dies at Gloceſter, and is bury'd at Malmſbury, 62. His Character, ibid. His Courage and Virtues, 90.

Athol, Earl of, hang'd at London, 201.

Athol Walter Earl of, aſſaſſinates James King of Scots, 382.

Aubrey Andrew, Lord Mayor of London, impriſon'd, p. 216.

Audley, James Lord, his Bravery at the Battel of Poictiers, and Generoſity, 226.

Audley, Lord, routed and ſlain by the Earl of Saliſbury, 418.

Audley, Lord, heads the Corniſh Rebels, 618. He is routed, taken, and ignominiouſly beheaded, ibid.

Aulus Plantius ſent againſt this Iſland by the Emperor Claudius, 14. He overthrows Caractacus and Togodumnus, ibid. Is very much put to it by the Britains, ibid. Sends to Claudius to come over and joyn with him, 15. Leaves the Country quiet, and returns Triumphant to Rome, ibid.

Aumerl, Edward Duke of, retires from the Court of Richard II. in diſguſt, 280. Paſſes over to Ireland with Forces to King Richard, 282. Deſerts him, and flies to the Duke of Lancaſter, 284. Charg'd by Sir John Baggot as the Author of the Duke of Gloceſter's Death, 274. Defies him to the Combat, ibid. Charg'd with it by the Lord Fitz-Water, and twenty other Lords, ibid. Vindicated by the Duke of Surry, ibid. Condemn'd to loſe his Eſtate and Honours, ibid. Taken into Favour by Henry IV. 275. Conſpires againſt him, p. 277. Diſcovers the Conſpiracy, and is pardon'd, 278. See York.

Aurelius Conanus, a Britiſh King, one of the five that is ſaid to have reign'd toward the beginning of the Saxon Heptarchy, 56.

Auſtin, with others, ſent over from Rome to preach the Goſpel to the Saxons, 38. He is receiv'd by King Ethelbert, who hears him in a great Aſſembly, ibid. He is ordain'd Archbiſhop of the Engliſh, ibid. He has his Seat at Canterbury, ibid. He ſummons together the Britiſh Biſhops, requiring them to conform with him in Points wherein they differ'd, 39. Upon their refuſal he ſtirs up Ethelfred againſt them, to the ſlaughter of twelve hundred Monks, ibid.

B.

Bacon, Robert and Roger, their Sermon and Pun upon Henry III. 174.

Bagley, Thomas, a Prieſt of Eſſex, a Wickliviſt, burnt, 368.

Baldred the laſt King of Kent ſubmits to Ecbert, 51.

Baldock, Sir Roger, Lord Chancellor, his miſerable end, 210.

Baldock, Walter, Prior of Laund in Leiceſterſhire, hang'd for raiſing falſe Reports againſt the Government in Henry the Fourth's Reign, 284.

Baliol, John Lord of Galloway, made King of Scotland by the Intereſt of King Edward I. 195. Does Homage to him, ibid. Pleads his Cauſe in Perſon before the King, ibid. Leagues with the French, 196. Submits to King Edward, ibid.

Baliol, Edward, driven out of Scotland, is aſſiſted by Edward III. 214. Does Homage for that Crown to Edward III. ibid. Reſigns his Kingdom to King Edward, 226.

Ball, John a Prieſt, preaches the People into a Rebellion under Wat Tyler, 245. His irreverent Behaviour at his Tryal before the King, 248. Said to be a Wickliviſt, ibid.

Banbury, Battel of, 441.

Baniſter, Humphry, the Duke of Buckingham's Servant betrays his Maſter, 506. God's Judgments on him and his Family, 513. Rewarded by Richard III. 533.

Banocksbourn, Battel of, 205. Another there, 595.

Bardolph Lord, rebels, 292. Flies, 294. Returns, and is wounded to Death, 227.

Bardus, one of the firſt Race of Kings fabled to have reign'd in this Iſland, 2. Deſcended from Samothes, ibid.

Barons Wars, the firſt, and the cauſe of it, 160

Barons revolt, 165. They ſwear to defend their Liberties to the laſt drop of their Bloods, ibid. Their League, 166. Their demands of King John, ibid. They obtain the Magna Charta, and Charta Foreſta, 167. They arm, and are reduc'd, ibid. They call in Lewis the French King's Son, 168. Their Succeſſes after his landing, ibid.

Barons refuſe to come to a Parliament, ſummon'd by Henry III. 174. Their League for defence of their Liberties, ibid. They take Arms, 184. They uſurp the Royal Power, 185. Their demand of the King of the Romans, ibid. Diſſentions among them, 186. They deſire Peace, but in vain, 187. They gain the Battel of Lewes, and loſe that of Eveſham, ibid. Their Eſtates confiſcated by Parliament, 188. They hold Ely againſt the King, tho' ſollicited to ſubmit, 189. Prince Edward forces 'em to it, ibid.

Barons Wars, the Second, and the Cauſe of it, 173. And the Continuance, with ſeveral Intermiſſions, from p. 173 to 189. the greateſt part of the Reign of Henry III. It breaks out with greater Rage than ever, 187.

Barons enrag'd at Peirce Gaveſton's Favour, enter into a Confederacy againſt Edward II. 204. Their Haughtineſs in treating with the King, ibid. They ſubmit, and are pardon'd, 205. Their ſecond League, 206. They are defeated, and great Execution made of them, 207.

Baſil, Council of, againſt the Pope's Supremacy, 372. Mediate a Peace between England and France, 376.

Baſtards of the Kings of England, their Arms and Names, 535.

Baſtards, the Civil and Imperial Law againſt them, 536. Examples of their being highly advanc'd, ibid. Of the great Fortune of their Poſterity, 544.

Baſtard, Son of Richard the IIId, made away with, 560.

Bath, Sir Henry, one of Henry the Third's Judges, his famous Caſe, 180.

Battel of Lewes, 187. Of Eveſham, ibid. The little one of Chalons, 192. Of Faukirk, 198. Of Banocksbourn, 205. Another at Banocksbourn, 595. Of Halydoun, 214. Of Crecy, 222. Of Nevills-Croſs againſt the Scots, ibid. Of Poictiers, 226. Of Agincourt, 318. Of Verneuil, 349. Of St. Albans, 412. Of Bloreheath, 418. Of Northampton, 422. Of Wakefield, 425. Of Mortimer's-Croſs, 416, 429. Second, Of St. Albans, 425. Of Touton, 433. Of Levels, 435. Of Banbury, 441. Of Looſcoatfield, 443. Of Gladſmoreheath, 449. Of Tewkſbury, 452. Of Boſworth, 511, 512. Of Stokefield, 587. Of St. Albans in Bretagne, 593. Of Dixmuyde, 598.

Beaufort, the Family of, deſcended from John of Gaunt by Kat. Swinford, queſtion'd if Legitimate or not, 535. The Pope's Charter for their Legitimation, 536. Excluded from inheriting the Crown by Henry IV. 537. Families before them in the Succeſſion, 560.

Becket, Thomas, at firſt Governour of Quercy, and then made Archbiſhop of Canterbury, 134. Gilbert Foliot, Biſhop of Hereford's Saying upon it, ibid. He oppoſes the King in his attempts upon the Clergy, 135. The Pope's Meſſage to him, ibid. He ſwears to obſerve the King's Laws without Reſervation, ibid. Repents of his Oath, ibid. His Carriage at the Parliament of Northampton, ibid. His Tryal before the King and Council, 136. His Actions againſt the King and his Miniſters, 137. The Pope writes in his behalf to the King, 138. The Anſwer to the Pope's Letter, ibid. His Conference with the King, 139. He fully agrees with him, ibid. He ſuſpends the Biſhops, 140. He is ſlain at Canterbury, ibid. Doctors at Paris diſpute, whether he is damn'd or ſav'd, 142. His Death vindicated by Roger a Norman, ibid. He is canoniz'd, ibid. His Tomb viſited by the King of France, 145. An infamous Collect made for him, 149.

Beda, his Death, 47.

Bedford, John Platagenet Duke of, joyns with the Earl of Weſtmoreland to ſuppreſs Archbiſhop Scroop's Rebellion, 293. Made Lord Lieutenant of England, while his Brother King Henry was abſent in France, 315. Drives the French from before Harfleur, 320. Made Regent by Authority of Parliament, 321. He holds a Parliament in the King's abſence, 323. He holds another Parliament, 335. Convoys Queen Katherine into France, 337. Left Regent of France by Henry the Fifth's Will, 338. His Care in that Office, 342, 344. His Alliances for the ſecurity of France, 345. He marries the Duke of Burgundy's Siſter, ibid. Receives a Reinforcement of 10000 Men, 348. Takes Verneuil, and beats the French Army, 349. His Gallantry and Joy, ibid. Goes into England to reconcile his Brother the Duke of Gloceſter with his Unkle the Biſhop of Winchеſter, 352. His Reception there, ibid. Returns to France, 355. Forces the Duke of Bretagne to a Treaty, ibid. Will not ſuffer the Citizens of Orleans to ſurrender to the Duke of Burgundy, 357. He Challenges the French King, 362. His Speech to the Normans to keep 'em faithful, 363. Marries Jaquette of Luxemburgh, and diſguſts the Duke of Burgundy, 369. Forc'd to raiſe the Siege of Laignie, 374. Challenges the Fr. King again, 371. His Zeal for the Engliſh Intereſt, ibid. Quarrels with the Duke of Burgundy, 375. Treats of a Peace with Charles VII. the French King, 376. His Death and Character, 377.

Bedford, Jaſper Tudor Earl of Pembroke, created Duke of, 580. Made General againſt the Earl of Lincoln and Simnell's Army, 586. And at Henry the Seventh's French Expedition, 604. His Death, 619. See Pembroke, Jaſper Earl of.

Beleſme, Robert de, Earl of Shrewſbury, rebels againſt Hen. I. 120. He retires into Normandy, ibid.

Benevolence, a Tax ſo call'd, firſt levy'd by Edward IV. 461. How levy'd by him, ibid. Granted to Henry VII. by Act of Parliament, 602. Another, 631.

Beorn precedes Ethelred in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Angles, 51.

Bericus flying to Rome perſuades the Emperor Claudius to invade this Iſland, .

Berinus a Biſhop, ſent by Pope Honorius, converts the Weſt-Saxons and their Kings to Chriſtianity, 42.

Bernulfe, uſurping the Kingdom of Mercia from Kealwulf is overthrown by Ecbert at Ellandune, 51. Flying to the Eaſt-Angles, is by them ſlain, ibid.

Berry, Duke of, his vaſt Preparations to invade England with a French Army, 257.

Berwick, taken by the Engliſh, 196. A Parliament held there by Edw. I. for Scotland, ibid. Betray'd to the Scots by Peter Spalding the Governour, 206. Recover'd by Edward III. 214. Taken by the Scots, 241. Recover'd by the Engliſh, ibid. Taken and recover'd again, 253. Deliver'd to the Scots by Queen Margaret, 434. Beſieg'd by the Duke of Gloceſter, and ſurrender'd by the Scots, 479.

Birthric, King of the Weſt-Saxons after Kinwulf, 48. He ſecretly ſeeks the Life of Ecbert, 50. is poyſon'd by a Cup which his Wife had prepar'd for another, ibid.

Biſhops, Scots and Engliſh diſagree about the time of keeping Eaſter, 44. Saxon Biſhops zealous for the Romiſh Diſcipline, ibid. Their Juriſdiction aſſign'd by William the Norman, ibid. 109. Biſhops perſuade the Lords to ſubmit to Edw. II. 204. Chooſe a Procurator in caſes of Blood, 276.

Bladud, the Son of Rudhudibras, builds Caerbadus or Bath, 5.

Blackning Princes and popular Perſons, the Uſe of it to their Enemies, 559.

Bleadon in Somerſetſhire, why ſo call'd, 53.

Bleduno, one in the Number of the ancient Britiſh Kings, 8.

Blegadebus, his Excellency in Muſick, 8.

Blewbeard, Capt. his Rebellion againſt Henry VI. 402.

Blois, Charles de, his Pretences to the Dutchy of Bretagne, 219. Aided by the French againſt Monfort and the Engliſh, ibid. Defeated and taken Priſoner by Sir Thomas Dagworth and the Engliſh, 222. Releas'd, 225. Slain in Battel, 229.

Bloreheath, Battel of, between Lancaſter and York, 418.

INDEX to the First Volume.

Baodicea, the Wife of Praſutagus, together with her Daughters, abus'd by the Roman Soldiers, 17. Commands in chief the Britiſh Army againſt the Romans, ibid. Vanquiſh'd by Suetonius, is thought to have poyſon'd her ſelf, ibid.

Bodby, John a Taylor of Worceſterſhire, his Martyrdom in the Reign of Henry IV. 299.

Bohemia, King of, ſaid to be kill'd at the Battel of Creſſi fighting for the French, 222.

Bohun, Humphry Earl of Hereford, takes Arms againſt Edw. I. and why, 197. He ſubmits, 198. Joyns with the Barons againſt Edward II. 204. Taken Priſoner at the Battel of Bannocks-Bourn, 205. He is the occaſion of a ſecond Civil War, 206. Publiſhes the Edict againſt the Spencers, 207. Kill'd at Borough-Brig in Yorkſhire, ibid.

Bona, Daughter to the Duke of Savoy, demanded in Marriage by Edward IV. 437, 562. He deceives her, 563. She is marry'd to John Galezzo Sforça Duke of Milan, ibid.

Bonoſus, a Britain by deſcent, endeavouring to make himſelf Emperor, is vanquiſh'd by Probus, Hangs himſelf, 23.

Boucicault, a Mareſchal of France, taken at the Battel of Agincourt, dies a Priſoner in England, 319.

Bourbon, John Duke of, dies a Priſoner in England after eighteen Years Captivity, 374.

Bourbon, Duke of, incites Lewis the Dauphin to rebel againſt his Father Charles VII. 385. Submits, and is pardon'd, 386.

Bourchier, Thomas, made Archbiſhop of Canterbury, 410. His Greatneſs, ibid. Sides with Hen. VI's Enemies, 421. His Speech to the Lords againſt violating Sanctuaries, in relation to their taking thence Richard Duke of York, Brother to Edward V. 487. He goes to the Queen to perſuade her to deliver him up, 489. His Conference with her, ibid. 490, 491, 518.

Bourdeaux ſurrender'd to the French, 406. Recover'd by the Earl of Shrewſbury, 409.

Bourges, William Archbiſhop, one of the French King's Ambaſſadors to deſire Peace of Hen. V. 314. His arrogant Anſwer to King Henry, 315.

Bowes, long ones, firſt brought into England, 112.

Brackenbury, Sir Robert Lieutenant of the Tower, refuſes to be concern'd in the Murther of Edward V. and his Brother the Duke of York, 501, 550. Kill'd at the Battel of Boſworth, in Richard's Army, 512.

Braibroke, Judge, ſeiz'd in his Circuit and impriſon'd by Fulke de Brent, 173.

Bramber, Sir Nicholas Alderman of London, a Creature of King Richard the Second's Favourites, lays an Ambuſcade to deſtroy the Lords that oppos'd them, 260. Was to be made Duke of Troy, 263. His Cruelty, ibid. He is Condemn'd and Executed, ibid.

Brampton, Lady, carries Perkin Warbeck to Portugal, 606.

Brandon, Sir William, kill'd at the Battel of Boſworth by King Richard himſelf, 512, 542.

Brandon, Charles, his Son. See Suffolk Duke of.

Bray Reginald, chief Agent in managing the Conſpiracy to dethrone Richard III. and advance Henry VII. 505. Complain'd of, when in favour with Henry VII. 618.

Breakſpear, Nicholas, Pope by the Name of Adrian IV. 150.

Breauſe, William de, his Wife's ſharp Anſwer to King John's Meſſengers for Hoſtages, 162. His own, ibid. He flies, ibid. His Wife and Sons famiſh'd to Death, 163.

Brennus and Belinus, the Sons of Dunwallo Mulmutius, contend about the Kingdom, 7. After various Conflicts, they are reconcil'd by their Mother Conuvenna, ibid. They turn their united Forces againſt foreign Parts; but Belinus returns and reigns long in peace, ibid.

Brent, Fulk de, takes Judge Braibrooke in his Circuit, and impriſons him in his Caſtle of Bedford, 173. He is baniſh'd for it, ibid.

Bretagne, John de Monfort Duke of, his Pretentions to that Dutchy, 219. Aſſiſted by Edward III. ibid. His Wife's Valour, ibid. Who, aſſiſted by the Engliſh, is too hard for the French, 222. The War carry'd on by Ladies, 224. His Son ſlays his Competitor Charles de Bloys, 229.

Bretagne, Duke of, expell'd by his Subjects, 242. Aſſiſted by the Engliſh, 243. His Ingratitude to them, ibid. Joyns with the French, but is forc'd to a Treaty with the Engliſh, 355.

Bretagne, Francis Duke of, his Treatment of Henry Earl of Richmond, 521, 522. His Dutchy like to be torn from him by Charles VIII. of France in his old Age, 589, 590. His Death, 594. The Cauſes of the loſs of his Dutchy to the French, ibid.

Brie, the Province of, entirely ſubjected by Henry V. 337.

Britain, the Hiſtory of the Affairs thereof altogether obſcure and uncertain till the coming of Julius Cæſar, 1. By whom firſt peopled, 2. Nam'd firſt Samothea from Samothes; next, Albion, and from whence, ibid. Firſt diſcover'd by the Romans, 83. The moſt ancient State of it, 84. How divided by the Saxons, 87.

Britains ſtoutly oppoſe Cæſar at his landing in this Iſland, 10. They offer him terms of Peace, ibid. Their manner of Fighting, 11. They are defeated by Cæſar, 12. And brought anew to terms of Peace, ibid. A ſharp diſpute between the Britains and the Romans near the Stour in Kent, ibid. Their Nature and Cuſtoms, 13. Their cruel Maſſacre of the Romans, 17. They are acquitted of the Roman Juriſdiction by the Emperor Honorius, not able to defend them againſt their Enemies, 27. They again ſupplicate Honorius for aid, who ſpares them a Roman Legion, ibid. And again, at their renew'd Requeſt, another Supply, ibid. Their ſubmiſſive Letters to Ætius the Roman Conſul, 29. Their Luxury and Wickedneſs, and the Corruption of their Clergy, ibid. Their Embaſſy to the Saxons for their Aid againſt the Scots and Picts, with the Saxons Anſwer, 30. Miſerably harraſs'd by the Saxons, whom they call'd in, 31. Routed by Kerdic, 33. By Kenric and Keaulin, 34. By Cuthulf, 36. They totally vanquiſh Keaulin, ibid. They are put to flight by Kenwalk, 44. Their Miſeries under the Romans, 85. War between the Saxons and them, 87.

Brito, nam'd among the four Sons of Hiſtion, ſprung of Japhet, and from him the Britains ſaid to be deriv'd, 2.

Brittigny, Treaty of, between Edward III. and the French King John his Brother, 228.

Britton, Sir Richard, one of the four Knights that ſlew Thomas Becket at Canterbury, 140.

Brook, Robert Lord, ſent with an Army to the Aid of the Duke of Bretagne by Henry VII. 593. Returns without doing any thing, 594.

Broughton, Sir Thomas, joyns Lambert Simnell's Followers, 586. And is kill'd at Stoke-Fight, 587.

Bruce, Robert, one of the Pretenders to the Crown of Scotland, 195.

Bruce, Robert his Son, Earl of Carrick, flies out of England into Scotland, 190. Is crown'd King by the Scots Malecontents, ibid. Murthers John Comyn, King Edward's Friend, ibid. Entirely routs the Engliſh at Banocksbourn, 205.

Bruce, David, driven into the Iſlands by Edward III. 219. Defeated and taken Priſoner by the Engliſh, 222. Releas'd, 227. Viſits King Edward, 229.

Brutus, ſaid to be deſcended from Æneas a Trojan Prince, 3. Retiring into Greece, after having unfortunately kill'd his Father, he delivers his Countrymen from the Bondage of Pandraſus, ibid. Marries Innogen the eldeſt Daughter of Pandraſus, ibid. He lands upon a deſart Iſland, call'd Leogicia, 4. Where he conſults the Oracle of Diana, ibid. Meets with Corineus, ibid. Overcomes Goffarius Pictus, arrives in this Iſland, ibid. Builds Troja Nova, ibid. His Death, ibid. Sir William Temple reckons this Story fabulous, 83.

Brutus, Sirnam'd Greenſhield, ſucceeds Ebranc, and gives Battel to Brumchildis, 5.

Buchanan, cenſur'd by Milton, 50, 60. His Saying of the fatal Stone, 575.

Buck, George the Hiſtorian, his Errors and Falſities corrected, 514, 515, 516, 517, 525, 528. His Family advanc'd by Richard III. 529. Farther Errors and Falſities in his Hiſtory of that King, 529, 530, 531. He queſtions the Murther of the two young Princes in the Tower, 529. More Errors and Falſities, 541, 548, 549, 551, 552, 553, 554, 556, 560, 561, 562, 567, 568, 571. His vain Oſtentation of his Family and Deſcent from John Buck attainted in Henry the Seventh's firſt Parliament, 545. Who loſes his Head at Boſworth, 581. Buck's Cenſures of Dr. Moreton, and Sir Thomas More's Hiſtory of Edward V. and Richard III. 547.

Buckingham, Humphrey Stafford made Duke of, 393. Slain, 422. His Title to the Crown conſider'd, 471.

Buckingham, Duke of, ſends to the Duke of Gloceſter to offer him his Service on King Edward the Fourth's Death, 482. He conſpires to ſeize the Perſon of Edward V. ibid. Aſſiſts the Duke of Gloceſter to arreſt the Lord Rivers the King's Unkle, and his half Brother the Lord Richard Gray, 484. His Anſwer to Cardinal Bourchier Archbiſhop of Canterbury about Sanctuaries, 487. A long Speech on that Subject made by him, 488. He engages the Protector to take the Crown, 492. His Speech to the Citizens of London to prevail with them to chooſe the Duke of Gloceſter King, 498, 499. To the Duke of Gloceſter to accept the Crown, 499, 523, 524. He quarrels with him when King, 501. Leaves him, 525. His long Conference with Dr. Moreton Biſhop of Ely about dethroning Richard, and ſetting up Henry Earl of Richmond, 502, 503, 504, 505. He ſends to the Counteſs and Earl of Richmond, ibid. Takes Arms, and is defeated by means of a great Flood, 506, 532. Betray'd by Baniſter his Servant, and beheaded, ibid. 533. compare with 520, 523. The Honours King Richard had conferr'd upon him, 530, 531. His Title to the Earldom of Hereford, and Conſtableſhip of England, 531. The ſharp reply King Richard made him when he requir'd that Earldom of him, ibid.

Buckingham, Edward Stafford his eldeſt Son, reſtor'd in Blood, and is ſtyl'd Duke of, 581.

Bullingbrook, Roger Onely ſo call'd, hang'd for Elnor Cobham's Plot, 386. His Learning, 428.

Burdet, Sir Nicholas, his brave Actions in France, 356.

Burdet, Thomas Eſq; unjuſtly put to Death by Edward IV. 476.

Burgh, Hugh de, Henry the Third's chief Miniſter of State, is the main occaſion of the ſecond Barons War, 172, 173. Caſt out of his Offices, ibid.

Burgundy, John Duke of, beſieges Calais, 292. Draws off, ibid. He is a ſecond time unſucceſsful, 299. Wars with the Duke of Orleans, and is aſſiſted by the Engliſh, 300. His Cruelty, 301. Peace between the two Dukes, 303. Kill'd by the Dauphin's order, 326. His Son

Burgundy, Philip Duke of, reſolves to revenge his Father's Death, 326. Makes Peace with Henry V. 327. Enters into a League with Hen. V. 330. He puniſhes the Murtherers of his Father, 332. In Love with the Counteſs of Saliſbury, 349. His War with Jaqueline the Duke of Gloceſter's Wife, 351. Angry with the Duke of Bedford for not ſuffering the City of Orleans to be ſurrender'd to him, 357. His Subtilty, 363. Inſtitutes the Order of the Golden Fleece, and on what occaſion, 365. Diſguſted with the Duke of Bedford, and why, 369. Quarrels with him, 375. Makes Peace with Charles VII. 376. His Reaſon for it to the Engliſh, 377. Call'd Perjur'd Traytor by the Engliſh Council, ibid. Declares War with England, and raiſes an Army to beſiege Calais, 380. He flies away, 381. His farther Treachery, 382. He flies from the Lord Talbot, 384. Pays the Duke of Orleans's Ranſom, and why, 388. His vaſt Territories, 436.

Burgundy, Charles Dukes of, marries Margaret Siſter to Edward IV. 439. Is Edward the Fourth's great Friend, 444. Inclines to leave him in his Misfortunes, 445, 446. His Policy in admitting ſeveral Princes to court his Daughter, 458. His Embaſſy to King Edward, to invite him to the French War, 459. Deceives King Edward, as to his Preparations for the War, 463, 464. Upbraids that King for making a Peace with Lewis XI. 466. His Ambition, 473. His Cruelty, ibid. And Death, ibid.

Burhead, holding of Ethelwolf the Mercian Kingdom after Bertulfe, reduces the North-Welſh to obedience, 53. He marries Ethelſuida the Daughter of King Ethelwolfe, ibid. Driven out of his Kingdom by the Danes, he flies to Rome, where dying, he is bury'd in a Church by the Engliſh School. 56. His Kingdom let out by the Danes to Kelwulf, ibid.

Burly, Sir Simon, unjuſtly put to Death, 263.

Bury, a Parliament held there, and the Duke of Gloceſter murther'd, 396.

Buſhy, Sir John, Speaker of Richard the Second's twenty-third Parliament, packs it to deſtroy the Lords, 276. Beheaded by the Duke of Lancaſter at Briſtol, 283.

Butler, James Earl of Wiltſhire and Ormond, deſerts Henry VI. at the firſt Battel of St. Albans, 412. Deſtroys Newbury, 420. Routed by the Earl of March, 426, 429.

Butler, Eliz. King Edward IV. not contracted to her, 437.

Buxhall, Sir Allen, Conſtable of the Tower, violates the Sanctuary at Weſtminſter, and kills a Gentleman there, 341.

Bygod, Roger Earl of Norfolk, his bold Conference with Edward I. 197. He takes Arms, ibid. He ſubmits, 198. Makes the King Heir of all his Lands, 200.

Cade,

INDEX to the First Volume.

C.

Cade, Jack, rebels, 403. His Answer to the King, ibid. His Address to the Parliament, ibid. Routs and kills Sir Humphry Stafford, 404. Enters London, ibid. Treated by the Citizens, ibid. Uses 'em ill, 405. Deserted by his Followers, ibid. Slain, ibid.

Cadigan, Owen ap, with the Welsh, makes several Inroads into England, 121.

Cadwallon, See Kendwalla.

Caen Town taken by Storm, 322. The Castle surrender'd to the English, ibid. The Fair there robb'd by the French, 370.

Cæsar, See Julius Cæsar.

Caius Sidius Geta behaves himself valiantly against the Britains, 14.

Caius Volusenus sent into Britain by Cæsar to make discovery of the Country and People, 10.

Calais, the Siege of, by Edward III. 223. Surrender'd to him on severe Conditions, ibid. A Mutiny there, 369. Besieg'd by the Duke of Burgundy, Reliev'd by the Duke of Gloucester, 381. A Treaty there between Henry the Sixth and Charles the Seventh, 388.

Caledonians, who they were, 85.

Caligula, a Roman Emperor, 14.

Calverley, Sir Hugh, his Actions against the French in the Reign of Richard II. 239. The first that made use of Guns in the English Service, 287.

Camalodunum, or Maldon, the chief Seat of Kymbeline, 14. Made a Roman Colony, 15.

Camber, one of the Sons of Brutus, has Cambria or Wales allotted him, 5.

Cambridge University, said to be founded by Sigebert King of the East-Angles, 43. Burnt by the Danes, 65.

Cambridge, Edmund Plantagenet Earl of, fifth Son to Edward V. Marries Isabel the King of Spain's Daughter, 231. Sent to recover the Crown of Spain for his Brother the Duke of Lancaster, 244. Returns unsuccessful, 250. Made Duke of York, 254. Vide York, Edmund Duke of.

Cambridge, Richard Earl of, marries Ann Daughter to Roger Mortimer Earl of March, 255. Beheaded for Treason in the Reign of Hen. V. 315.

Cambridge, Richard Plantagenet Earl of, descending from Ann Sister to Edmund, Son of Roger Mortimer, on his Death becomes entitled to all his Estate and Pretences to the Crown, 351. Made Duke of York, 354.

Canterbury, Walter Archbishop of, his Republican Sermon at Edward the Third's Coronation, 210.

Canterbury, a Parliament held there by Richard II. 274.

Canute, the Son of Swane, chosen King after his Father's Death by the Danish Army and Fleet, 69. Is driven back to his Ships by Ethelred, 70. Returns with a great Navy from Denmark, accompany'd with Lachman King of Sweden, and Olave King of Norway, ibid. After several Conflicts with Edmund, he at length divides the Kingdom with him by agreement, 72. After Edmund's Death, reigns sole King, ibid. He endeavours the Extirpation of the Saxon Line, ibid. He settles his Kingdom, and makes Peace with the Princes round about him, ibid. He causes Edric, whose Treason he had made use of, to be slain, and his Body to be thrown over the City-wall, ibid. He subdues Norway, 73. Takes a Voyage to Rome, and offering there rich Gifts, vows amendment of Life; he dies at Shaftsbury, and is bury'd at Winchester, ibid. His Character, ibid. see p. 93, 94, 95.

Capell, Sir William Alderman of London, severely us'd by Henry VII. 612. His second Troubles, 635.

Capis, one in the Catalogue of the ancient Kings, 8.

Capoirus, an ancient British King, 8.

Caractacus, the youngest Son of Cunobeline, succeeds in the Kingdom, 14. Is overthrown by Aulus Plautius, ibid. Heads the Silures against the Romans, 15. Is betray'd by Cartismandua, to whom he fled for Refuge, 16. Is sent to Rome, ibid. His Speech to the Emperor, ibid. By the Bravery of his Carriage he obtains Pardon for himself and all his Company, ibid.

Carausius, grown rich with Piracy, possesses himself of this Island, 23. He fortifies the Wall of Severus, ibid. In the midst of the great Preparations of Constantius Chlorus against him, he is slain by his Friend Alectus, 24.

Carinus, sent by his Father the Emperor to govern this Isle of Britain, is overcome and slain by Diocletian, 23.

Carlisle, John Mark Bishop of, his Speech for King Richard II. 275. Sent to the Tower by the Earl Marshal, 276. Condemn'd for Rebellion, dies before Execution, 279.

Carlisle, Richard III. was Earl of that City, 517.

Cartismandua Queen of the Brigantes, delivers Caractacus bound to the Romans, 16. Deserts her Husband Venutius, and gives both her self and Kingdom to Vellocatus, one of her Esquires, ibid.

Carvilius, a petty King of Britain, assaults the Roman Camp with three others, 13.

Cassibelaun, one of the Sons of Heli, gains the Kingdom by common Consent, 8. His Generosity to his Brother's Sons, ibid. He heads the Britains against Julius Cæsar and the Romans, 12. He is deserted by the Trinobantes, and why, ibid. He yields to Cæsar, 13. Is reported to have had War with Androgeus, dies and is bury'd at York, ibid.

Cassils, a Lord of Bretagne, plunders Plimouth, 288. Lands at Dartmouth, is beaten and slain, 289.

Castello, Adrian de, made Bishop of Hereford by Henry VII. 596. He is made Cardinal, and conspires against the Pope, ibid.

Catteracta, an ancient City in Yorkshire, burnt by Arured a Tyrant, 48.

Catesby, Sir William, a Lawyer and Creature of Richard III. sounds the Lord Hastings, to know if he was for Richard's Usurpation, 492. His Treachery, 493.

Catullus, an ancient British King, 8.

Cavendish, Sir John, Lord chief Justice of England, beheaded by Rebels, 247.

Caxton, William, a Mercer of London, brings Printing into England, 417.

Cerdic, a Saxon Prince, lands at Cerdic-shoar, and overthrows the Britains, 33. Defeats their King Natanleod in a memorable Battel, ibid. Founds the Kingdom of the West-Saxons, ibid. See Kerdic.

Chalcedon, Bishop of, comes into England to desire aid against the Infidels, 281.

Challons, Ralph Esq; his single Combat with a French Knight in presence of the French King, 399.

Chalons, little Battel of, 192.

Chambers, John, rebels against Henry VII. 595. hang'd at York, ibid.

Champagne, the Province of, entirely subjected by Henry V. 337.

Chancery, Court of, its Power and Description, 594.

Chandois, Monsieur a Breton, made Earl of Bath by Henry VII. 581.

Chapel, Henry VII. founded, 639.

Charles IV. Emperor of Germany, comes into France to make a Peace between Edward III. and Charles V. 230.

Charles V. the French King breaks the Treaty his Father made with Edward III. 230. Summons the black Prince to appear before him, ibid. His Death, 243. Is poison'd, ibid.

Charles VI. succeeds him at twelve Years old, 243. Makes mighty Preparations to invade England, 255, 257. Great Expectations of the Success, 257. Desires a Peace with England, 267. Aims at the Universal Monarchy, ibid. His Reception of John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, who came to treat of it, 268. Has a Frenzy, 270. His Answer to Henry the Fifth's Demand of the Crown of France, 314. Sends a splendid Embassy to desire Peace, ibid. His Queen Isabel makes Peace with Henry V. to revenge her Favourite the Duke of Burgundy's Death, kill'd by the Dauphin, 327, 328, 329. He declares his Agreement to the Treaty his Queen made before a Parliament held at Paris, 332. His Death, 342. His Frenzy, and the Cause of, 343.

Charles VII. his Courage in his lowest Condition, 344. He routs the Prince of Orange, a Friend to the English, ibid. He is assisted by the Italians, and his Party increases, 345. He takes Pont Meulan, but loses it, ibid. Reduc'd to very great Streights, 349. His Despair, 357. His Interview with Joan of Arc his Deliverer, 358. Crown'd at Rheims by the Persuasions of Joan of Orleans, 361. His Affairs thrive, ibid. Promises to fight the Duke of Bedford, but runs away, 362. Succeeds more, 363. His demands for a Peace, 376. Reconcil'd to the Duke of Burgundy, ibid. His Successes on the Duke of Bedford's Death, 378, 383. His Son Lewis the Dauphin rebels, 385. His discourse with him, 386. He pardons him, ibid. His farther Successes, 390. Sends an Embassy to Henry VI. about the Match with Rene Duke of Anjou's Daughter, 393. Recovers all, 401, 406. Insults the Coasts of England, 414. His strange Death, 424.

Charles VIII. the French King, aims to annex the Dutchy of Bretagne to the Crown of France, 589. Sends an Embassy to Henry VII. to prevail with him not to assist the Duke of Bretagne, ibid. He dissembles with King Henry, 590. He gains the Battel of St. Albans against the Dukes of Orleans and Bretagne, 593. Dissembles with Maximilian, whose Daughter he had promis'd to marry, 598. And sends an Embassy to Henry VII. to desire him to admit of his marrying Ann Heiress of Bretagne, to whom he pleas'd, 599. His Embassador's Speech to Henry the Seventh's Council, ibid. Marries the Lady Ann after she was marry'd to Maximilian, 601. Buys a Peace, and pays a kind of Tribute to Henry VII. 605. His noble Reception of Perkin Warbeck, 607. He sends him away, ibid. His Expedition into Italy, 613. A League against him, ibid. Recommends Perkin to the Scots King, 614, 615. His Death, 625.

Charles, Son of King John, the first Dauphin of France, 226. He in vain sollicits the Parisians to contribute towards his Father's Redemption, 227. Insulted by the Provost of Paris, ibid. Succeeds his Father in the Throne by the Name of Charles V. 229. See Charles V.

Charles Prince of Castile, afterwards Charles V. contracted to the Princess Mary, second Daughter to Henry VII. 635.

Charta Magna, and Charta Foresta, } Granted to the People by King John, 167. Edward III. perition'd to observe them, 218. He confirms them twelve times, 231.

Charters, ratify'd by Henry III. 181.

Chartres, besieg'd by the Dauphin's Forces, is reliev'd by the Duke of Burgundy detach'd from Henry the Fifth's Army, 334. Lost to the French, 376.

Chaucer, Jeffery, the Father of the English Poetry, when he flourish'd, 307.

Chaury, Sir Robert, Lord Mayor of London, together with the Aldermen, treated at Waltham-Forest by Edward IV. 480.

Cherburgh besieg'd and taken by the English, 324.

Cheren, an ancient British King, 8.

Cheyny, Sir John, Speaker of the Parliamentum Indoctum, his slight of the Archbishop's Speech and Prayers, 290.

Chichely, Henry Archbishop of Canterbury, his Speech to incite Henry V. to the French War, 312. His Zeal, and Charge to the Convocation, against Lollards, 323. His Charitable Acts, 354. His mean Descent, Death and Character, 394.

Chichely, Sir Robert his Brother, and a Grocer of London, his Charity, 354, 385.

Christian Faith receiv'd in Britain by King Lucius, 21. Said to have been preach'd by Faganus and Deruvianus, 22. Others say long before by Simon Zelotes, or Joseph of Arimathea, ibid. Upon what occasion preach'd to the Saxons, 38.

Chrysanthus, the Son of Marcianus, a Bishop, made Deputy of Britain by Theodosius, 26.

Cicester, Bailiff of, suppresses an Insurrection rais'd by several great Lords against Hen. IV. 299. The Loyalty and Bravery of the Inhabitants of that Town on that occasion, ibid.

Cingetorix, a petty King in Britain, assaults the Roman Camp, 13. Is taken Prisoner by Cæsar, ibid.

Cissa succeeds his Father Ella, Founder of the South-Saxon Kingdom, 33.

Clarence, Lionel Duke of, sent into Ireland, 229. Marries the Duke of Milan's Daughter, and dies there soon after, 231.

Clarence, Thomas Plantagenet Duke of, kill'd by the French, 334.

Clarence, George Duke of, sides with the Earl of Warwick against his Brother Edward IV. 439. Marries the Earl's Daughter, ibid. Is disgusted with him, 444. His Wife a great Instrument in bringing him off from the Earl of Warwick her Father, ibid. Made Duke of York by the Earl's means, 446. Deserts the Earl of Warwick, and joyns with his Brother, 448. Suspected by his Brother, 449. One of the Murtherers of Prince Edward, 453. A Proposal of his Marriage to the Heiress of Burgundy, 175. King Edward against it, ibid Betray'd by the Duke of Gloucester, 476. Is imprison'd and murther'd, ibid. His Attainder, ibid. Said to be the first that charg'd King Edward the Fourth's Children with Bastardy, 550.

Clarendon, Sir Roger, hang'd for raising false Reports against Henry IV. 284.

Claudius the Emperor is persuaded by Bericus, though a Britain, to invade this Island, 14. He sends Aulus Plautius hither with an Army, ibid. Comes over himself, and joyns with Plautius, 15.

Defeats

INDEX to the First Volume.

Defeats the Britains in a ſet Battel, and takes Camalodunum, ibid. He returns to Rome, leaving Plautius behind, ibid. He has exceſſive Honours decreed him by the Senate, ibid.

Clergy, their Prerogative very prejudicial to the Nation, 134. A Parliament call'd about them, ibid. Oppoſe the Pope's Actions, 177. Oppoſe all Impoſitions, 188. Edward the Firſt's proceedings againſt them, 192. Their Temporalties ſeiz'd by Edward I. 196. They are not admitted to ſit in Parliament, 197. Many of them advanc'd to Offices in the State by Edward III. 229. Provok'd by the Proceedings of the Parliamentum Indoctum, 290. Henry the Fifth's ſecond Parliament petition the King to ſeize their Temporalties, 312. They are afraid, and put him upon a War with France to divert him from it, ibid. Cheriſh'd by Henry V. 321. A Law to burn 'em in the Hand, 594.

Clifford, Lord, kills the young Prince Edmund Earl of Rutland with his own hand, 425. His Cruelty, ibid. Is Slain, 432.

Clifford, Sir Robert, one of the Conſpirators againſt Hen. VII. in favour of Perkin Warbeck, 608. Goes to him, diſcourſes him, and writes to his Accomplices, that he is certainly Richard Duke of York, ibid. He is brought over to King Henry's Intereſt, 609. Comes to England, and gives Henry VII. an account of the Deſigns form'd againſt him, 610. He impeaches Sir William Stanley, ibid.

Clifford, Richard Biſhop of London, nam'd for Pope by the Council of Conſtance, 324.

Cligellius, an ancient Britiſh King, 8.

Cliſſon, Lord Oliver, a French Commander, inſults the Coaſts of England, 243.

Clodius Albinus ſucceeds Pertinax in the Government of Britain, 22.

Clotenus, one of the ancient Britiſh Kings, 8.

Cloth, Woollen, encourag'd to be made in England by Edward III. 215.

Cobham, Elianor, Wife to the Duke of Gloceſter, her Troubles 386. Suppos'd to be a Lollard, 387.

Coillus, an ancient Britiſh King, 8.

Coilus, the Son of Marius, leaves the Kingdom to Lucius, 21.

Collingburn, William Eſq; of Lydiard in Wiltſhire, hang'd for writing a Dyſtich upon Richard III. 507.

Columbus, Chriſtopher, ſends his Brother Bartholomew to treat with Henry VII. about his Voyage to find out the Weſt-Indies, 624. Bartholomew's being taken by the Pyrates hinders his Negotiation, ibid.

Comail, and two other Britiſh Kings ſlain by Keaulin and his Son Cuthuin, 36.

Combat, offer'd by ſeveral Kings to other Princes and great Commanders, 543.

Comines, Philip de, Cenſur'd unjuſtly by Habington, 462. His Account of Richard Duke of Gloceſter's Submiſſion to his Nephew Edw. V. 518. His Saying of the Earl of Richmond's Treatment by the Duke of Bretagne, 521. His Account of the Tribute paid by the French King to Edw. IV. and the Penſions paid to the Engliſh Nobility, 527. His Character of Henry VII. 534. His Saying of his Title to the Crown, 538. His Deſcription of the Forces he brought out of France with him, 541. Buck reproves him for an Error, 542. Says King Richard murther'd his two Nephews, 552. What he ſays of Edward the Fourth's Marriage with the Lady Eleanor Talbot before he marry'd his Queen, 562, 565. Of his Marriage with the Lady Elizabeth Gray, 563. And of his Death, 565.

Comius of Arras, ſent by Cæſar to make a Party among the Britains, 10. Impriſon'd as a Spy, ibid.

Coniers, Sir John, Leads an Army againſt Edward IV. 440. Defeats Sir Richard Herbert, ibid.

Conſervators of the Kingdom appointed in Parliament in the Reign of Henry III. 178.

Conſpiracy, againſt William Duke of Normandy ſtrangely diſcover'd, ibid. 100, 101. Another againſt him ſuppreſs'd, 106. Another, 107. Againſt William Rufus, 115. Againſt King John, 160. Againſt Henry IV. 277, 292. Againſt Henry V. 315. Againſt Richard III. 505, 506. Againſt Henry VII. by Sir William Stanley and others, 608.

Conſtans, of a Monk made Cæſar, reduces all Spain to his Father Conſtantine's Obedience, 26. Diſplacing Gerontius, is oppos'd by him, and at laſt ſlain, ibid.

Conſtantine, the Son of Conſtantius Chlorus, ſaluted Emperor after his Father's Death, 24. His Mother ſaid to be Helena the Daughter of Coilus a Britiſh Prince, ibid. His eldeſt Son of the ſame Name enjoys, among other Provinces of the Empire, this Iſland alſo, ibid. A common Soldier of the ſame Name, ſaluted Emperor, 26. By the Valour of Oedebicus and Gerontius he gains in France as far as Arles, ibid. By the Conduct of his Son Conſtans and Gerontius he reduces all Spain, ibid. Gerontius diſplac'd by him, calls in the Vandals againſt him, ibid. Beſieg'd by Conſtantius Comes, he turns Prieſt, is afterwards carry'd into Italy, and put to Death, ibid.

Conſtantine, the Son of Cador, ſharply inveigh'd againſt by Gildas, 36. He is ſaid to have murther'd two young Princes of the Blood Royal, ibid.

Conſtantine King of Scotland, joyning with the Danes and Iriſh under Anlaf, is overthrown by Athelſtan, 61.

Conſtantius Chlorus, ſent againſt Carauſius, 23. Defeats Alectus, who is ſlain in the Battel, 24. Is acknowledg'd by the Britains as their Deliverer, ibid. Divides the Empire with Galerius, ibid. Dies at York.

Conſtantius, the Son of Conſtantine, overcomes Magnentius, who conteſted with him for the Empire, 24.

Copland, John, Takes David Bruce King of the Scots Priſoner, and is rewarded by Edward the Third, 222.

Cordelia's ſincere Anſwer to her Father, begets his Diſpleaſure, 5. She is marry'd to Aganippus, a King in Gaul, 6. She receives her Father, rejected by his other Daughters, with moſt dutiful Affection, ibid. Reſtores him to his Crown, and Reigns after him, ibid. Is vanquiſh'd, depos'd and impriſon'd by her two Siſters Sons, ibid.

Cordes Seigneur, his hatred to the Engliſh, 598. His vain Expreſſion to that effect, ibid. Writes to King Henry VII. to deſire a Peace for his Maſter, 604.

Corineus, a Trojan Commander, joyns Forces with Brutus, 2. Slays Imbertus, ibid. Arrives with Brutus in this Iſland; Cornwall, from him denominated falls to his Lot, ibid. He overcomes the Gyant Gogmagog, ibid.

Corniſhmen rebel againſt Henry VII. 617. They march as far as Blackheath, and are routed, 618, 619. They riſe again for Perkin, and march with him to the Siege of Exeter, 621, 622. Deſerted by him, 622.

Coventry, Queen Margaret carries Henry VI. thither from London, and why, 415. Call'd the Queen's ſecret Harbour, 421.

Council General, one at Piſa, 297. At Conſtance, the Engliſh Deputies there, ibid. 314. They condemn Wickliff, 359. At Baſil, their Acts againſt the Pope, 372. At Florence, where the Greek Church pretends to ſubmit to the Roman, 386.

Courts of Juſtice, what Pleas belong to every one, 594.

Creation of Noblemen, 215, 225, 235, 254, 263, 270, 274, 278, 354, 393, 433, 459, 580, 581.

Crecy, Battel of, 222.

Crida, the firſt King of Mercia, 36.

Crofts, Sir Richard, betrays Prince Edward, Son of Henry VI. to King Edward IV. 453. He repents after the Prince's Murther, ibid.

Cromer, Sir John Sheriff of Kent, beheaded by Jack Cade, 404.

Crotoy, taken by the Duke of Bedford Regent of France, 347. The Duke of Burgundy driven from before it by the Lord Talbot, 385.

Cruelty, how juſtify'd by Tyrants, 519.

Cuichelm the Weſt-Saxon ſends Eumerus to aſſaſſin King Edwin, 40. Is baptiz'd at Dorcheſter, but dies the ſame Year, 42.

Cunedagius, the Son of Regan, depoſes his Aunt Cordelia, 6. Shares the Kingdom with his Couſin Marganus, is invaded by him, meets him and overcomes him, ibid.

Cuneglas, a Britiſh King, one of the five that reign'd a little before the Saxons were ſettled, 36.

Cunobeline, See Kymbeline.

Curſue Bell, what it was, 9.

Curſon, Sir Robert, his Treachery to the Earl of Suffolk in Henry the Seventh's Reign, 360.

Cuſtoms, when Impoſts were firſt ſo call'd, 572.

Cutha helps his Father Keaulin againſt Ethelbert, 35. Aſſiſts him at Fethan Laeg, 36.

Cuthred, King of the Weſt-Saxons, joyns with Ethelbald the Mercian, and gains a great Victory over the Welſh, 47. He has a fierce Battel with Ethelbald the Mercian, which he not long ſurvives, ibid. A King of Kent of the ſame Name, 50.

Cuthulfe, the Brother of Keaulin, vanquiſhes the Britains at Bedanford, and takes ſeveral Towns, 36.

Cuthwin, See Keaulin.

Cyprus, King of, viſits King Edward III. 229.

D.

Dæmons and Genius's, a Reflection upon them, 560.

Dagworth, Sir Thomas, Commander of Edward the Third's Army in Bretagne, his Succeſſes there, 222.

Danegelt, the firſt Tax that was ever laid on the Engliſh, 92. Invented by the Traytor Edric, ibid.

Danes firſt appear in the Weſt, 49. They ſlay the King's Collectors of his Cuſtoms, ibid. Landing at Lindisfarn in Yorkſhire, they pillage that Monaſtery, ſlay and captivate ſeveral, both Fryars and others, ibid. Attempting to ſpoil another Monaſtery, they are cut off by the Engliſh, ibid. They make very great waſte in Northumberland, 51. They deſtroy Shepey in Kent, and engage with Ecbert near the River Carr, 52. They are overthrown and put to flight by Ecbert, ibid. Their various Succeſs in the Reign of Ethelwolf, 53. Many great Battels between them and the Engliſh in the Reign of Ethelred, with various Fortune, 54, 55. Their whole Army being defeated, they are brought to Terms by King Alfred, 56. In the ſame King's Reign ſeveral vaſt Fleets of Danes arrive with freſh Supplies, 56, 57, 58. A vaſt Army of them overthrown by King Athelſtan, 61. A Maſſacre committed upon them by the Engliſh in all parts of the Land in the Reign of King Ethelred, 67. An account of their Original, 89. They come for Engliſh Money, 92.

Daniſh Pyrates rob the Engliſh at Sea, 272.

Danius, reckon'd among the ancient Britiſh Kings, 7.

Darby, Henry de Lancaſter Earl of, ſent Ambaſſador to the Pope, and General into Gyenne, 220. His Actions there, ibid.

Darby, Henry of Bullingbroke, eldeſt Son of John of Gaunt, made Earl of, 254. He marries the Heireſs of Humphry de Bohun Earl of Hereford, ibid. Takes Arms with the Lords againſt Richard the Second's Favourites, 260. Defeats the Duke of Ireland at Radcot-bridge, 261. How treated by King Richard, 262. Goes to Pruſſia, 266. Turns againſt the Lords afterwards, 276. Made Duke of Hereford, 278. See Hereford Duke of.

Darby, Thomas Lord Stanly made Earl of, 480.

Dauphin of France, the French King's eldeſt Son firſt call'd ſo, 226.

Dauphin of France, Charles his affront to Henry V. of England, 314. Dies of Grief for the defeat of the French at Agincourt, 319.

Dauphin, Charles, Sends Overtures of Peace to Henry V. 326. Kills the Duke of Burgundy, ibid. Diſpleas'd at the Treaty the French Queen made with Henry V. in behalf of his Father Charles VI. 330. Condemn'd for the Murther of the Duke of Burgundy, and diſinherited by a Parliament held at Paris, 332. Call'd the King of Berry in contempt, 335. Invades King Henry's Conqueſts, 337. Crown'd King at Poictiers by the Name of Charles VII. 343. See Charles VII.

Dawbeny Lord, beats the French at Dixmuide, 598. Beats the Corniſh Rebels at Blackheath, 619.

Death in War, no evil one, 573.

Declaration of Richard Scroop Archbiſhop of York and other Lords in Rebellion againſt Henry IV. 292.

Deform'd, many excellent Captains ſo, 549.

Deruvianus, See Faganus.

Device, one of Edward the Fourth's for a Ring for a Miſtreſs he lov'd, 562.

Devonſhire, Thomas Courtney Earl of, cruelly beheaded by Edward IV. 433.

Devonſhire, John Courtney Earl of, kill'd at Tewksbury Fight, 453.

Devonſhire, Edward Courtney made Earl of, by Henry VII. 580.

Dinham, John Eſq; ſaves Edward Earl of March afterwards Edward IV. 419.

Dinothus Abbot of Bangor, his Speech to Biſhop Auſtin, 39.

Diocleſian, ſuppos'd a King of Syria, and his fifty Daughters, having (all but one) murther'd their Husbands, are ſaid to have been driven upon this Iſland, 2.

Dis, the firſt Peopler of this Iſland, as ſome fabulouſly affirm, 2. The ſame with Samothes, ibid.

Divorces, a ſhort Hiſtory of, 567.

Dixmuyd, Battel of, 597.

Donaldus, ſaid to have headed the Caledonians againſt Septimius Severus, 23

Donaldus King of Scotland, brought to hard Conditions by Osbert and Ella Kings of Northumberland, 54.

INDEX to the First Volume.

Doomsday-Book, why so call'd, 110.

Dorset, Thomas Gray made Marquess by Edward IV. who had marry'd his Mother, 438. One of the Murtherers of Prince Edward, 453. One of the Conspirators that took Arms with the Duke of Bucks against King Richard, 506. Flies to the Earl of Richmond in Bretagne, ibid. Wou'd leave him, but is stopp'd by him, and left Hostage in France, 509. Attainted by King Richard the Usurper's Parliament, 528. Imprison'd by Henry VII. 586. Releas'd, 588.

Dowglass Earl, slain by the Lord Henry Peircy, surnam'd Hotspur, 264.

Dreux, surrender'd to King Henry, and the Earl of Worcester made Governour of it, 335.

Drinking, so much in fashion among the English, that a Law is made to settle the Measure, 91.

Druids falsely alledg'd out of Cæsar to have forbidden the Britains to write their memorable Deeds, 1.

Druis, the third from Samothes, fabulously written the ancientest King of this Island, 2.

Dublin, Robert de Vere Earl of Oxford made Marquiss of, by Richard II. 254.

Dublin, Henry Archbishop of, protests against King John's resigning his Crown to the Pope, 164.

Dublin, a Parliament held there by Ric. II. 271.

Dudley, one of the greatest Instruments of Henry the Seventh's Exactions, chosen Speaker of the House of Commons, 631.

Dunbar Earl, defeats the English, and takes the Lord Henry Peircy, surnam'd Hotspur, 264.

Dunstane, sent by the Nobles to reprove King Edwi for his Luxury, 63. Banish'd by the King, and his Monastery rifled, ibid. Recall'd by King Edgar, ibid. His miraculous Escape, when the rest of the Company were kill'd by the fall of a House, 65.

Dunwallo Mulmutius, Son of Cloten King of Cornwall, reduces the whole Island into a Monarchy, 6. Establishes the Molmutin Laws, ibid.

Durham, Anthony Bishop of, his vast Riches, 201.

Durstus King of the Picts, said to be slain by the joynt Forces of the Britains and Romans, 28.

E.

Eadbald, after the Death of his Father Ethelbert, falls back to Paganism, 40. He runs distracted, but afterwards returns to his right Mind and Faith, by what means it happen'd, ibid. He gives his Sister Edelburga in Marriage to Edwin, ibid. He dies, and leaves his Son Ercombert to succeed him, 42.

Eadbert shares with his two Brothers in the Kingdom of Kent after Withred, 46. His Death, 47.

Eadbright King of Northumberland after Kelwulf, wars against the Picts, 47. Joyns with Unulf King of the Picts against the Britains in Cumberland, 48. Forsakes his Crown for a Monk's Hood, ibid.

Eadbright, otherwise call'd Ethelbert, usurping the Kingdom of Kent, and contending with Kenulph the Mercian is taken Prisoner. 50.

Eadburghat by chance poysons her Husband Birthric with a Cup which she had prepar'd for another, 50. The Choice propos'd to her by Charlemagne, to whom she fled, ibid. He assigns her a rich Monastery to dwell in as Abbess; detected of Unchastity, she is expell'd and dies in Beggary at Pavia, ibid.

Eandred, Son of Eardulf King of Northumberland, reigns after Alfwold, 50. Submits to Ecbert, 51.

Eanfrid, the Son of Ethelfrid, succeeds in the Kingdom of Bernicia, 42.

Eardulf, Suppos'd to have been slain by Ethelred, is made King of the Northumbrians in York after Osbald, 49. In a War rais'd against him by his People he gets the Victory, 50. Is driven out of his Kingdom by Alfwold, ibid.

East-Angle Kingdom, by whom erected, 33. They embrace the Christian Faith, apostatize, and are reclaim'd to it again, 42.

East-Saxon Kingdom, by whom begun, 33. The People converted by Mellitus, 39. They expel their Bishop, and renounce their Faith, are reconverted by Oswi, 43. They relapse, and are again recover'd, 44.

Ebranc succeeds his Father Mempricius in the Kingdom of Britain, 5. Builds Caer Ebranc, now York, and other places, ibid.

Ecbert succeeds his Father Ercombert in the Kingdom of Kent, 44. Dying, leaves a Suspicion of having slain his Unkle's Sons, Elbert and Egelbright, ibid.

Ecbert, of the West-Saxon Lineage, flies from Birthric's Suspicion to Offa, and thence into France, 50. After Birthrick's decease, is recall'd and with general Applause made King, ibid. He subdues the Britains of Cornwall, and beyond Severn, overthrows Bernulfe the Usurper of Mercia at Ellandune or Wilton, 51. The East-Angles having slain Bernulfe, yield to his Sovereignty, ibid. Drives Baldred King of Kent out of his Kingdom, and causes both Kent and other Provinces to submit to his Scepter, ibid. Withlaf of Mercia becomes Tributrary to him, ibid. He gives the Danes Battel by the River Carr, 52. In another Battel he puts to flight a great Army of them, together with the Cornishmen joyning with them, ibid. He dies, and is bury'd at Winchester, ibid. See 88.

Ecferth, the Son of Offa the Mercian, within four Months ends his Reign, 49.

Ecfrid, Oswi's eldest Son succeeds him in the Kingdom of Northumberland, 44. Wins Lindsey from Wulfer the Mercian, ibid. He wars against Ethelred the Brother of Wulfer, 45. He sends Bertus with an Army to subdue Ireland, ibid. Marching against the Picts, is cut off with most of his Army, ibid. His Death reveng'd by Bentfrid a Northumbrian Captain, 46.

Edan, a King of the Scots in Britain, put to flight by Ethelfrid, 38.

Edelard, King of the West-Saxons after Ina, molested with the Rebellions of his Kinsman Oswald, 47. Overcomes those Troubles, dies in Peace, ibid.

Eden, Mr. Alexander, kills Jack Cade, 405.

Edenburgh, burnt by the English, 254. Enter'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester, 479.

Edgar, the Brother and Successor of Edwi in the English Monarchy, recalls Dunstan from Banishment, 63. His peaceable and prosperous Reign, and his Favours towards the Monks, 64. His strict Observance of Justice, and his Care to secure the Nation with a strong Fleet, ibid. He is homag'd and row'd down the River Dee by eight Kings, ibid. His Expostulation with Kened King of Scotland, ibid. He is cheated of Elfrida by the treacherous Duke Othelwold; he revenges himself upon him, and marries her, ibid. Attempting on the Chastity of a young Lady at Andover, he is pleasantly deceiv'd by the Mother, 65. Dying in the height of his Glory, he is bury'd at Glastonbury-Abby, ibid. His vast Navy, 63, 91. He was surnam'd Pacificus, 91.

Edgar, surnam'd Etheling, his Right and Title to the Crown of England from his Grandfather Edmund Ironside, 79. Excluded by Harold, Son of Earl Godwin, 80. He retires into Scotland from William the Norman, 105. Is kindly receiv'd there, ibid. Submits himself to King William, 106. His Pension, and future Conduct, ibid. Goes to the Holy War, 112. Lives with Duke Robert in Normandy, 114. Reconcil'd to William Rufus, ibid.

Edilhere, the Brother and Successor of Anna in the Kingdom of the East-Angles, 44.

Edilwalk the South-Saxon, persuaded to Christianity by Wulfer, 45.

Edmund crown'd King of the East-Angles at Bury, 53. His whole Army put to flight by the Danes; he is taken, bound to a Stake, and shot with Arrows, 54.

Edmund, the Brother and Successor of Athelstan in the English Monarchy, frees Mercia, and takes several Towns from the Danes, 61. He drives Anlaf and Suthfrid out of Northumberland, and Dummail out of Cumberland, 62. The strange manner of his Death, ibid. and 91.

Edmund, surnam'd Ironside, the Son of Ethelred, set up by divers of the Nobles against Canute, 71. In several Battels against the Danes he comes off for the most part victorious, ibid. At length consents to divide the Kingdom with him, 72. His Death thought to have been violent, and not without Canute's consent, ibid. See 93, 94.

Edmund, Son of Henry III. made King of Sicily by the Pope, 184.

Edmund Crouchback, eldest Son of Henry III. put by the Crown, but leaves his Title to Henry IV. 287.

Edmund Archbishop of Canterbury, weary of the Pope's Encroachments on the English Church, quits his See, dies in Retirement, and is canoniz'd by the Council of Lyons, 176.

Edred, the third Brother and Successor of Athelstan, with much ado reduces the Northumbrians, and puts an end to that Kingdom, 62. Dies in the Flower of his Age, and is bury'd at Winchester, ibid. and 91.

Edric, the Son of Edilwalk King of the West-Saxons, slain by Kedwalla the West-Saxon, 45.

Edric, surnam'd Streon, advanc'd by King Ethelred, marries his Daughter Elgiva, 68. He secretly murthers two Noblemen, whom he had invited to his Lodging. 70. He practices against the Life of Prince Edmund, and revolts to the Danes, ibid. His cunning Devices to hinder Edmund in the Prosecution of his Victories against Canute, 71. Is thought by some to have been the Contriver of King Edmund's Murther, 72. The Government of the Mercians conferr'd upon him, ibid. He is put to Death by Canutus, his Head stuck upon a Pole, and set upon the highest Tower in London, ibid. He invents the Tax call'd Danegelt. 92.

Edric, surnam'd Sylvaticus, or the Forester, rebels in the absence of William the Norman, 104. He is taken into Favour by the King, 106.

Edward the Elder, Son and Successor of King Alfred, wars with Ethelwald his Kinsman, who aspiring to the Crown, stirs up the Danes against him, 59. He proves Successful and Potent, divers Princes and great Commanders of the Danes submitting to him, 59, 60, 90. The King and whole Nation of Scotland, with several other Princes and People, do him homage as their Sovereign, 60. He dies at Farendon, and is bury'd at Winchester, ibid.

Edward surnam'd the Younger, Edgar's Son by his first Wife Egelfleda, is advanc'd to the Throne, 65. The Contest in his Reign between the Monks and Secular Priests, each abetted by their several Parties, ibid. Great Mischief done by the falling of a House, where a General Council for deciding the Controversie was held, ibid. Edward inhumanely murther'd by the Treachery of his Stepmother Elfrida, 66.

Edward, Son of Edmund Ironside, Heir Apparent of the Crown, dies at London.

Edward, surnam'd the Confessor, the Son of King Ethelred by Emma, after Hardecnute's Death, is crown'd at Winchester, 76. He seizes on the Treasures of his Mother Queen Emma, ibid. He marries Edith Earl Godwin's Daughter, ibid. He makes Preparation against Magnus King of Norway, but next Year concludes a Peace with Harold Harfager, ibid. He advances the Normans in England, which proves of ill Consequence, ibid. He is oppos'd by Earl Godwin in the Cause of Eustace of Boloigne; banishes the Earl, and divorces his Daughter, whom he had marry'd, 77. Entertains D. William of Normandy, ibid. He sends Odo and Radulfe with a Fleet against Godwin and his Sons exercising Piracy, 78. He is reconcil'd to the Earl, restores his Sons and Daughter to all their former Dignities, ibid. He is said to have design'd Duke William of Normandy his Successor to the Crown, 80. Dies and is bury'd at Westminster, ibid. His Character, ibid. He was the first King that touch'd for the Evil, ibid. See 96, 97.

Edward I. surnam'd Longshanks, his Birth, 177. Made Duke of Aquitain in the Life-time of his Father Henry III. 182. Marries Eleanor the King of Spain's Daughter, ibid. Is reduc'd to great Straights, 184. He defies the Barons, 187. Taken Prisoner at the Battel of Lewis, ibid. Makes his escape, raises a new Army, routs and kills the Earl of Leicester who had taken him, ibid. He forces the Barons in Ely to submit, 189. He undertakes the Holy War, ibid. His undaunted Resolution and Progress in it, 190. He is proclaim'd King tho' in the Holy Land, 192. His Courage and Personal Skill in Arms, ibid. His Proceedings against the Clergy, ibid. He does Homage to the King of France for what Lands he held of him in that Kingdom, ibid. He is Crown'd, ibid. He subdues Wales, 193. He discovers an Impostor, ibid. Does Homage to the French King for his Dominions in France, 194. Punishes corrupt Judges, and banishes the Jews, ibid. Makes his Son Edward Prince of Wales, ibid. His Taxes, 195. His War with the Scots, and the occasion of it, ibid. His Successes in Scotland, 196. He prepares for a War with France, ibid. Seizes the Temporalties of the Clergy, ibid. His Answer to the Barons who refus'd to accompany him in the French War, 197. His Expedition to Flanders, ibid. His ill Success there, 198. His second Expedition into Scotland, ibid. He reduces the Scots, ibid. Makes a Peace with the French, ibid. Another Expedition of his into Scotland, 199. His dealing with Sir Nicholas Segrave, and his rebellious Barons, 199, 200. His last Expedition into Scotland, 200. His Death, Character and Issue, 201.

Edward II. surnam'd of Carnarvon, succeeds his Father Edw. I. His youthful Extravagancies, 202. He recalls his Favourite Peirce Gaveston, whom his Father had banish'd, ibid. Holds a Parliament at Northampton, 203. Marries Isabel Daughter to Philip the Fair King of France, ibid. Arrests the Knights-Templars, ibid. Sends Gaveston Lieutenant into Ireland, and recalls him to marry him to his Neice, ibid. His extravagant Favour to him, ibid. The Lords threaten to depose him, 204. He promises to do every thing they would have, ibid. He restores Gaveston to favour, ibid. The Lords take Arms, ibid. He flies with Gaveston, ibid. He complains of the Lords to the Parliament, 205. Their Answer, ibid. He leads a vast Army into Scotland, is beaten at Bannocksborough, ibid. He quarrels with the Nobility, 206. The Affront he caus'd to be put upon the Earl of Lancaster, ibid. His second Troubles with the Lords on account of the Spencers, 206, 207. He is enrag'd at them, but at last consents to banish the Spencers, ibid. Seizes the Lords, and orders a terrible Execution of them, after the defeat of the Earl of Lancaster, ibid. His second Expedition into Scotland, ibid. He repents of putting the Earl of Lancaster to Death, 208. His Dominions in France seiz'd; his Queen, Son and Brother take Arms against him, 209. He flies, hides, and is taken, ibid. Depos'd by the Parliament, 210. The Form of his resigning the Crown, ibid. His Issue, ibid. He is murther'd, and how, 212.

Edward III. sent over when Prince to do Homage to the French King for Aquitain, 208. Contracted to the Earl of Holland's Daughter, 209. Chosen King in his Father's Life-time by the Parliament, 210. Will not accept of the Crown, unless his Father resigns it, ibid. Crown'd, and goes against Scotland, 211. Does Homage to the French King Philip de Valois, 213. The Ceremony of it, ibid. Provok'd at it, ibid. His War with Scotland, ibid. Assists Edward Baliol against Bruce, 214. Gains the Battel of Halydown, and makes him King, ibid. How he was instigated to undertake his War with France, 214. Makes foreign Alliances in order to it, 215. Invades France, 216. Besieges Tournay, ibid. Obtains a great Victory at Sea, ibid. He challenges the French King to a single Combat, or with aids, 217. His Answer to Archbishop Stratford's Letter of Grievances, 218. His Expedition into Scotland, 219. He passes over into France, 221. His Conquests there, ibid. His Personal Bravery, ibid. He obtains a glorious Victory at Cressi, and his Behaviour after it, 222. His Saying to Edward the Black Prince upon it, ibid. His Victories over the Scots and French in Bretagne, ibid. Besieges and takes Calais, 223. Is chosen by the Electors King of the Romans, and refuses that Honour, 223, 224. His Answer to the French King's Demand of a Battel, ibid. Fights with one Ribaumont a French Knight, and takes him Prisoner, ibid. And beats the French, ibid. Passes again into France, 225. Concludes a Treaty of Peace with the French King, 228. His Generosity and Care of the Treasury, 229. Visited by three Kings, ibid. Prefers many Priests to Offices in the State, ibid. Is unfortunate in France, 230. Revives the War, and is unsuccessful, 231. Makes several Truces, ibid. Is misled in his old Age, 232. His Death and Character, 234. His Charity, Buildings, Magnificence, and Issue, ibid. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, 335. Accus'd of being privy and consenting to the deposing and murthering the King his Father, 573. He calls his Unkle the Earl of Kent Traytor for moving him to restore the Crown, ibid.

Edward IV. Elected King, 427, 430. Hangs Walker the Grocer for a Jest, 431. His Title to the Crown examin'd, ibid. His Courage, 432. Gains the Battel of Towton, 433. His Cruelty, 432, 433. Returns triumphantly to London, ibid. Equips a Fleet against the French, ibid. Endeavours to grow popular, 436. Several Matches propos'd to him, ibid. Treats of one with the Lady Bona, 437. He marries the Lady Elizabeth Gray, ibid. His Reasons to excuse it, ibid. Disgusts his Friends by it, 438. Advances her Relations, ibid. Sends Cotswold Sheep to Spain, ibid. Is in great Streights, 440. His Person seiz'd by the Earl of Warwick, 441. He escapes, and how, 442. His interview with the Earl, ibid. His unfaithfulness to his Word, ibid. His Voluptuousness and Negligence, 444. He flies to the Duke of Burgundy from the Earl of Warwick, 445. His Reception in Holland and Flanders, ibid. Forsaken by the Duke of Burgundy, 446. He is attainted in England, ibid. Lands with a few Forces in England, 447. His Dissimulation to the Citizens of York, ibid. Swears that he does not come for the Crown, ibid. Reconcil'd to his Brother the Duke of Clarence, who had sided with Warwick, 448. Marches to London, ibid. Seizes King Henry the Sixth's Person again, ibid. Marches against the Earl of Warwick, 449. Routs him, 450. And Queen Margaret's Army at Tewksbury, 453. He violates the Sanctuary, and breaks his promise of Pardon, ibid. His Discourse with Prince Edward, Henry the Sixth's Son, ibid. He strikes him, ibid. Returns to London in triumph with Queen Margaret his Prisoner, 454. His Council resolve on King Henry's Murther, 455. He breaks his Word with the Bastard Falconbridge and his Followers, 456. Farther Infidelity of his to the Archbishop of York, 457. His Endeavours to get the Earl of Richmond into his Custody, ibid. He looks towards Affairs abroad, 458. Invited to a War with France by the Duke of Burgundy, 459, 460. He agrees to it, 461. Raises a Benevolence Tax without Act of Parliament, ibid. His Familiarity to his Subjects, ibid. The Army he rais'd for the French War, ibid. Defies Lewis XI. 463. Passes over to Picardy, deceiv'd by the Duke of Burgundy and Count of St. Paul, ibid. Treats of a Peace with Lewis XI. 464, 465. Receives a Tribute of Lewis, ibid. His Answer to the Duke of Burgundy, who upbraided him for making this Peace, 466. His Treachery to the Fr. Noblemen that were to assist him, 467. His Fondness of the French King, and Interview with him, ibid. 468. His Artifices to get the Peace approv'd of, 469. Offers to joyn with Lewis against the Duke of Burgundy, ibid. Returns to England, 470. Endeavours again to get the Earl of Richmond in his power, 471, 472. Indulges himself in Pleasure, 472. Inclin'd to assist the Heiress of Burgundy, hinder'd by the French King, 474, 475. Offers to joyn with him against her, and to share her Estate with him, 475. Puts his Brother the Duke of Clarence to Death, 476. His Cruelty to Mr. Burdet, ibid. Condemn'd for Clarence's Death, 477. His Severity to several Aldermen, ibid. He declares War against James III. King of the Scots, 479. He reforms, grows good, and magnificent, 480. His Favour to the Londoners, ibid. Enrag'd at Lewis XI. breaking the Treaty with him, and refusing to pay Tribute, 481, 482. His Speech to the Privy Council for a War with France, ibid. Is taken sick, 483. His Penitence, ibid. His Death variously reported, ibid. The true cause of it, 484. His Character and Justification, 484, 485. His Issue, ibid. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, 486. His Amours and Incontinence, 562. Marry'd to Eleanor Talbot, Widow of the Lord Butler of Sudesly, ibid. His Marriage with the Lady Elizabeth Gray, and the Reflections made upon it, 563. His Answer to his Mother the Dutchess of York about it, 564. His Death suspected to be untimely, 565.

Edward V. his Succession and Age, 488. The state of Affairs at his Father's Death, ibid. An Account of his Birth, ibid. He is forcibly taken from the Lord Rivers his Unkle by the Dukes of Gloucester and Buckingham, 484. His Saying in excuse of his half Brother the Lord Richard Gray, ibid. He is brought to Town, 485. His solemn Entry, 486, 518. He and his Brother charg'd with Bastardy, 497. He is murther'd in the Tower by Sir James Tyrrell, 501. compare with 518, 519. How the Murtherers were rewarded, 551, 552. His Body lately discover'd, 551.

Edward, firnam'd the Black Prince, Son of Edward III. his Birth, 215. Why he was so call'd, ibid. Created Prince of Wales, 220. Commands the Van of the English Army at the Battel of Cressy at sixteen Years old, 221. His Valour and great Actions, 222. His Father's Commendation of him, ibid. Made Governour of Gascoigne, 225. His Actions there, 226. Beats the French King at Poitiers, ibid. Takes him Prisoner, and is very courteous to him, ibid. Marries the Countess of Kent, and is made Duke of Aquitain, 229. Restores Peter King of Arragon to his Throne, 230. is ill us'd by him, ibid. Returns sick into England, 231. His Death, 232. And Character, ibid.

Edward Prince, Son to Henry VI. born, 410. His Legitimacy question'd, ibid. Flies to France with his Mother, 435. Marry'd to Anne Daughter to the Earl of Warwick, 443. Lands in England, and raises an Army with his Mother Queen Margaret, 451, 452. Is betray'd to King Edward IV. after the Rout at Tewksbury, 453. His bold Reply to King Edward, ibid. Murther'd by the Duke of Gloucester and others, ibid.

Edward Earl of March, Son to Richard Duke of York, flies to Calais, and is proclaim'd Traytor, 419. Attainted, 420. His Declaration and Arrival at London, 421. Takes Henry VI. Prisoner at Northampton, 422. His Professions of Loyalty to him, ibid. Routs the Earls of Pembroke and Ormond, 426, 429. Elected King, 427. Vide Edward IV.

Edward, Son of Richard III. Created Prince of Wales at his Father's Coronation, 510, 525, 527. The manner of it, 527. He enjoys it not long, 525. His Character, ibid. And Death, 534.

Edwi, the Son and Successor of Edmund, is crown'd at Kingston, 63. He banishes Bishop Dunstan, for reproving his Wantonness with Algiva, and proves an Enemy to all Monks, ibid. The Mercians and Northumbrians revolt from him, and set up his Brother Edgar, ibid. He dies with Grief, and is bury'd at Winchester, ibid. and 91.

Edwin, thrown out of the Kingdom of Deira by Ethelfric, 37. Flying to Redwall the East-Angle for Refuge, he is defended against Ethelfric, 40. He exceeds in Power and Extent of Dominion all before him, 40. Marries Edelburga the Sister of Eadbald, ibid. He is wounded by an Assassin from Cuichelm, ibid. The strange Relation of his Conversion to Christianity, 41. He persuades Eorpald the Son of Redwall to embrace the Christian Faith, ibid. He is slain in a Battel against Kedwall, 42.

Edwin Earl of Northumberland, opposes Duke William after the Battel of Hastings, 104. Murther'd by his own Men, 106.

Egremont, Sir Thomas Peircy Lord, his Fray with the Earl of Salisbury's Son, 414.

Egremont, Sir John, rebels against Hen. VII. 595. Is defeated and flies to Flanders, ibid.

Elanius, reckon'd in the Number of ancient British Kings, 7.

Eldadus, the same, 8.

Eldol, the same, 8.

Eleanor Dutchess of Guyenne, divorc'd by her Husband Lewis VII. King of France, 130. Suspected to have been guilty of Incontinence with a Saracen in the East, ibid. Marries Prince Henry, afterwards Henry II. King of England, ibid. She raises Variance between the King and his Sons, 143. Imprison'd by King Henry, and set at liberty by her Son King Richard, 150. She defends the Castle of Mirabel against the French, 160.

Eledaucus, reckon'd among the number of ancient British Kings, 8.

Elfled, the Sister of King Edward the elder, takes Derby from the Danes, 59. Her Army of Mercians victorious against the Welsh, ibid. After several Martial Deeds, she dies at Tamworth, 60.

Elfred, the Son of King Ethelred, betray'd by Earl Godwin, and cruelly made away by Harold, 74.

Elfwald, the Son of Oswulf, succeeding Ethelred in Northumberland, is rebell'd against by two of his Noblemen, Osbald and Ethelheard, 48. He is slain by the Conspiracy of Siggan, one of his Nobles, ibid.

Elfwin, slain in a Battel between his Brother Ecfrid and Ethelred, 45.

Elidure's noble Demeanour towards his depos'd Brother, 8. After Archigallo's Death he resumes the Goverment, but is driven out again, and imprison'd by his two other Brethren, ibid. Is restor'd again to the Sovereignty, ibid.

Eliud, reckon'd in the number of ancient British Kings, 8.

Elizabeth, Widow of Sir John Gray, marry'd to King Edward IV. 437. The Marriage justify', ibid. Her Descent and Fortune, ibid. Crown'd at Westminster, 438. Flies to Sanctuary from the Earl of Warwick, 445. Is against the Duke of of Clarence, 476, 477. Accus'd of Avarice and Cruelty, 478. Her Pride and Indiscretion, 481. Her Contrivances to secure the Succession to her Son, 481. The ancient Nobility's Resentment of her Actions, ibid. She is deceiv'd by the Duke of Gloucester's pernicious Advice, 483. She flies to Sanctuary with her Children, 484. Her Conference with Cardinal Bourchier Archbishop of Canterbury, who came to her to persuade her to deliver up her Son Richard Duke of York to the Duke of Gloucester, 489, 490, 518. Her Speech at the delivery of her Son, 491. Her Marriage with King Edward said to be unlawful, and her Children illegitimate, 497. She enters into a Treaty with the Countess of Richmond to marry the Princess Elizabeth to Henry Earl of Richmond, 505. She is persuaded by King Richard to leave Sanctuary, and deliver up her Daughters to him, 508. She writes to her Son the Marquis of Dorset to quit the Earl of Richmond's Party, 509. The Insolency of her Kindred, 518, 519. How ill she was us'd by Richard III. 528. He promises to maintain her and her Children like Gentlewomen. 551. The Reflection cast upon her by Philip de Comines, 563. All her Goods

INDEX to the First Volume.

Goods and Eſtate ſeiz'd, and her ſelf confin'd, and why, 474, 583, 584. Her various Fortunes, ibid. 585. She founds Queens-College in Cambridge, ibid.

Elizabeth Princeſs, her Daughter contracted to Charles, Son of Lewis XI. 465. Propos'd to be marry'd to Henry Earl of Richmond, to reconcile the Houſes of Lancaſter and York, 504, 505. Her Unkle Richard III. deſigns to marry her, 509. The Letter which Buck pretends ſhe wrote to the Duke of Norfolk on that Subject, 568. She is ſent for by Henry VII. immediately after his Victory at Boſworth, 579. Has ſome Fears that he will not marry her, 580. She is marry'd, 582. The King not fond of her, and why, ibid. She is deliver'd of her eldeſt Son in the eighth Month, ibid. She is Crown'd, after ſtaying two Years for it, 288. Her Death, 629.

Ella the Saxon lands with his three Brothers, and beats the Britains in two Battels, 33. He and his Son Ciſſa take Andreſcheſter in Kent by force, ibid. Begins his Kingdom of the South-Saxons, ibid.

Elwold, Nephew of Ethelwald, reigns King of the Eaſt-Angles after Aldulf, 51.

Ely, William Longchamp Biſhop of, made Vice-Roy of England in the abſence of King Richard at the Holy War, 151. His Arbitrary Actions, 153. His Pride and mean Original, ibid. He is depos'd by Earl John and the Barons, ibid. He incenſes the Pope againſt them, ibid.

Emeric ſucceeds Otha in the Kingdom of Kent, 35.

Emma, the Daughter of Richard Duke of Normandy, marry'd firſt to King Ethelred, 67. Afterwards to Canute, 72. Baniſh'd by her Son-in-law Harold, ſhe retires to Flanders, and is entertain'd by Earl Baldwin, 74. Her Treaſures ſeiz'd on by her Son King Edward; ſhe dies, and is bury'd at Wincheſter, 77. A Tradition concerning her queſtion'd, ibid.

Emperor of Greece, Emanuel Palæologus comes into England to ſollicit Succours of Henry IV. againſt the Turks, 282.

Emperor of Germany, Sigiſmund comes into England, to mediate a Peace between Henry V. and the French King, 320. Made Knight of the Garter, and enters into a League with King Henry, ibid.

Empſon, one of Henry the Seventh's Horſe-Leeches, his Deſcent and Character, 629.

England, reckon'd one of the five chief Nations, and plac'd before Spain by the Council of Conſtance, 324.

Ennianus, reckon'd among the ancient Britiſh Kings, 8. Depos'd for Tyranny, ibid.

Eorpald, the Son of Redwald King of the East-Angles, perſuaded to Chriſtianity by Edwin, 41. He is ſlain in Fight by Ricbert a Pagan, 42.

Ercherwin, ſaid by Huntingdon to be the Founder of the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Saxons, 33.

Ercombert ſucceeds Eadbald in the Kingdom of Kent, 42. The firſt Engliſh King that commanded Idols to be deſtroy'd, ibid.

Eric a Dane, made Earl of Northumberland by Canute in place of Uthric ſlain, 70. He is ſaid by ſome to have made War againſt Malcolm King of the Scots, 72. His Greatneſs ſuſpected by Canute; he is baniſh'd the Realm, 73.

Ermenred, thought to have had more right to the Kingdom than Ercombert, 42.

Erpingham, Sir Thomas, begins the Charge at the Battel of Agincourt, 317.

Eſca, the Son of Hengiſt, ſucceeds him in the Kingdom of Kent, 35.

Eſcwin and Kentwin, the Nephew and Son of Kinegil, ſaid to have ſucceeded Kenwalk in the Government of the Weſt-Saxons, 44. Eſcwin joyns Battle with Wulfer at Bedanhafer, and not long after dies, ibid.

Eſtrildis belov'd by Locrine, 5. Is with her Daughter Sabra thrown into a River, ibid.

Ethelbald, King of Mercia after Kelred, commands all the Provinces on this ſide Humber, 47. He takes the Town of Somerton, ibid. Fraudulently aſſaults part of Northumberland in Eadbert's abſence, ibid. His Encounter at Beorford with Cuthred the Weſt-Saxon, 48. In another Bloody Fight at Secandune he is ſlain, ibid.

Ethelbald and Ethelbert ſhare the Engliſh Saxon Kingdom between them after their Father Ethelwolfe; Ethelbald marries Judith his Father's Widow, 54. Is bury'd at Shireburn, ibid.

Ethelbert ſucceeds Emeric in the Kingdom of Kent, 35. He is defeated at Wibbandun by Keaulin and his Son Cutha, ibid. Enlarges his Dominions from Kent to Humber, 37. Civilly receives St. Auſtin and his Fellow-Preachers of the Goſpel, 38. Is himſelf baptiz'd, ibid. Mov'd by St. Auſtin, he builds St. Peter's Church at Canterbury, and endows it, ibid. He builds and endows St. Paul's Church in London, and the Cathedral at Rocheſter, 39. His Death and Character, ibid.

Ethelbert, Eadbert and Alric ſucceed their Father Vitlred in the Kingdom of Kent, 46. See Eadbright.

Ethelbert the Son of Ethelwolfe, after the Death of Ethelbald, enjoys the whole Kingdom to himſelf, 54. During his Reign the Danes waſte Kent, ib. He is bury'd with his Brother at Sherburn, ibid.

Ethelbrite King of the Eaſt Angles, ſlain by Offa, 51.

Etheldrith refuſing for twelve Years her Huſband Ecfrid's Bed, at length veils her ſelf a Nun, and is made Abbeſs of Ely, 45.

Ethelfred ſucceeds Ethelric in the Kingdom of Northumberland, 37. He waſtes the Britains, 38. Overthrows Edan King of Scots, ibid. In a Battel at Weſtcheſter againſt the Britiſh Forces he ſlays above twelve hundred Monks, 39. Slain by Redwald the Eaſt-Saxon, 49.

Ethelmund and Weolſtan, the oppoſite Leaders of each Party in a Fight between the Worceſterſhire-Men and Wiltſhire-Men ſlain, 50.

Ethelred ſucceeding his Brother Wulfer in the Kingdom of Mercia, recovers Lindſey and other parts, 45. Invades the Kingdom of Kent, ibid. A ſore Battel between him and Ecfrid the Northumbrian, ibid. After the violent Death of his Queen he exchanges his Crown for a Monk's Cowl, 46.

Ethelred the Son of Mollo, the Uſurper Alcled being forſaken by the Northumbrians and depos'd, is crown'd in his ſtead, 48. Having caus'd three of his Noblemen to be treacherouſly ſlain, he is driven into Baniſhment, ibid. After ten Years Baniſhment reſtor'd again, 49. He cruelly and treacherouſly puts to Death Oelf and Oelfwin, the Sons of Elfwald, formerly King, ibid. And afterwards Oſred, who tho' ſhaven a Monk, attempted again upon the Kingdom, ibid. He marries Elfled the Daughter of Offa, ibid. He is miſerably ſlain by his People, ibid.

Ethelred, the Son of Eandred, driven out in his fourth Year, 53. Is re-exalted to his Throne, but ſlain the fourth Year after, ibid.

Ethelred King of the Eaſt-Angles, 51.

Ethelred, the third Son of Ethelwolfe, the third Monarch of the Engliſh Saxons, infeſted with freſh Invaſions of the Danes, 54, 89. He fights ſeveral great Battels with the Danes with various Succeſs, 55. He dies in the fifth Year of his Reign, and is bury'd at Winburn, ibid.

Ethelred, the Son of Edgar by Elfrida, crown'd at Kingſton, 66. Dunſtan at his Baptiſm preſages ill of his future ſlothful Reign, ibid. New Invaſions of the Danes, and great Spoils committed by them in his Reign, 66, 67, 68. Being reduc'd to Streights by the Danes, he retires into Normandy, 69. Is recall'd by his People, and joyfully receiv'd, 70. Drives Canute the Dane back to his Ships, ibid. He dies at London, ibid. See 91, 92, 93.

Ethelric, Ida's Son, expels Edwin the Son of Alla out of the Kingdom of Deira, 37.

Ethelwald, the Son of Oſwald King of Deira, taking part with the Mercians, withdraws his Forces, 44.

Ethelwald, the Brother of Edelhere, ſucceeds him in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Angles, ibid.

Ethelwald, ſirnam'd Mollo, ſet up King of the Northumbrians in the room of Oſwulfe, 48. He ſlays in Battel Oſwin, a Lord that rebell'd againſt him, ibid. Is ſet upon by Alcled, who aſſumes his Place, ibid.

Ethelwolfe, the ſecond Monarch of the Engliſh Saxons, of a mild Nature, not Warlike or Ambitious, 52, 89. He with his Son Ethelbald gives the Danes a total defeat at Aklea or Oak-lea, 53. He dedicates the Tenth of his whole Kingdom towards the Maintenance of Maſſes and Pſalms, for the Proſpering of him and his Captains againſt the Danes, ibid. Takes a Journey to Rome with his Son Alfred, and marries Judith the Daughter of Charles the Bald of France, ibid. He is driven by a Conſpiracy to conſign half his Kingdom to his Son Ethelbald, ibid. and 89. Dies and is bury'd at Wincheſter, 54. His Gifts to the Church, 89.

Ethelwolfe, Earl of Berkſhire, obtains a great Victory over the Danes at Engleſield, 54. In another Battel is ſlain himſelf, 55.

Eveſham, Battel of, 187.

Euſtace Count of Boloigne, Father of the famous Godfrey, revenging the Death of one of his Servants, is ſet upon by the Citizens of Canterbury, 77. He complains to King Edward, who takes his part againſt the Canterburians, and commands Earl Godwin to chaſtize them, but in vain, ibid. Invited by the Engliſh to aſſiſt them againſt William the Norman, 104. Proves unſucceſsful, ibid.

Euſtace Prince, made Duke of Normandy by his Father King Stephen, 126. He is aſſiſted by the King of France, 130. His Death, ibid.

Exchequer, when firſt ſo call'd, 110.

Exeter, John Holland Duke of, taken into favour by Hen. IV. 277. Conſpires againſt him, ibid. Rebels, is taken and beheaded, 279.

Exeter, Thomas Beaufort, Henry the Fifth's Unkle, made Duke of, 321. Appointed Governour of Henry the Sixth's Perſon, 342. His Death, 354.

Exeter, John Holland made Duke of, 393. Taken out of Sanctuary at Weſtminſter by the Duke of York, 413. Dares not fight the Earl of Warwick, 420. Eſcapes at the Battel of Towton, 433. Lives miſerably in Flanders, 446. The manner of his Death uncertain, 450.

Exeter, Henry the Sixth's Progreſs and Acts there, 407. Beſieg'd by Perkin and the Corniſh Rebels, 622. Makes a brave defence, ibid. King Henry VII. gives his own Sword to the Mayor to be carry'd before him, as a Reward for the Bravery of the Citizens, 623.

Exton, Sir Nicholas Lord Mayor of London, diſcovers the Favourites Plot to poyſon the Duke of Gloceſter, 237.

Exton, Sir Peirce, murthers Richard II. and how, 280.

Eyre, Simon Lord Mayor of London, builds Leaden-Hall, 395.

F.

FAganus and Deruvianus, ſaid to have preach'd the Goſpel here, and to have converted almoſt the whole Iſland, 22.

Falaiſe beſieg'd, and upon Articles ſurrender'd to the Engliſh, 323.

Falconbridge Lord, keeps Calais for the Earl of Warwick, 419. Lands in Kent, 420.

Falconbridge, Thomas Nevill ſirnam'd the Baſtard of, his Inſurrection againſt Edward IV. 454. Makes a vain attempt on London, 455. Retires to Sandwich, and fortifies it, ibid. Submits, and is put to Death contrary to Promiſe, 456.

Falſtaffe, Sir John, his Actions and Honours in France, 346, 349, 350, 355. Leaves the Lord Talbot at Patay, 361. Diſgrac'd for it, ibid. Falls upon the French, and beats them near Nancy, 367.

Fauſtus, inceſtuouſly born of Vortimer and his Daughter, lives a devout Life in Glamorganſhire, 31.

Fawkirk, Battel of, 198.

Ferdinand King of Spain, conquers Granada from the Moors, 603.

Fergus King of Scots, ſaid to be ſlain by the joynt Forces of the Britains and Romans, 28.

Ferrex, the Son of Gorbogudo, ſlays in Fight his Brother Porrex, tho' aſſiſted with Forces out of France, 6. Is in Revenge ſlain himſelf by his Mother Videna, ibid.

Fezeby, a Prieſt, one of Richard the Second's Chaplain's, hang'd for Rebellion, 279.

Fitz-Auber, William Earl of Hereford, a main Promoter of William the Norman's Invaſion, 101. His Kindneſs to the Engliſh in Herefordſhire, ibid.

Fitz-Gerauld, Lord Thomas, Brother to the Earl of Kildare, receives Lambert Simnel as King, proclaims and crowns him in Dublin, 584, 586. Kill'd at Stoke fight, 587.

Fitz-Peter, Jefferey, a famous Politician, his Death and Character, 165, 170.

Fitz-Stephens, Robert, firſt ſettles a Colony in Ireland, 141.

Fitz-Urſe, Sir Reginald, one of the four Knights that ſlew Thomas Becket at Canterbury, 140.

Fitz-Walter Lord, one of the Conſpirators in favour of Perkin Warbeck againſt Hen. VII. 608. Beheaded, 610.

Flammock, Thomas a Lawyer, heads the Corniſh Rebels againſt Henry VII. 617. His plauſible Pretences to ſtir the Rabble to a Rebellion, ibid. 618. Hang'd at Tyburn, 619.

Flanders almoſt conquer'd by the Engliſh, 251.

Flattery, odious and contemptible to a generous Spirit, 73.

Fleming, Richard Biſhop of Lincoln, burns Wickliff's Bones forty Years after he was bury'd, 360.

Flemings ſettle in Wales, 121.

Flemings baniſh'd by Henry VII. on Perkin's account, 609.

Fougieres ſurpriz'd by Sir Francis Surianes, 398. The vaſt Booty, 399.

Fowey burnt by the French, 414.

Fox, Richard, made Biſhop of Exeter, and Lord Privy Seal by Henry VII. 582. Biſhop of Durham, 620. He is provident againſt the Scots, ibid. And employ'd in the Negotiation that was the riſe of the Union between England and Scotland, ibid. Goes to the Scots King, 644. And begins the Treaty of his Marriage with the Princeſs Margaret, 624. A great Maſter of Ceremonies and Court-State, 628.

France, Iſle of, entirely ſubdu'd by Hen. V. 337.

France, Kingdom of, it's miſerable Condition in Edward the Third's Wars, 223. Almoſt entirely conquer'd by the Engliſh, 347. Recover'd by the French King, 399.

Francus, nam'd among the four Sons of Heſtion, and from him the Franks ſaid to be deriv'd, 2.

Frederick Abbot of St. Albans, ſubmits to William the Norman, 105.

French, Their Manners and Language firſt affected by the Engliſh Nobility, 76. Their Army is routed by the Normans, ibid. 102. French King ſeizes all the King of England's Dominions in France, 160.

French King Philip I. has the Crown of England given him by the Pope, 164. He prepares to invade England, ibid. Invades Flanders, and is beaten, ibid. Beats the Emperor and his Allies at Bouvines, 169. The French are beaten by the Flemings at the Battel of Courtray, 198. Beaten at Creſſi by the Engliſh, 222. They inſult the Coaſts of England, and burn ſeveral Towns, 228. Are dealt with in the ſame manner by the Engliſh, 239. They again infeſt the Coaſts of England, 243, 252. Make War on the Engliſh, 253. They invade the Iſle of Wight and Caſcoigne, 286. Beaten at Agincourt, 318. Their Condition when Henry V. invaded them, 322. They ſwear Fealty to Henry VI. King of England and France, 344. The advantage they had over the Engliſh in the French Wars, 345. Beaten at Verneuil, 349. They beat the Engliſh at Patay, 361. Beaten near Beauvais and Nancy, 367. They recover all, 401, 406. And inſult the Coaſts of England, 414.

French King about to invade England in favour of Richard II. deſiſts on news of his Death, 281.

Fryon, Stephen, Henry the Seventh's Secretary for the French Tongue, revolts to Charles VIII. and joyns with Perkin, 607.

Friſby, Richard D. D. hang'd for Treaſonable Words in the Reign of Henry IV. 284. Hang'd in his Gray-Fryer's Weeds, 285.

Fulford, Sir Baldwin, undertakes to aſſaſſinate the Earl of Warwick, 420.

Fulgenius, reckon'd among the ancient Britiſh Kings, 8. The Commander in chief of the Caledonians againſt Septimius Severus, ſo call'd by Geoffrey of Monmouth, 23.

G.

G*Abot Sebaſtian*, a Venetian dwelling in Briſtol, His Voyage for Diſcoveries in the Weſt-Indies in the Reign of Henry VII. 624. Brings three Indians to England, 639.

Gaguien, Robert the French Ambaſſador to Henry VII. writes a Satyr againſt him, 601. The King orders an Anſwer to be written to it, ibid.

Galgacus, heads the Britains againſt Julius Agricola, 20.

Gam, David, the brave Welſh Captain, his Saying to King Henry before the Battel of Agincourt, 318. Knighted juſt before he dy'd of the Wounds he receiv'd in that Battel, 340.

Gardner, John, a Wickliviſt, burnt, 384.

Garter, the Order of it inſtituted, 219.

Gaſcoigne, or Guyenne, near a Revolt, through the Male-adminiſtration of Henry the Third's Governours, 181. The Merchants Complaint, 183. Revolts, 231. The People of this Province diſſatisfy'd at King Richard's Diſpoſition, 276. Invaded by the French King, 286. Loſt by Henry VI. 406. An Attempt to recover it, 409. Entirely loſt, 410.

Gaveſton, Peirce, baniſh'd by Edward I. 201. He is recall'd by Edward II. made Earl of Cornwall, and Lord of Man, 202. The Richneſs of his Dreſs and Equipage at the King's Wedding, 203. The Lord's deſire the King to remove him, ibid. Yet he is the more favour'd, ibid. He gives Nicknames to the greateſt Lords in the Kingdom, ibid. The Parliament petition againſt him, and the King ſends him into Ireland, ibid. He returns and marries the King's Neice, Daughter to his Siſter Joan of Acres, ibid. Still farther favour'd, ibid. The Lords again addreſs againſt him, he is baniſh'd; he returns, and is reſtor'd again to favour, 204. Taken Priſoner and beheaded, ibid. His Birth and Character, ibid.

Gaufridus de Saſiola, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, Knighted at York by Richard III. at his ſecond Coronation, and the manner of it, 527.

Gaunt, Citizens of, ſeize the Perſon of Maximilian King of the Romans their Sovereign, 597.

Gemotts Saxon, or Parliaments, what they were, 566.

Genoeſe, a Merchant ſlain at London, 242. The Citizens of Genoa aſſiſted by Richard II. againſt the Sarazens, 266. Rob a Briſtol Merchant, and are puniſh'd, 417.

Gerard, Capt. Thomas, his Treaſon in France. 383.

Germanus, in a publick Diſputation at Verulam, puts to Silence the Chief of the Pelagians, 28. He is entreated by the Britains to head them againſt the Picts and Saxons, ibid. He gains the Victory by a Religious Stratagem, 29. His Death, ibid.

Gerontius, a Britain, by his Valour advances the Succeſs of Conſtantine the Uſurper in France and Spain, 26. Diſplac'd by him, he calls in the Vandals againſt him, ibid. Deſerted by his Soldiers, he defends himſelf valiantly with the Slaughter of three hundred of his Enemies, ibid. He kills his Wife Nennichia, refuſing to outlive him, ibid.

Geruntius, the Son of Elidure, not his immediate Succeſſor, 8.

Gildas more Credible than the Saxon Writers, 33.

Gladſmore-Heath, Battel of, 449, 450.

Glanville, Ranulph, Chief Juſtice of England, his Injuſtice, 145.

Glendour, Owen, rebels with the Welſh, 281. Flies from Hen. IV. 284. Infeſts the Engliſh, 289. His Son and Chancellor taken, 291. Aſſiſted by an army of French, 294. His Death, 298.

Gloceſter, Earl of, revives the War after the Death of Simon Earl of Leiceſter, 188. His Submiſſion conditional to the King, and Hatred to Roger Mortimer, ibid. Submits to the King, 189.

Gloceſter, Gilbert de Clare Earl of, refuſes to conſent to his Siſter's Marriage with Gaveſton, 203. Mediator between the King and his Barons, 204. Kill'd at Banocksborough-Battel, 205.

Glouceſter, Tho. Plantagenet made Duke of, 254. A Plot to poyſon him diſcover'd by the Lord Mayor of London, 257. Condemn'd by the King, his prudent Proceedings upon it, 259. Takes Arms, 260. He is outwardly reconcil'd to the King, 261. Forces him to a Complyance, 262. His Severity, 263. A ſolemn Peace between the King and the Duke, ibid. Accus'd of Treaſon, and ill us'd by the King, 265. Is ſaid to go to Pruſſia, 267. Returns, ibid. Made Duke of Ireland, but not ſuffer'd to go there, 269. Sent to treat of a Peace with France, 270. Is againſt it, ibid. Is againſt Richard the Second's marrying Iſabel the French King's Daughter, 274. Charges King Richard with Cowardice to his Face, 275. Hated by the King, ſeiz'd by him, and murther'd at Calais by Mowbray Earl of Nottingham, 276. Condemn'd after his Death, 278.

Glouceſter, Humphry Plantagenet Duke of, left Regent of England in the abſence of John Duke of Bedford, 337. Left Regent of England by Henry the Fifth's Will, 338. His good Government, 342. Holds a Parliament, 344. His Marriage with Jaqueline Heireſs of Hainault and Holland, and the unhappy Conſequences of it, 346, 347. His unfortunate attempt to recover his Wife's Right, 351. He Challenges the Duke of Burgundy, ibid. Is reconcil'd, ibid. He marries Elianor Cobham, ibid. His Quarrel with the Biſhop of Wincheſter his Unkle, 351, 352. Articles are preſented to the Parliament againſt the Biſhop, 353. Reconcil'd to him, 354. Diſpleas'd with his Legantine Power, 360. Calls a Parliament, 369. Relieves Calais, 381. His Dutcheſs Elianor Cobham's Troubles, 386. Charges the Biſhop of Wincheſter with fourteen Articles of high Crimes, 390. Would marry Henry VI. to the Count D'armagnac's Daughter, 392. Hinder'd by the Earl of Suffolk, ibid. Oppoſes the Duke of Suffolk's Negociation of the Match with Rene Duke of Anjou's Daughter, 393. Turn'd out of the Miniſtry, accus'd and clear'd, 395. Murther'd by the Queen's Faction, 396. The ill Conſequences of it, 397. His Learning, 428.

Glouceſter, Richard Plantagenet Duke of, accompanies his Brother Edward IV. in his Flight from the Earl of Warwick, 445. Commands the Van of King Edward's Army at the Battel of Gladſmoreheath, 449. One of the Murtherers of Prince Edward, 453. Thought to have murther'd Henry VI. 455. Highly valu'd by King Edward, 456, 458. Againſt Edward the Fourth's Peace with Lewis XI. 465. His Deſign, ibid. Haſtens his Brother the Duke of Clarence's Death, 476, 477, 481. Habington's Character of him, 477. His Ambition, 479. Made Lieutenant General againſt the Scots, ibid. Gains the Favour of the Soldiery in that Expedition, ibid. 480. His Diſſimulation, ibid. Zealous for the French War, 483. Charg'd, but unjuſtly, with poyſoning his Brother King Edward, ibid. His Birth and Education, 515. His way of living, and place of Abode, 517. He is ſent General againſt the Scots, 518. His Actions in that War, ibid. His Title to the Crown, 48, 562. His Deſigns to obtain it, ibid. He engages the Duke of Buckingham and other Lords in a Conſpiracy to ſeize the Perſon of Edward V. 483. His Speech to them, ibid. His pernicious Advice to the Queen Dowager, ibid. He arreſts the Lord Rivers, and ſeizes the King, 484. His loud and affected Loyalty when he brought the King to Town, 486, 518. He is choſen Protector, 518. His Devices to get the Duke of York out of Sanctuary, 487, 518. Orders Preparations to be made for the Coronation of Edward V. 491, 492, 518. His Stile, Condition and Authority, as Protector, 522. He engages the Duke of Bucks to aſſiſt him to get the Crown, ibid. His Inſtructions to certain Commiſſioners, containing the formal manner of his taking the Kingdom, ibid. He contrives the Lord Haſtings's Death, and accuſes the Queen of Witchcraft, 493. His Speech to thoſe that came to offer him the Crown, 499, 523. He accepts of it, ibid. 524, 525. See Richard III.

Gloceſter, Earl of, Vide Hugh de Spencer.

Gloceſter, a Parliament held there, 241.

Godwin Earl of Kent and the Weſt Saxons ſtand for Hardecnute, 74. He betrays Prince Elfred to Harold, ibid. Being call'd to account by Hardecnute, he appeales him with a very rich Preſent, 75. He earneſtly exhorts Edward to take upon him the Crown of England, ibid. Marries his Daughter to King Edward, 76. He raiſes Forces in Oppoſition of the French, whom the King favour'd, 77. Is baniſh'd, ibid. He and his Sons uniting in a great Fleet, grow formidable, ibid. Coming up to London with his Ships, and preparing for Battel, a Reconciliation is made between him and the King, 78. Sitting at Table with the King, he ſuddenly ſinks down dead in his Seat, ibid. See 96 97.

Godwin-Sands, otherwiſe Goodwin-Sands, call'd ſo from this Earl. 118.

Gomer, the eldeſt Son of Japhet, believ'd the firſt that Peopled theſe Weſtern and Northern Climes, 2.

Gonorill gains upon the Affection of her Father King Leir by her Diſſimulation, 5. She is marry'd to Maglaunus Duke of Albania, 6. Her Ingratitude to her Father after ſhe had got what ſhe cou'd from him, ibid.

Goodiard Dr. his ſeditious Sermon againſt Edward IV. 444.

Gorbodugo, or Gorbodego, ſucceeds Kinmarcus in the Kingdom, 6.

Gorbonian ſucceeds Morindus in the Kingdom, 7. His Juſtice and Piety, ibid.

Gordon, Katherine, Daughter to Alexander Earl of Huntley, marry'd to Perkin Warbeck, 556, 615. Her Beauty, ibid. King Henry VII. according to Buck, in love with her, ibid. She is ſent to Court by Henry VII. 623. And has a Penſion allow'd her, ibid.

Gough, Sir Matthew a Welſhman, his Bravery and Misfortune at St. Severine, 368. Driven out of St. Denis, but recovers it, 375. He eſcapes narrowly, 400. Kill'd in defence of the City of London againſt Jack Cade, 405.

Gourdman, Margery, burnt for Elianor Cobham's Plot, 386.

Gourney, Sir Thomas, cauſes Edward II. to be murther'd, 212. Flies, and is himſelf murther'd, ibid.

Granada conquer'd by Ferdinand and Iſabella from the Moors, 603.

Gratianus Funarius, the Father of Valentinian, Commander in Chief of the Roman Arms in Britain, 24.

Graveſend burnt by the French, 243.

Gray of Ruthen, Reginald Lord, taken Priſoner by Owen Glendour, marries his Daughter, 281.

Gray, Richard Lord, half Brother to Edward V. arreſted in his Preſence by the Dukes of Gloceſter and Buckingham, 484.

Gray, Sir John of Grooby, at firſt for the Houſe of York, afterwards turns Lancaſtrian, and is ſlain at the Battel of St. Albans, 437, 563. His Son advanc'd by the Marriage of his Widow to Edward IV. 438.

Gregory Archdeacon of Rome, and afterwards Pope, procures the ſending over the Abbot Auſtin and others to preach the Goſpel to the Saxons, 38.

Grievances preſented to King Edward by Lords and Commons, 197. To the Parliament by Jack Cade, 403.

Griffin, Prince of South-Wales, joyning with Algar, and committing great Spoil in Hereford, is purſu'd by Harold Earl of Kent, 78. After a Peace concluded he breaks his Faith, and returns to Hoſtility, 79. Is again reduc'd, ibid. Harold ſent againſt him, brings the Welſh to Submiſſion, ibid. Lurking about the Country, he is taken and ſlain by Griffin Prince of NorthWales, ibid.

Guendolen, the Daughter of Corineus, is marry'd to Locrine the Son of Brutus, 5. Being divorc'd by him, gives him Battel; wherein he is ſlain, ibid. Cauſes Eſtrildis, whom Locrine had marry'd to be thrown into a River with her Daughter Sabra, ibid. Governs fifteen Years in behalf of her Son Madan, ibid.

Gueniver, the Wife of King Arthur, kept from him by Melvas a Britiſh King in the Town of Glaſton, 34.

Guiderius, ſaid to have been the Son of Cunobeline, and ſlain in a Battel againſt Claudius, 15.

Guietheline ſucceeds his Father Gurguntius Barbirus in the Kingdom, 7.

Gunhildis, the Siſter of Swane, with her Huſband Earl Palingus, cruelly murther'd, 67.

Guns firſt made uſe of in the Engl. Service, 287.

Guorangonus, a King of Kent before it was given to the Saxons, 31.

Guortimer, the Son of Vortiger, bends his Endeavours to drive out the Saxons, 31. His Succeſs againſt them in ſeveral Battels, ibid. Dying, he commands his Bones to be bury'd in the Port of Stonar, 32.

Gurdon, Sir Adam, why call'd the Out-law, 192. His Combat with King Edward I. ibid.

Gurdon, Bertram de, kills Richard I. his bold Anſwer to the King, 157. He is rewarded by him, ibid. And after Richard's Death flea'd alive and hang'd, ibid.

Gurguntius Barbirus ſucceeds Belinus in the Kingdom, overcomes the Danes, and gives incouragement to Bartholinus a Spaniard to ſettle a Plantation in Ireland, 7. Another ancient Britiſh King, nam'd Gurguntius, 8.

Guruſtius ſucceeds Rivallo in the Kingdom, 8.

Gurney Lord, a German in Engliſh Pay, his Treaſon and Puniſhment, 230.

Guy of Luſignan, made King of Cyprus by Richard I. 153.

Guyenne, loſt to the French, 406. Vide Gaſcoigne.

Gyrtha, Son of Earl Godwin, accompanies his Father into Flanders, together with his Brothers Toſti and Swane, 77. His noble Advice to his Brother Harold, as he was ready to give Battel to Duke William of Normandy, 81. He is ſlain in the ſaid Battel with his Brothers Harold and Leofwin, 82.

Gyrthro, or Gothrum, a Daniſh King, baptiz'd and receiv'd out of the Font by King Alfred, 56. The Kingdom of the Eaſt-Angles ſaid to be beſtow'd on him to hold of the ſaid Alfred, ibid.

H.

Hales, Sir Stephen, his baſe Complyance with the Suffolk Rebels, 247.

Hall, Sir Philip, bravely defends the Caſtle of St. Mark, 291.

Hall, Sir David, oppoſes the Duke of Somerſet, who loſt France, 400. Goes to Ireland to complain of the Duke of Somerſet to the Duke of York, 401.

Halydoun, Battel of, 214.

Hardecnute, the Son of Canute by Emma, call'd over from Bruges, and receiv'd King with general Acclamation, 74. He calls Godwin and others to account about the Death of Elfred, 75, Enrag'd at the Citizens of Worceſter for killing his Tax-gatherers, he ſends an Army againſt them, and burns the City, ibid. He kindly receives and entertains his half Brother Edward, ibid. Eating and Drinking hard at a great Feaſt, he falls down Speechleſs, and ſoon after expiring, is bury'd at Wincheſter, ibid. and 95.

Harfleur beſieg'd and taken by Henry V. at his firſt landing in France, 316. Taken again, 383.

Harkly, Sir Andrew, Conſtable of Carliſle, routed the Barons at Burrough-Brig in Yorkſhire, ſlew the Earl of Hereford, and took the Earl of Lancaſter, and other Lords, Priſoners, 207. For which he is made Earl of Carliſle, 208. He deſerts to the Scotsi, is degraded and hang'd, ibid. He was a Scot, 560.

Harold, ſirnam'd Harefoot, the Son of Canute, elected King by Duke Leofric and the Mercians, 74. He baniſhes his Mother-in-law Emma, ibid. His Perfidiouſneſs and Cruelty towards Elfred the Son of Ethelred, ibid. He dies and is bury'd at Wincheſter, ibid. and 93.

Harold, Son of Godwin, made Earl of Kent, and ſent againſt Griffin Prince of Wales, 79. He reduces him at laſt to utmoſt Extremity, ibid. being caſt upon the Coaſt of Normandy, and brought to Duke William, he promiſes his Endeavours to make him King of England, ibid. He takes the Crown himſelf, 80. Puts off Duke William, demanding it with a ſlighting Anſwer. 81. Is invaded by his Brother Toſti, ibid. By Harold Harfager King of Norway, whom he utterly overthrows and ſlays, together with Toſti, ibid. By Duke William of Normandy, ibid. Is overthrown at the Battel of Haſtings, and ſlain with his two Brothers Leofwin and Gyrtha, 82. See 97, 98. Some Hiſtorians pretend he ſurviv'd this Battel, 554.

Haſtings Lord, accompanies King Edward in his Flight from the Earl of Warwick, 445. One of the Murtherers of Prince Edward, 453. His Loyalty to Edward V. 484. He endeavours to comfort the Queen Dowager, ibid. He appeaſes ſeveral Tumuls, 485. He ſatisfies thoſe that diſtruſted the Duke of Gloceſter's Fidelity to the King, 492. He is careſt, ibid. And ſounded by Cateſby the Lawyer his Confidence, ibid. His Death contriv'd, 493. He is arreſted, ibid. He kept Jane Shore, ibid. Order'd to prepare for Death, 494. Omens of it, ibid. He is beheaded, the People murmur at it, 495. compare with 519.

Havering, Sir John, his bold Speech to the Clergy in the Reign of Edward I. 193.

Hawkwood, Sir John, his mean Birth, Adventures, and great Fortune, 230.

Hawis, Alderman, perſecuted by Empſon and Dudley, dies of Grief, 635.

Hawl Mr. kill'd in the Sanctuary at Weſtminſter by the Duke of Lancaſter's means, 241.

Heli, reckon'd among the ancient Britiſh Kings, 8.

Helvias Pertinax ſucceeds Ulpius Marcellus in the Government of Britain, 22.

Hengiſt and Horſa, with an Army of Saxons, Jutes and Angles, land in the Iſle of Thanet, 30. Hengiſt invites over more of his Countrymen, 31. He gains Advantages of Vortiger by marrying his Daughter to him, ibid. He takes on him the Title of King, 32. His ſeveral Battels againſt the Britains, ibid. His treacherous Slaughter of three hundred Britiſh Lords, under pretence of Treaty, ibid.

Henninus Duke of Cornwall, hath Regan the Daughter of King Leir given him in Marriage, 6.

Henry, younger Son of William the Norman, deſerted by both his Brother Robert and William Rufus, takes Arms, 113. At War with William Rufus, 114. Peace concluded between 'em, ibid. Flies to the French King, ibid. Choſen King of England by the Name of Henry I. 119. Why call'd Beau-Clerk, ibid. Marries into the Engliſh Royal Line, ibid. Born after his Father was Crown'd, ibid. He ſtudy'd at Cambridge, ibid. He reſtores King Edward's Laws, ibid. His Agreement with his elder Brother Robert, 120. His Conteſt with Archbiſhop Anſelm, and his ſecond War with Duke Robert, ibid. He gets Normandy, ibid. His Proſperity, ibid. He quarrels with the King of France, 121. Peace made with him, 122. His Troubles occaſion'd by his Son's Death, ibid. His Reformations, 123. His ways to raiſe Money, ibid. His Orders for his Foreſts and Parks; his chief Counſellors, of his Perſon and Iſſue, ibid. His Death, ibid. He is courſely embalm'd. ibid. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, ibid.

Henry II. his Fortune and Adventures before he came to the Crown, 130, 131. His firſt Parliament, 132. He reſumes all Grants of Lands belonging to the Crown, ibid. Takes Anjou from his Brother Jeffrey, 133. His Dominions in France, ibid. He endeavours to get Tholouſe, ibid. Makes Peace with the King of France, and marries his Son Henry to the French King's Daughter, 134. His Dealings with the Clergy, ibid. With Becket, 135. His Embaſſy to the French King and the Pope concerning Becket, 136. Puts out an Edict againſt the Pope and all his Agents, 137. He reduces the Welſh, and paſſes into Normandy, ibid. Returns into England, 138. Revives the Conteſt with Becket, ibid. The Anſwer to the Pope's Letters on that Occaſion, ibid. He makes his Son Henry his Colleague in the Throne, and has him Crown'd, 139. His Conference with Becket, ibid. He is fully agreed with him, ibid. He is reported to carry up the firſt Diſh at his Son's Table, ibid. Becket's Death aggravated and laid to his Charge, 140. He clears himſelf of it, ibid. He conquers Ireland, 141, 142. His Voyage into Normandy, where he clears himſelf of Becket's Murther, 142. He is enamour'd of Roſamund the Lord Clifford's Daughter, 143. He treats with his Son Henry, who had taken Arms againſt him, 144. He goes Barefoot to Becket's Tomb, ibid. Concludes a Treaty with his Sons, after he had reduc'd them to great Streights, ibid. He is whipt by Monks to attone for Becket's Death, ibid. He paſſes over into Normandy, and returns, ibid. & 145. His Son Henry comes back with him, ibid. He murthers his Sons and Daughters, ibid. But keeps Alice the French King's Daughter from his Son Richard, ibid. He vows an Expedition into the Holy Land, ibid. He determines a Controverſie between the Kings of Caſtile and Navarr, ibid. He ſends his Son John into Ireland with the Title of King, 146. His Devices to raiſe Money for his Wars, ibid. His great Expences and Generoſity, ibid. He quarrels with his Sons, ibid. He is reconcil'd to his Son Henry, and falls out with him again, 147. He is in danger to be ſhot by his Sons Men, ibid. His Conteſts with the King of France, ibid. They both reſolve to undertake the Holy War, 148. His Preparations for it, ibid. The Deſign laid aſide, and upon what Occaſion, ibid. He degenerates from his wonted Courage, ibid. His Death, ibid. His Iſſue, ibid. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, ibid. His Greatneſs, 515.

Henry III. ſucceeds his Father King John, and is crown'd at Gloceſter, 170. Crown'd again, 172. Takes the Government on himſelf, ibid. Holds ſeveral Parliaments, makes Reſumptions, and confirms the Liberties of the Nation, ibid. Quarrels with his Brother Richard Earl of Cornwall, which occaſions the ſecond Barons War, 173. He paſſes over into France, but does nothing, ibid. He calls his Officers to account, ibid. He is unſucceſsful againſt the Barons, 174. He holds other Parliaments, ibid. and 175, 176. He prevaricates with the Nobility, ibid. He removes other Officers, ibid. He invites Foreigners into England, and advances them, ibid. His extravagant Expences on his Wife's Relations, 177. His ill ſucceſs in France, ibid. Gains Wales, ibid. His Expedition againſt the Scots, 178. His ways of raiſing Money, ibid. He holds other Parliaments, ibid. He grows ſevere, his mean ways of filling his Exchequer, 179. His ſaying of the Riches of London, ibid. Reprov'd by the Maſter of Clarkenwell-Hoſpital, 181. His Anſwer to the Counteſs of Arundel, ibid. He paſſes over to Guyenne, 182. His ſaying on being reprov'd for his Extravagance on his foreign Relations, ibid Other ways of his to raiſe Money, ibid. His great Expences, 183 Holds ſeveral Parliaments, 178 to 184. Why call'd Proteus by Matthew Paris, 184. He is forc'd by the Barons to call a Parliament, 185. He ſeeks to recover the Power the Lords had taken from him, 186. He makes a ſhameful Reſignation of his Right to Normandy, &c. to the King of France, ibid. Is taken Priſoner, 187. Set at liberty by his Son Prince Edward after the Battel of Eveſham, ibid. His Death and Iſſue, 190. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, 191.

Henry IV. Crown'd; his three Titles to the Crown, 274. The Crown ſettled upon him and his Heirs in Parliament, 276. His Prudence in ſettling the Government, ibid. and 275. He ſends Ambaſſadors to foreign Princes, 277. His Saying of Churches Revenues, ibid. A Conſpiracy againſt him, how diſcover'd, 278. He flies to London from the Rebels, and ſends for Succours, ibid. Marches againſt them, 279. Thought to be the Contriver of King Richard's Death, ibid. Others excuſe him in ſome meaſure, as not directly ordering him to be put to Death, 278. His Anſwer to an Embaſſy from France, 281. He neglects the Welſh Rebellion, and refuſes to redeem Edmund Mortimer; he wars with Scotland, ibid. His Entertainment of the Greek Emperor, 282. His Expedition againſt the Scots and Welſh, 283, 284, 285. He marries the Dutcheſs of Bretagne, 286. His Speech in Parliament, ibid. His Mercy to Rebels, 287. He fights and beats the Lord Percy, ſirnam'd Hotſpur, 288. His Anſwer to the Duke of Orleans's Challenge, 289. His Expedition againſt the Welſh, ibid. Like to be taken by the French,

INDEX to the First Volume.

French, 298. He fits out a Fleet againſt 'em, 299. Aſſiſts the Duke of Burgundy, 300. His Anſwer to the Duke of Orleans's Meſſengers, 302. His Acts of Piety, Death, Iſſue and Character, 304, 305. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, 306.

Henry V. created Prince of Wales, &c. 274. Defends his Father Henry IV. in the Battel with Hotſpur, 288. Goes againſt the Welſh, ibid. and 299. Beats them in two Battels, ibid. A Motion for his Marriage with the Princeſs Katherine the French King's Daughter, 300. His Looſeneſs, 302. Accus'd of Diſloyalty, his Stratagem to clear himſelf, 303. An Account of his Birth and Education, 308. He renounces his ill Company, ibid. Is Crown'd, ibid. His Piety to King Richard the Second's Body, and Charity to his Soul, 309. Put upon the French War by the Clergy, and why, 312. His Embaſſy to the French King Charles VI. to demand the Crown of France, 313. His Conference with the French Ambaſſadors ſent by Charles to deſire Peace, 315. His Speech to the Lords on the Diſcovery of the Earl of Cambridge's Plot, 316. He lands in France, ibid. His whole Strength by Sea and Land in that Expedition, ibid. He takes Harfleur, ibid. He challenges the Dauphin to a ſingle Combat, 317. Marches towards Callis to winter, paſſes the Some; his Anſwer to the French King's Defiance, ibid. Fights the French, and gains a glorious Victory at Agincourt, ibid. The Number of both Armies, and of the Slain on both ſides, 318. His Piety, ibid. His Treaty with the German Emperor in England, 320. He favours the Clergy, 321. He pawns his Crown, raiſes another Army, and paſſes over again to France, ibid. His Generoſity, ibid. Beſieges and takes Caen, 322. Farther Succeſſes, 323, 324. Takes Roan, and upon what Terms, 325. His farther Succeſſes, ibid. Peace propos'd to him by the Dauphin, ibid. His Conference with the Duke of Burgundy, 326. Farther Succeſſes, ibid. He makes a Peace with the Queen in behalf of the French King, and marries the Princeſs Katherine, 327. The Duke of Burgundy and Peers of France ſwear Allegiance to him, ibid. He feaſts the French Court, 328. His League with the Duke of Burgundy, 329. He endeavours to ſubdue the Dauphin, 231. His Succeſſes, ibid. 332. Holds a Parliament at Paris, ibid. He rules in Paris, 333. Goes into England to crown his Queen, ibid. His Progreſs into ſeveral Counties, ibid. He raiſes a third Army, and paſſes with it into France, 334. He viſits the French King and Queen, ibid. His Succeſſes, 334, 335, 336. His Son Prince Henry born, 335. His Saying upon it, 336. He takes Meaux, ibid. Keeps his Court at Paris, with his Wife Queen Katherine, 337. Leaves it to march to the aſſiſtance of the Duke of Burgundy, ibid. Falls ſick of a Fever and Flux at Senlis, ibid. His Speech before his Death, ibid. His Preparation for it, Death and Burial, 338. His Character, 339.

Henry VI. ſirnam'd of Monmouth, ſucceeds his Father Henry V. at nine Months old, 342. Solemnly proclaim'd at Paris, 343. He ſits while an Infant on his Mother's Knee in the Houſe of Lords, 347. He is again brought into the Houſe, and ſhewn to the People, 350. He is Crown'd at Weſtminſter, 363. And at Paris, 367. Crowns Henry Beauchamp Earl of Warwick King of Wight with his own hands, 390. A Match concluded between him and the Count D'Armagnac's Daughter, 392. Broken off by the Earl of Suffolk, ibid. Truce concluded with Charles VI. the French King, 393. Is for marrying the Duke of Anjou's Daughter, ibid. He marries her, ibid. The Match cenſur'd, 394. Gives up Anjou and Mayne, and turns the Duke of Gloceſter out of the Miniſtry, 395. Has a Golden Roſe ſent him by the Pope, 397. He leaves all to the Queen and Suffolk's Management, ibid. The Duke of York and Nobility diſguſted, ibid. The Duke firſt mentions his own Title to the Crown, ibid. Loſes all France, 399, 400. Flies from Jack Cade, 404. His Progreſs and Acts at Exeter, 407. His Compliance with the Duke of York, 408. He is ſick, 410. The Riſe of his Wars with the Houſe of York, ibid. Carry'd ſick to the Parliament Houſe, 411. Meets the Duke of York at St. Albans, ibid. Defeated and taken at the firſt Battel of St. Albans, 412. Makes a Peace with the Duke of York, and his Faction, 416. Defeated at Northampton, and taken again, 422. His ſeventeenth Parliament ſettle the Crown on the Duke of York, 424. He ſubmits to it, 425. Recovers his Liberty at the ſecond Battel of St. Albans, 426. He is depos'd by Warwick's Army, and the Londoners, 427. His Character, ibid. His Title to the Crown, 431. Flies to Scotland, 433. Foreign Princes refuſe to help him, 434. Taken in diſguiſe, and us'd barbarouſly, 435. Releas'd by the Earl of Warwick, but not reſtor'd, 446. He is impriſon'd by Edward IV. 448. Carry'd by him to the Battel when he fought the Earl of Warwick, 449. Murther'd by Edward the Fourth's Command, or Privity, 455. His Body bleeds when expos'd, ibid. His Character, 456. Endeavours to have him canoniz'd, 456, 634.

Henry VII. ſucceeds Richard III. by three Titles to the Crown, 578, 579. Marches to London, and is every where well receiv'd, 579. His Entrance, 580. Why he put off his marrying the Princeſs Elizabeth till after his Coronation, and firſt Seſſion of Parliament, ibid. Is Crown'd, ibid. Inſtitutes Yeomen of the Guard, ibid. His Wiſdom in procuring the Settlement of the Crown on himſelf, 581. Why he employ'd Biſhops, 582. He marries the Princeſs Elizabeth, but is not very fond of her, ibid. His Progreſs to the North, ibid. Hated, and why, 583. His Concern at the news of Lambert Symnell's being proclaim'd in Ireland, 584. Beats the Earl of Lincoln and Symnell at Stokefield, 587. Puniſhes the Rebels, ibid. and 588. Sanctuaries a Grievance to him redreſs'd by the Pope, ibid. Concludes a Truce with James III. of Scotland, ibid. His prudent Anſwer to the French Ambaſſadors about Charles VIII's War with the Duke of Bretagne his Friend, 589. His Negotiations to prevent that War, 590. Asks his ſecond Parliament's Advice about it, 592. His ſeverity in levying a Tax, occaſions a Rebellion, 595. His Saying on the News of it, ibid. An excellent Legiſlator, 596. Incourages Trade, 597, Aſſiſts Maximilian King of the Romans againſt the Flemings his Subjects, and the French, 598. He demands the Crown of France of the French Ambaſſadors, 601. The Fr. Ambaſſadors Anſwer, ibid. His Speech at the opening his third Parliament, ibid. He pretends War only to raiſe Money, 602. Gets a Law for Barons to alienate their Lands without Fines, 603. He ſuccours Maximilian effectually, ibid. His Preparations for the French War, 604. His Policy, ibid. He paſſes over to Calais, as if he meant a War, ibid. Beſieges Boloigne, yet treats of Peace, 605. Sells the French King a Peace, ibid. His Arts to amuſe his People about it, ibid. Writes bragging Letters to the Lord Mayor, ibid. Perkin Warbeck ſet up againſt him, 606, 607. His Subjects murmur, 608. His Proceeding on news of Perkin's being own'd abroad as Duke of York, ibid. His Spies and Agents to diſcover the Counterfeit, ibid. 609. Sends an Ambaſſador to the Arch-Duke Sovereign of the Netherlands, to demand him, ibid. He baniſhes the Flemings on his Denial, ibid. He puts Sir William Stanly who crown'd him to Death, 610. His Council rail'd at, 611. Forfeitures on penal Laws, a Blot in his Reign, 612. Enters into a League with the Italian Princes for the preſervation of Italy againſt Charles VII. 613. Favourable to Lawyers, ibid. Makes Laws to raiſe Money, as well as to correct Manners, ibid. Concludes the Treaty, call'd Intercuſſus Magnus, with the Arch-Duke, 617. Gains by his Wars, ibid. His Conduct with reſpect to the Corniſh Rebellion, 618. Hangs but the three Leaders of it when 'twas ſuppreſs'd, 619. Brings about a Treaty with Scotland, 620. Receives a conſecrated Sword from the Pope with great Solemnity, 621. Not Cruel in his Executions, 623. How he loſt the Diſcovery of the Weſt-Indies, 624. Another Counterfeit Earl of Warwick ſet up againſt him, 625. Puts the true Earl to Death, and is hated for it, 626. His Reaſons for it, ibid. Paſſes over to Calais, has an Interview with the Arch-Duke Philip, and is highly honour'd there, ibid. Gives the Lord Mayor an account of all, ibid. His Anſwer to the Pope's Invitation to accompany him in a War againſt the Turk, 627. He is choſen Protector of the Knights of Rhodes, ibid. Converts a Heretick by a Diſpute, 628. Prevails with his Son Prince Henry to be contracted to his Brother's Widow, 629. His Anſwer about the Union of England and Scotland, ibid. His diligence to get Money, 630. A remarkable Memorandum of his, ibid. Retainers ſuppreſs'd by him, and the Power of the Barons leſſen'd, 631. His Reflections on the Death of Iſabella Queen of Caſtile, 631, 632. Would marry the Queen Dawager of Naples and Sicily, 632. His Inſtructions to his Ambaſſadors about that and other Matters relating to Ferdinand and his Son-in-law Philip, ibid. His Conference with Philip when he was driven aſhear in England, about the Earl of Suffolk, 633. Treats of a Marriage with the Lady Margaret Dutcheſs of Savoy, and Siſter to Philip, 634. Is taken ill of a Defluxion in his Breaſt, ibid. Would have Hen. VI. canoniz'd, ibid. His laſt Sickneſs and Death, 635. The Lord Verulam's large Character of him, and Summary of his Reign, 635, 636, 637. His Wiſdom, Piety, Peaceful Virtues, Victories, Prerogative, Council Table, Avarice, Magnificence in Building, Ambition, Miniſters, Queen and Mother, Treaties, Politicks, Intelligence, Fame, the Reſpect paid him, Love to his Children, Induſtry, Officers Civil and Military, Humour, Learning, ibid. His general Character, 637. compar'd with other Princes, 638. His Perſon and Prognoſticks of his Reign, ibid. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, 639. Many Crimes laid to his Charge by Buck, 573, 574.

Henry Prince, eldeſt Son of Henry II. Crown'd in his Father's Life-time, 139. His arrogant Saying, ibid. His Voyage to Paris, and the ill effects of it, 143. He rebels againſt his Father, ibid. A Treaty between them, 144. Peace concluded, ibid. They quarrel, are reconcil'd, and fall out again, 147. His Death and Character, ibid.

Henry Duke of Saxony, who had marry'd Maud Daughter of Henry II. driven out of the Empire by Frederick, and baniſh'd for ſeven Years, 146.

Heptarchy, the Saxon, what it was, 87, 88.

Herald-Office firſt erected by Richard III. 572.

Herbert, Sir William, has the keeping of Henry Earl of Richmond, 520. Order'd to levy Forces againſt him, ſuffers him to paſs, 511. Joyns him, 541. His Deſcent, 520. He is the Head of the Families of Pembroke and Montgomery, ibid. Said to be deriv'd from a baſe Son of Hen. I. 544.

Herbert, Sir Richard, defeated by Sir John Coniers, 440. Taken and beheaded, 441.

Herebert, a Saxon Earl, ſlain with moſt part of his Army by the Danes at a Place call'd Mereſwar, 53.

Hereford, Henry Earl of Darby, Son of John of Gaunt, made Duke of, 278. His Conference with the Duke of Norfolk, 279. Accus'd by him to the King, ibid. He challenges him, and is baniſh'd, ibid. Goes to France. 278.

Hereford, Humphry Bohun Earl of, ſent into France with an Army, 231. Unſucceſsful, ibid.

Hereford, Biſhop of, his Treaſonable Sermon before Queen Iſabel, Wife to Edward II. 209.

Hereticks, the firſt that ſuffer'd, 149. The firſt Law made againſt them in England, 249. Proceeded againſt vigorouſly in Parliament, and the Statute, de Hæretico Comburendo, paſt, ibid. 282.

Hialas, Ambaſſador from Ferdinand to Hen. VII. to conclude a Marriage between the Princeſs Katherine, and Prince Arthur, 620. Goes to Scotland to mediate a Peace between King Henry and James IV. ibid. That Embaſſy the riſe of the Union of Scotland with England, ibid.

Hinguar and Hubba, two Daniſh Brethren, get footing by degrees in England, 54, 55.

Hiſtion, ſaid to be deſcended of Japhet, and to have had four Sons, who peopled the greateſt part of Europe, 2.

Holland, Albert Duke of, comes into England to viſit Henry V. 320.

Holy War, when begun, 116. Who undertook it, ibid. The State of it when King Richard made his Expedition, 152.

Honorius the Emperor ſends Aid twice to the Britains, 26.

Horn Alderman, his Loyalty in Jack Cade's Rebellion, 404. Impriſon'd by the Lord Mayor, ibid. His Life bought of Cade, 405.

Horſa, the Brother of Hengiſt, ſlain in the Saxons War againſt the Britains, 32. His Burial-place gave Name to Horſted, a Town in Kent, ibid.

Hoveden, Richard, a Wickliviſt, burnt, 368.

Howard, the Antiquity of that Family, 544. Deſcended from a Natural Son of Hawardus in the Days of William the Norman, ibid. Their Pedigree, ibid. 545.

Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, his Speech about electing King John, 159.

Huldron, Capt. Robert, rebels againſt Edward IV. in Yorkſhire, 440.

Humbeanna and Albert, ſaid by ſome to have ſhar'd the Kingdom of Eaſt-Angles after one Elfwald, 51.

Humber, King of the Hunns, invading this Iſland, defeats and ſlays Albanact King of Albania, and Son of Brutus, 5. Is himſelf defeated and drown'd, ibid.

Hungerford Lord, taken Priſoner at Patay, 361.

Huntington, John Holland Earl of, one of the Advilers of King Richard II. to murther his Unkle the Duke of Gloceſter, 275.

Huntington,

INDEX to the First Volume.

Huntington, John Holland Earl of, scours the Channel, 321.

Hutton, Sir Thomas, King Richard's Ambassador in Bretagne, endeavours by Bribery to get the Earl of Richmond deliver'd up to him by that Duke, 522.

I.

Ago, or Lago, succeeds his Unkle Gurguſtius, 6.

James Stuart Prince, Son of the Scots King, taken Priſoner, and impriſon'd in the Tower, 295.

James King of Scots, is releas'd after a long Impriſonment, marries an Engliſh Lady, and does Homage to Henry VI. 348. His Treachery, ibid. Beſieges Roxborough, 382. Kill'd by the Earl of Athol, ibid.

James II. King of Scots, ſucceeds his Father James Stuart, 382. Invades England, 414. Driven out by the Duke of York, ibid. Beſieges Roxborough, and is kill'd before it, 424.

James III. King of Scots, ſucceeds his Father James II. 424. His Tyrannical Government, 479. Concludes a ſeven Years Truce with Henry VII. 588. Kill'd by his Subjects, 595.

James IV. ſucceeds his Father James III. 595. Receives Perkin Warbeck favourably, and marries him to his Kinſwoman, 615. Invades England for him, 616. Deſtroys the Country, and returns, ibid. Stands on hard terms for a Peace with Henry VII. 620, 621. Diſmiſſes Perkin honourably, ibid. By what trivial Accident his Marriage with the Princeſs Margaret came firſt to be treated of, 624. He is marry'd to her, 629.

Jane de Valois, Siſter to the French King, procures a Truce between Edward III. and Philip de Valois, 217.

Jaqueline, Heireſs of Holland and Henault, leaves her Husband the Duke of Brabant, and marries Humphry Duke of Gloceſter, 346. The fatal Conſequence of that Match, ibid. 347. Endeavours in vain to recover her Inheritance, 351. Returns to her former Husband, ibid.

Jaquet of Luxemburgh, marry'd to the Duke of Bedford, 369. To Sir Richard Woodvill, 382. Her Poſterity reign in England, ibid. Her Daughter Elizabeth Gray marries Edward IV. 437.

Icenians, or Iceni, and by their Example the Trinobantes riſe up in Arms againſt the Romans, 17.

Ida the Saxon begins the Kingdom of Bernicia in Northumberland, 35.

Idwallo, learns by his Brother's ill Succeſs to rule well, 8.

Jeffery Griſonel Earl of Anjou, murthers Drago Earl of Bretagne; repents, and goes in Pilgrimage to Jeruſalem, 515.

Jeffery Earl of Anjou, a ſhort Hiſtory of him and his Family, from whom the Kings of England were deriv'd, 515.

Jefferey, Henry II's Son, his Death, 147.

Jefferey Archbiſhop of York elect, baſe Son to Henry II. barbarouſly us'd by William Longchamp, Biſhop of Ely, 153. Quarrels with his Brother King John, and is reconcil'd, 159.

Jews maſſacred, 112. Their Pockets empty'd by Henry III. 177, 179. Baniſh'd, 194.

Immanuentius, ſlain by Caſſibelan, 12.

Immin, Eaba and Eadbert, Noblemen of Mercia, throw off Oſwi, and ſet up Wulfer, 44.

Impoſtors, or pretended Princes, 554.

Ina ſucceeds Kedwalla in the Kingdom of the Weſt-Saxons, 46. He marches into Kent to demand Satisfaction for the Burning of Mollo, ibid. Is pacify'd by Viſtred with a Sum of Money, and the delivering up of the Acceſſaries, ibid. Vanquiſhes Gerent King of Wales, ibid. Slays Kenwulf and Albright, and vanquiſhes the Eaſt-Angles, ends his Days at Rome, ibid.

Incloſures of Land, the Inconveniency of 'em remedy'd, 596.

Interviews, the ill effect of them, 442. One between Edward IV. and Lewis XI. 467, 468. Ends happily, 468.

Joan of Navarre, Mother-in-law to Henry V. made Regent in England while King Henry was in France, 315. Accus'd of Treaſon, and impriſon'd, 323. Her Death, 382.

Joan the Maid of Orleans, her Deſcent and pretended Revelation in favour of Charles VII. againſt the Engliſh, 357. Is brought to the French King, 358. Writes a blaſphemous Letter to the Engliſh, ibid. She forces the Engliſh to raiſe the Siege of Orleans, 359. Perſuades the French King to be Crown'd at Rheims, 361. Is in great Credit, ibid. Taken, try'd, and burnt for a Witch, 365, 366.

John, Son of Henry II. marry'd to Hawyſe Heireſs of the Houſe of Gloceſter, 145. Sent into Ireland with the Title of King, 146. He turns out William Longchamp Biſhop of Ely, whom his Brother King Richard had made Governour in his abſence, 153. He aſſumes the Sovereignty, 154. He is vigorouſly oppos'd, ibid. His treaſonable Actions againſt his Brother, 155. He is reconcil'd to his Brother, 156. He ſecures the Crown on the Death of his Brother, 158. He is Crown'd, 159. Wars with the French King for aſſiſting his Nephew Arthur, ibid. A Peace between them, ibid. Quarrels with Jefferey his baſe Brother, Archbiſhop of York, ibid. He divorces his Wife Hawyſe, and marries Isabel Heireſs of Angouleſme, ibid. His ſecond Coronation, ibid. He falls out with his Barons, wars with them, and the cauſe of it, 160. Loſes all his Dominions in France, ibid. Offended with the Pope for making Stephen Langton Archbiſhop of Canterbury, 161. Writes to him, ibid. His Anſwer to the Pope's Commands to the Biſhops, 162. Uſes the Clergy ill, ibid. Demands Hoſtages of his Barons, ibid. Is Excommunicated, 163. His Expedition into Ireland, ibid. And Wales, ibid. 164. He is depos'd by the Pope, ibid. Reſigns his Crown to Pandulphus the Pope's Legate, ibid. His Preparations againſt the French King, ibid. Reſolves to recover his Dominions in France, 165. Threatens his Barons, ibid. His Saying on the Death of Jefferey Fitz-Peter, his chief Miniſter, ibid. Sends Ambaſſors to the Emperor of Morocco, 166. The Truth of that Story queſtion'd, ibid. His ſame Submiſſion to the Pope, ibid. His Succeſs in Poitlou, ibid. His Anſwer to the Barons Demands, ibid. Grants Magna Charta and Charta Foreſta, and revokes them, 167. Conquers the Barons, ibid. His War with Lewis the French King's Son, 168. His Death, and the ſeveral manners of it reported by Hiſtorians, ibid. His Iſſue, 169.

John Duke of Normandy, Son of Philip de Valois, his Wars in Guyenne againſt the Engliſh, 220. Is defeated by the Earl of Darby, ibid. Succeeds his Father, and is

John the French King, 224. Beaten and taken by the Black Prince at Poitliers, 226. Carry'd Priſoner into England, 227. Releas'd, and on what terms, 228. Viſits King Edward, and dies in England, 229.

Joſeph of Arimathea, ſaid to have firſt preach'd the Chriſtian Faith in this Iſland, 22.

Joſeph Michael, the Blackſmith of Bodmin, one of the Leaders of the Corniſh Rebels againſt Henry VII. 617. He is hang'd at Tyburn, 619. His ridiculous Pleaſure at his Death, ibid.

Jovinus, ſent Deputy into this Iſland by the Emperor Valentinian, 25.

Ireland conquer'd by Hen. II. 141. King John's Expedition there, 163. Invaded by the Scots, 206. The Duke of Clarence ſent there, 229. The Earl of March kill'd there, 255. The Earl of Oxford made Duke of it, 256. Revolt there, 270. Several petty Kings reduc'd by Richard II. 271. A Parliament held there by him, ibid. They revolt again, 281. King Richard goes over again, ibid. A Rebellion there, 399. Appeas'd by the Duke of York, ibid. The Natives love that Prince, 419. They favour the Title of the Houſe of York, 584. And receive Lambert Simnell as King, ibid. He is Crown'd there, 586. Commiſſioners ſent there by Henry VII. to ſettle matters after it, 611. Poynings Act paſt there in Parliament, 612.

Iſabel, Daughter to Philip the Fair King of France, marry'd with extraordinary Pomp to Edward II. King of England, 203. Goes into France to mediate a Peace, 208. Flies thence to the Earl of Haynault and Holland, 209. She lands in England, and takes Arms againſt the King and the Spencers, ibid. She marches victorious to London, 210. Rules all, 211, 212. She is depriv'd of her Power, 213. Reported to be with Child by Mortimer, ibid.

Iſabel, Daughter to the French King, marry'd to Richard II. after ſhe was contracted to the Duke of Bretagne, 273. Joyns with the Rebels againſt Henry IV. and defaces his Arms, 279. Demanded by her Brother the French King, 281. She is ſent home, 283.

Iſabel the French Queen, Wife to Charles VI. makes Peace with Henry V. to revenge the Death of her Favourite the Duke of Burgundy, whom the Dauphin had kill'd, 327, 328, &c. Her Death, 378.

Judges not admitted to do their Office in their Circuits, having incurr'd the hatred of the People by ſiding with Henry III. in His Favour to Strangers, 185. Corrupt Ones fin'd, ibid. 194. Their wicked Anſwer to Richard II's Queries, 259. All of them arreſted on the Bench and puniſh'd ſeverely, 263. Their wiſe Opinion about the Attainder of Hen. VII's Followers Choſen Members of Parliament, 581.

Julius Agricola, the Emperor's Lieutenant in Britain, almoſt extirpates the Ordovices, 19. Finiſhes the Conqueſt of the Iſle of Mona, ibid. His Juſtice and Prudence in his Government, ibid. He brings the Britains to Civility, Arts, and an Imitation of the Roman Faſhions, ibid. He receives triumphal Honours from Titus, ibid. He extends his Conqueſts to Scotland, ſubdues the Orcades and other Scotch Iſlands, ibid. He is hard put to it in ſeveral Conflicts; but comes off Victorious, 20, 21. He is commanded home by Domitian, 21.

Julius Cæſar has Intelligence that the Britains aid the Gauls his Enemies, 9. He ſends Caius Voluſenus to make Diſcovery of the Nature of the People, and Strength of the Country, 10. After him Comius of Arras is ſent to make a Party among the Britains, ibid. The ſtout reſiſtance he meets with from them at his Landing, ibid. He receives terms of Peace from them, ibid. He loſes a great part of his Fleet, 12. Defeats the Britains, and brings them anew to Terms of Peace, and then ſets ſail for Belgia, ibid. The Year following he lands his Army again, ibid. He has a very ſharp Diſpute with the Britains near the Stour in Kent, 12. He receives Terms of Peace from the Trinobantes, 12. He brings Caſſibelan to Terms, 13. Offers to Venus, the Patroneſs of his Family, a Corſlet of Britiſh Pearl, 13.

Julius Frontinus the Emperor's Lieutenant in Britain, tames the Silures a warlike People, 19.

Julius Severus governs Britain under Adrian the Emperor, 21.

Juries, firſt brought up in England, 108.

Juſts between three Engliſh and three Scots Gentlemen, 271. The Engliſh are victorious, ibid.

K.

Katherine, Daughter to Charles the VIth the French King, married to Hen. V. at Troyes, 327. Crown'd in England, 333. Delivered of Prince Henry at Windſor, 335. Sails into France, 337. She marries, and has ſeveral Children by Owen Tudor a Welſh Gentleman, 339. Holds Her Infant Son Hen. VI. on Her Knee in the Houſe of Lords, 347. Her Death, 382.

Katherine, Princeſs of Spain, married to Prince Arthur, eldeſt Son to Hen. VII. 628.

Kearl ſurrenders the Kingdom of Mercia to his Kinſman Penda, 41.

Keaulin ſucceeds his Father Kenric in the Kingdom of the Weſt-Saxons, 35. He and his Son Cuthin ſlays three Britiſh Kings at Deorham, 36. Gives the Britains a great Rout at Fethanleage, ibid. Is totally routed by the Britains at Wodenſbeorth, and chac'd out of his Kingdom, dies in Poverty, 37.

Kedwalla, a Weſt-Saxon Prince, return'd from Baniſhment, ſlays in fight Edelwalk the South-Saxon, and after that Edric his Succeſſor, 45. Going to the Iſle of Wight, he dovotes the fourth part thereof to holy Uſes, ibid. The Sons of Arwald King of that Iſle ſlain by his Order, ibid. He haraſſes the Country of the South-Saxons, ibid. Is repell'd by the Kentiſh-Men, ibid. Yet revenges the Death of his Brother Mollo, ibid. Going to Rome to be baptiz'd, he dies there about five Weeks after his Baptiſm, 46.

Kelred, the Son of Ethelred, ſucceeds Kenred in the Mercian Kingdom, 46. Poſſeſs'd with an evil Spirit, he dies in deſpair, ibid.

Kelwulfe reigns King of the Weſt-Saxons after Keola, 38. He makes War upon the South-Saxons, 39. Dying, leaves the Kingdom to his Brother's Sons, 40.

Kelwulfe, adopted by Oſric the Northumbrian to be his Succeſſor, 46. He becomes a Monk in Landisfarn, 47.

Kenwalla or Cadwallon, a Britiſh King joyning with Penda the Mercian, ſlays Edwin in Battel, 42.

Kened, King of the Scots, does high Honour to King Edgar, 64. Receives great Favours from him, ibid. Is challeng'd by him upon ſome words let fall, but ſoon pacifies him, ibid.

Kenelm, a Child, ſucceeding in the Kingdom of Mercia after Kenulf, is murther'd by order of his Siſter Quenrid, 50.

Kenred, the Son of Wulfer, ſucceeds Ethelred in the Mercian Kingdom, 46. Having reign'd awhile, he goes to Rome, and is there ſhorn a Monk, ibid. Another Kenred ſucceeds in the Kingdom of Northumberland, and revenges the Murther of his Predeceſſor Ofred, ibid.

Kenric, the Son of Kerdic, overthrows the Britains that oppoſe him, 34. Kills and puts to flight many of the Britains at Scareſbirig, now Saliſbury, 35. Afterwards at Biranvirig, now Banbury, ibid.

Kent-Cuſtoms preſerv'd, by what means, 109.

Kent, an Inſurrection there againſt the Uſurper Richard, 528.

Kent, Edmund Plantagenet Earl of, takes Arms againſt his Brother Edward I. 209. Beheaded for endeavouring to reſtore his Brother Edward II. 212.

Kent, Edmund Holland Earl of, in favour with Henry IV. his great Fortune in Marriage, 295. He is ſent to Sea with a Fleet, 297. Attacks Briak in Bretagne, is wounded, and dies of his Wounds, ibid.

Kentiſh Gentlemen, a ſevere Proclamation put forth againſt them by Richard III. for riſing in Arms in favour of the Duke of Buckingham's Conſpiracy, 528. Loyal to Hen. VII. 612, 618.

Kentwin, a Weſt-Saxon King, chaces the Welſh Britains to the Sea-ſhore, 45.

Kenulf has the Kingdom of Mercia bequeath'd him by Ecferth, 49. He leaves behind him the Praiſe of a virtuous King, 50.

Kenwalk ſucceeds his Father Kinegils in the Kingdom of the Weſt-Saxons, 43. His Succeſſes variouſly deliver'd, 43. He is ſaid to have diſcomfited the Britains at Pen in Somerſetſhire, 44. And giving Battel to Wulfer, to have taken him Priſoner, ibid. Dying, leaves the Government to Sexburga his Wife, ibid.

Kenwulfe, ſirnam'd Clito, ſlain by Ina the Weſt-Saxon, 46.

Kenwulfe, King of the Weſt-Saxons. See Kinwulf.

Keola, the Son of Cuthulfe ſucceeds his Unkle Keaulin in the Weſt-Saxon Kingdom, 37.

Keolwulfe, the Brother of Kenulf the Mercian, after two Years Reign, driven out by Bernulf an Uſurper, 51.

Keorle with the Forces of Devonſhire overthrows the Danes at Wigganbeorch, 53.

Kerdic, a Saxon Prince, lands at Kerdicſhore, and overthrows the Britains, 33. Defeats their King Natanleod in a memorable Battel, ibid. Founds the Kingdom of the Weſt-Saxons, ibid. He overthrows the Britains again at Kerdic's-ford, and at Kerdic's-leage, ibid.

Kildare, Earl of, aſſiſts at Lambert Simnell's Coronation, 586. Writes to Henry VII. to petition for a Pardon, and is pardon'd, 587. Arreſted by Poynings, and ſent Priſoner to England, 612.

Kimarus, reckon'd among the ancient Britiſh Kings, 7.

Kinegils and Cuichelm, ſucceed Kelwulfe in the Kingdom of the Weſt-Saxons, 39. They make Truce with Penda the Mercian, 41. They are converted to the Chriſtian Faith, 42. Kinegils dying, leaves his Son Kenwalk to ſucceed, 43.

Kinmarcus ſucceeds Siſillius in the Kingdom, 6.

Kinwulfe, or Kenwulfe, (Sigebert being thrown out and ſlain by a Swineherd) is ſaluted King of the Weſt-Saxons, 48. Behaves himſelf bravely in ſeveral Battels againſt the Welſh, ibid. Put to the worſt at Beſington by Offa the Mercian, ibid. Is routed and ſlain in Battel by Kineard, whom he had commanded into Baniſhment, ibid.

Kiriell, Sir Thomas, routs the Count de Clermont, 364. His Acts in Burgundy, 372. Driven out of St. Denis, but recovers it, 375. Other Acts of his in France, 383, 384. Defeated and taken, 400. Beheaded by Queen Margaret, 426.

Kneſworth, Alderman, ſeverely proſecuted by Emſon and Dudly in Henry VII's Reign, 635.

Knights Fees, what they were, 110.

Knights Templers arreſted at once all over England, 203.

Knights of the Hare, why ſo call'd, 216.

Knights of the Round Table, an Order of them Inſtituted by Edward III. 219.

Knights of the Bath, made by Henry IV. 273. By Henry VI. 363, 426. By Edward IV. 477. By Richard III. 525.

Knights of the Golden Fleece inſtituted, 365.

Knights of the Bath, intended to be made by Edward V. at his Coronation, 523.

Knolles, Sir Robert, his Courage and Conduct, 231. His Death and Charitable Acts, 296.

Kymbeline, or Cunobeline, the Succeſſor of Tenuantius, ſaid to be brought up in the Court of Auguſtus, 14. His chief Seat in Camalodunum, or Maldon, ibid.

L.

Laannois entirely ſubjected by Henry the Fifth, 337.

Laignie, valiantly defended by the French againſt the Duke of Bedford, 370.

Lancaſter, Thomas Plantagenet Earl of, call'd the Stage-Player by Peirce Gaveſton, 203. Choſen Head of the Malecontents in the Reign of Edward II. 204. Refuſes to go with King Edward into Scotland, 205. His Wife taken away from him, 206. Other Occaſions of Diſcontent given him, ibid. He is the Head of another Confederacy againſt the Spencers, ibid. He is defeated, taken and beheaded, 207.

Lancaſter, Henry, made Governour to Edw. III. during his Minority, 211.

Lancaſter, Henry Plantagenet Earl of Darby, made Duke of, 225. Sent into Normandy by Edward III. ibid. His Death and Character, 228.

Lancaſter, John of Gaunt, afterwards Duke of, born, 217. Sent into France, 231. Unſucceſsful, ibid. Sent to Guyenne, ibid. Marries Conſtance Daughter to the King of Spain, ibid. Petition'd againſt by Parliament, 232. Expell'd the Court, ibid. Does not agree with the Black Prince, ibid. Governs all under his Father, ibid. An Enemy to William of Wickham Biſhop of Wincheſter, and why, ibid. He threatens the Biſhop of London about Wickliff, whom he protected, 233. Is inſulted by the Londoners, ibid. Puniſhes them, 234. Is reconcil'd to 'em, 237. Is hated, 238. Retires from Court in the Reign of Richard II. 239. Is unſucceſsful againſt the French, 240. Cauſes Mr. Hawl to be kill'd in the Sanctuary at Weſtminſter, and why, 241. Endeavours to get the Crown of Spain, 244. Complain'd of by Jack Straw and his Rebels, ibid. Reſides in Scotland for fear of them, 248. Quarrels with the Earl of Northumberland, ibid. Invades Scotland, 252. Accus'd of High Treaſon, the Accuſer murther'd, and the Duke thought guilty, ibid. Retires to his Houſe, and prepares for his Defence, 253. Reconcil'd to King Richard, ibid. His Expedition to Spain, 255. He marries his two Daughters to the Kings of Spain and Portugal's Sons, 257, 266. His Succeſs in Spain, ibid. He is made Duke of Aquitain, ibid. His pompous Embaſſy into France to little purpoſe, 268. Sent again to treat of a Peace, 270. Accuſes the Earl of Arundel of Deſigns againſt him, 271. Goes over to Gaſcoigne, or Aquitain, 273. Cannot prevail with the People to own him for their Sovereign, ibid. Returns and marries the Lady Kath. Swinford, ibid. Lives retiredly, ibid. Procures an Act to Legitimate his Children by Lady Swinford before Marriage, 274. High Steward at the Tryal of the Lords that oppos'd Richard II's Favourites, 276. Paſſes Sentence on the Earl of Arundel, 277. Very forward in the Proſecution of the Lords, ibid. His Death, 280.

Lancaſter, Henry Earl of Darby and Duke of Lancaſter, ſucceeds his Father, 280. His Eſtate ſeiz'd by King Richard II. ibid. About to marry a Princeſs of the Blood in France, ibid. Hinder'd by King Richard, ibid. Archbiſhop Arundel's Speech to him, to perſuade him to depoſe King Richard, 282. He prepares to return to England, 283. The ſmall Force he landed with, ibid. He increaſes in Strength immediately, ibid. Marches to London, ibid. His Reception of King Richard in Wales, 287. Marches with him to London, ibid. Has the Crown formally reſign'd to him by Richard II. 286. Claims it in Parliament, ibid. Is elected King, 287. See Henry IV.

Lancaſter, the Title of that Houſe generally condemn'd, 471, 579.

Lancaſtro-di, a Family of that Name in Portugal, pretended to be deriv'd from John of Gaunt, 535.

Landois, Peter, Miniſter to the Duke of Bretagne, delivers the Earl of Richmond to Edward the Fourth's Ambaſſadors, 472. Gets him out of their hands again, ibid.

Lanfranc Archbiſhop of Canterbury, one of William the Norman's prime Miniſters, 110. His Character, 111. He ſides with William Rufus againſt his elder Brother Robert, 113.

Langton, Stephen, made Archbiſhop of Canterbury by the Pope, 161. He intercedes with King John for the Barons, 165. Reads the Charter of Liberties granted to the People by Henry I. ibid.

Languedock States of their Loyalty to the French King John when he was a Priſoner in England, 227.

Latimer Lord, petition'd againſt by the Parliament in Edward the Third's Reign, as an ill Counſellor, 232. Expell'd the Court, ibid.

Latimer, Sir Thomas, a Wickliviſt and Member Parliament, threaten'd by Richard II. 272.

Latimer, John B. D. accuſes John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaſter of High Treaſon, 252. Murther'd by the Duke's Creatures, ibid.

Laws, Edward the Confeſſor's are for the moſt part the Common Laws of England, 96. Alter'd by William the Norman, ibid. 108. Saxon Laws continu'd in ſome Caſes, ibid. and 109. King Edward's reſtor'd, 119. What they were which Henry II. ſought to eſtabliſh by the Name of Avitæ Leges, 134. King John's Great Charters, 167.

Laws made in the Reign of Edward the Firſt, 193.

Laws made in the Reign of Edward the Third, 215, 220, 224, 225, 228, 229, 231.

Laws made in the Reign of Richard the Second, 239, 241, 242, 243, 244, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 255, 256, 263, 264, 268, 274, 275, 278.

Enacted in the Reign of Henry IV. 282, 283, 286, 290, 301. In the Reign of Henry V. 309, 312, 319, 321, 334. In the Reign of Henry VI. 347, 350, 352, 359, 369, 371, 372, 376, 383, 386, 394, 400, 412, 425. Enacted in the Reign of Henry VII. 581. Several Laws made, 594. Others, 596, 597. Others, 602, 603, 613, 614. Others, 631.

Leaden-hall built, and by whom, 396.

Learning and Arts, when began to flouriſh among the Britains, 19. Among the Saxons, 44. Men famous for them in the Reign of William the Norman, 112. Of William Rufus, 118. Of Henry I. 124. Of King Stephen, 131. Of Henry II. 150. Of Richard I. 158. Of King John, 170. Of Henry III. 191. Of Edward I. 202. Of Edward II. 211. Of Edward III. 235, 236. Of Richard II. 288. Of Henry IV. 307. Of Henry V. 340. Of Henry VI. 428. Of Edward IV. 487. Of Edward V. and Richard III. 513. Of Henry VII. 639.

Legend, a fooliſh one of St. Peter's Cope, being to be ſeen in Weſtminſter-Abby, 487.

Leiceſter, Robert Earl of, offers to draw his Sword on Henry II. 144.

Leil ſucceeds Brute Greenſheild, and builds Caerleil, 5.

Leo King of Armenia, comes into England and viſits Richard II. 254.

Leofric Duke of Mercia, and Siward of Northumberland, ſent by Hardecnute againſt the People of Worceſter, 75. By their Counſel King Edward ſeizes on the Treaſures of his Mother Queen Emma, ibid. They raiſe Forces for the King againſt Earl Godwin, 77.

Leofwin, Son of Earl Godwin, after his Father's Baniſhment goes over with his Brother Harold into Ireland, 77. He and Harold aſſiſt their Father with a Fleet againſt King Edward, ibid. He is ſlain with his Brother Harold, and Gyrtha another of his Brothers, in the Battel againſt William Duke of Normandy, 82.

Leoline Prince of Wales, his bold Anſwer to Edward the Firſt's demand of Homage, 193. He rebels, ibid. He is ſlain, and his Head preſented to the King, 194.

Levells, Battel of, between Lancaſter and York, 435.

Lewelin, Prince of Wales, aſſiſts the Barons againſt Henry III. 174. His Death, and the Conſequence of it, 177.

Lewes, Battel of, 187.

Lewis of Bavaria, the German Emperor, deſerts King Edward III. and joyns with the French King, 219.

Lewis, Dauphin of France, invited over to the aſſiſtance of the Barons againſt King John, 169. His Diſſimulation, 170. He is deſerted, 171. Overthrown, and leaves the Kingdom, ibid.

Lewis XI. Sends Queen Margaret and the Earl of Warwick Aſſiſtance againſt Edward IV. 443. A War reſolv'd on againſt him by Edward IV. and Charles Duke of Burgundy, 461. His Diſcourſe with the Herald that brought King Edward's Letter of Defiance, 462. He deſires the Herald to negotiate a Peace, ibid. Sends a Counterfeit Herald to beg a Peace of King Edward, 464. Pays King Edward a Tribute, 465. His Interview with King Edward, 467. Compar'd with that King, 468. Bribes his Counſellors, 469. Seizes the Dutchy of Burgundy, &c. on Duke Charles's Death, 473, 474. His Embaſſies to Edward IV. to hinder him from aſſiſting the young Dutcheſs Mary, 474, 475. Endeavours in vain to hinder her marrying Maximilian, Son of the Emperor Frederick III. 478. Makes a Peace with him, and contracts his Son the Dauphin, before contracted to King Edward's Daughter, to his Daughter Margaret, 481. Denies the Tribute, ibid. And ſlights King Edward, 482. His Perjury, and its Puniſhment, 483.

Lewis XII. conquers Milan, 626.

Lewis Dauphin, Son to Charles VII. rebels againſt his Father, 385. Submits, and is pardon'd, 386. Raiſes the Siege of Dieu, 389.

Lewis, Dr. a Welſhman, carries on the Correſpondence between the Queen Dowager and the Counteſs of Richmond, for the Marriage of the Princeſs Elizabeth to the Earl of Richmond, 505, 532.

Libels, againſt John of Gaunt by the Londoners, 233.

Libels and falſe Reports ſpread about againſt Henry IV. 284, 295. One againſt Richard III. 507.

Liberties of the Nation confirm'd by Henry III. 172.

Lionel of Antwerp, third Son of Edward IV. born, p. 217. Marries the Heireſs of Ulſter in Ireland, 225. Made Duke of Clarence, 229. See Clarence, Duke of.

Linceus, deliver'd in fabulous Story to be the Husband of one of the feign'd fifty Daughters of Diocleſian King of Syria, 2. The only Man ſav'd by his Wife, when all the reſt of the Fifty ſlew their Husbands, ibid.

Lincoln, John de Pool Earl of, his Deſcent and Title to the Crown, 535. Proclaim'd Heir Apparent of Richard III. ibid. 585. Joyns with the Impoſtor Lambert Simnell againſt Henry VII. ibid. Aſſiſts at Simnell's Coronation, 586. Lands in England, ibid. Kill'd at Stoke-Fight, 587.

Liſle, Arthur Plantagenet, created Lord Viſcount by Henry VIII. 565. Upon whom he was begot by Edward IV. ibid.

Litteſter, John, a Dyer of Norwich, his Rebellion, 247. Stil'd King of the Commons, ibid. His State, ibid. He is beheaded, ibid.

Littleton, Judge, the Father of the Law, made Knight of the Bath, 477.

Locrine, the Eldeſt Son of Brutus, has the middle part of this Iſland, call'd Loegria, for his Share in the Kingdom, 4. Defeats Humber, King of the Huns, ibid.

Lollards, the Wickliviſts firſt call'd ſo, 271. They endeavour a Reformation in Parliament, ibid. Richard the Second's Proceedings againſt them, and the Archbiſhops, 272. A Statute firſt made againſt them, 282. The Parliament favour them, 298. Charg'd with a falſe Conſpiracy againſt the Life of King Hen. V. 311. Severe Acts paſt againſt them, 312. The Parliament againſt them, 323.

Lollius Urbicus draws a Wall of Turf between the Frith of Dunbritton and Edenburgh, 21.

London, with a great Multitude of the Inhabitants, conſum'd by a ſudden Fire, 50. Mayor of, Impriſoned, 216. Richard II. Sets a Governour over it, 269. Mayor of, Diſputes with the Lord Treaſurer for Precedence, 437. Mayor and Aldermen, treated at Waltham Forreſt by Edward IV. 480.

London, William Courtney, Biſhop of, proſecutes John Wickliff, 238. Roughly us'd by the Duke of Lancaſter, ibid. Reveng'd by the Citizens, ibid. Made Biſhop of Canterbury, 248. Taxes his Clergy by a Bull from the Pope, 273. A great Enemy to the Wickliviſts, ibid. His Death, ibid.

Londoners diſguſted with Maud the Empreſs, 129. Favourable to the Barons againſt Hen. III. ibid, 176. Depriv'd of their Liberties by him, 188. Their Anſwer to Edward II. who demanded help of 'em againſt the Queen, 209. A motion in Parliament againſt their Liberties, 233. They inſult the Duke of Lancaſter about it, ibid. They lie under the King's and his Diſpleaſure, 341. Refuſe to ſend Richard II. Money, 268. Their Liberties taken away and reſtor'd, 269. Their implacable hatred to Rich. II. 285. They ſlay the Burgundians, 377. Favour Cade's Rebellion, 403. They drive Cade and his Rebels out of the City, 405. They favour the Duke of York againſt Hen. VI. 421. And are againſt Queen Margaret, 426, 430.

Looſe-Coat-Feild, Battel of, gain'd by Edw. IV. 443.

Lord's-Day, an Order for the keeping it holy, by Hen. VI. 392.

Lothair ſucceeds his Brother Ecbert in the Kingdom of Kent, 44.

Lovel, Lord, a great Stickler for Richard III. Attainted by Henry the Firſt's Parliament, 582. Rebels againſt him, ibid. Flies out of England, ibid. Joyns with Lambert Simnel, 585. Aſſiſts at his Coronation, 586. He is kill'd at Stoke, 587.

Lucius, a King in ſome part of Britain, thought the firſt of any King in Europe who receiv'd the Chriſtian Faith, 21. Is made the Second by Deſcent from Marius, ibid. After a long Reign bury'd at Glouceſter, 22.

Lucy, Elizabeth, her Deſcent, 565. Not contracted to Edw. IV. ibid. 437. Bears him a Son, ibid.

Lud Walls about Troynovant, and calls it Caer Lud, or Lud's Town, 8.

Ludiken, the Mercian, going to avenge Bernulfe, is ſurpriz'd by the Eaſt-Angles, and put to the Sword, 51.

Lupicinus ſent over Deputy into this Iſland, by Julian the Emperor, but ſoon recall'd, 25.

Lupus, Biſhop of Troyes Aſſiſtant to Germanus of Auxerre, in the Reformation of the Britiſh Church, 28.

Luxemburgh, John Lord of, his Conduct and Courage, 365. He fights deſperately againſt the French, 372.

M.

Mackmore, his Rebellion in Ireland in the Reign of Richard II. 281.

Madan ſucceeds his Father Locrine in the Kingdom, 5. Rules well, ibid.

Magdalen, a Prieſt, Perſonates Richard II. 278. Is taken and hang'd, 279.

Maglaunus, Duke of Albania, marries Gonorill, eldeſt Daughter of King Lear, 6.

Maglocune, ſirnam'd the Iſland Dragon, one of the Five that reign'd toward the beginning of the Saxon Heptarchy, 36.

Magnus, Grandſon of Harold Harfager takes Orkney, 115. Slays Hugh the Cruel Earl of Shrewsbury, ibid.

Magus, the Son and Succeſſor of Samothes, whom ſome fable to have been the firſt Peopler of this Iſland, 2.

Maine ſubdu'd by the Engliſh, 326.

Majorca, James King of, ſaid to be kill'd at the Battel of Creſſi, 222.

Malcolm, Son of Kened King of Scots, falling into Northumberland with his whole Power, is entirely overthrown by Uthred, 70.

Malcolm, Son of the Cumbrian King, made King of Scotland by Siward, in the room of Macbeth, 78.

Malcolm, King of Scotland coming to viſit King Edward, ſwears Brotherhood with Toſti the Northumbrian, 79. Afterwards in his abſence harraſſes Northumberland, ibid. Slain by Robert de Mowbray, 115.

Malſas, Alderman, treats Jack Cade and his Rebels, 404.

Man, Iſle of, conquer'd by the Earl of Saliſbury, 219. Sold by him to the Lord Scroop, 270. The Regalia of the King of it, ibid.

Mandubratius, Son of Immanuentius, favour'd by the Trinobantes againſt Caſſibelan, 12.

Mans taken by the Earl of Saliſbury, 350.

March, Roger, Lord Mortimer, made Earl of, 212. Is the occaſion of Edward the Third's reſigning his Title to the Sovereignty of Scotland, ibid. He is condemn'd and hang'd, 213. See Mortimer, Lord Roger.

March, Edmund Mortimer, Earl of, turn'd out of the Lord Marſhal's place by the Duke of Lancaſter, 232. He marries the Princeſs Philippa, Daughter to the Duke of Clarence, 235. His Poſterity's Title to the Crown, ibid.

March, Roger Mortimer, Earl of, declar'd Heir Apparent to the Crown in Parliament, 254. Kill'd in Ireland, 255, 281. His Iſſue, ibid.

March, George Dunbar, Earl of, Deſerts the Scots King and joyns with the Engliſh againſt the Scots, 282.

Marcus ſet up for Emperor by the Britains, 86.

Mare, Sir Peter La, perſecuted by King Edw. III's Miſtreſs, Alice Pierce, and why, 232. Releas'd and taken into Favour by Richard III. 235.

Marganus the Son of Gonorill depoſes his Aunt Cordelia, 6. Shares the Kingdom with his Couſin Cunedagius. Invades him, but is met and overcome by him, Ibid.

Marganus, the Son of Archigallo a good King, 8.

Margaret, Daughter to Rene Duke of Anjou, married to Hen. VI. 393. Her Character, 394. The Match cenſur'd, ibid. Her Practices againſt the Duke of Glouceſter, 395, 396. She rules all, and diſcontents the Nobility, 397. She is the occaſion of the Loſs of all France, 406. Her Chaſtity queſtion'd, 410. Turns the Duke of York out of the Protectorate, 413. Carries the King from London, ibid. Her Diſſimulation, 417. Hires one to Aſſaſſinate the Earl of Warwick, 420. Raiſes an Army which fights the King's Enemies at Northampton, 422. Is defeated, ibid. She is rob'd and flies to Scotland, ibid. Raiſes a new Army, 425. Gains the Battels of Wakefield, and the ſecond of St. Albans, ibid. 425. The Londoners againſt her, ibid. Driven from London by the Earl of March, 427. Raiſes a vaſt Army to depoſe Edward IV. 431. Flies to Scotland, 433. Her Induſtry to regain the Throne, 434. Delivers Berwick to the Scots, ibid. She can have no Succours abroad, ibid. Lands in the North from France, ibid. Defeated again, 435. Flies to France with her Son Prince Edward, ibid. Is reconcil'd to the Earl of Warwick, and marries her Son to his Daughter Anne, 443. Lands in England, 451. Her Grief at the News of Warwick's Defeat, ibid. She raiſes an Army, 452. Is routed, 453. Taken and carry'd to London in Triumph, 454. Her Character, ibid. Ranſom'd by her Father, ibid. Lives meanly, ibid.

Margaret, Lady, marry'd to Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, 439. Her hatred to Hen. VII. 585. Sends 2000 Men to aſſiſt Lambert Simnel, ibid. Her Palace a Sanctuary for Traytors againſt Hen. VII. 595. Her Contrivances to diſturb that King, 605. She ſets up Perkin Warbeck, ibid. 606. Her Inſtructions to him, ibid. She owns him publickly to be Duke of York, 607. Commends him to the Scots King, 614.

Margaret, Princeſs, Daughter to Hen. VII. marry'd to James IV. the Scots King, 629.

Markham, Sir John, a Judge, his Juſtice againſt King Edward IV's Intereſt and Pleaſure, 478. For which he is diſplac'd, ibid.

Marius, the Son of Arviragus, is ſaid to have overcome the Picts, and ſlain their King Roderick, 21.

Marriage forbidden by Pope Gregory VII. to the Engliſh Clergy, 111. With Princes do little good, 436. Of Unkles and Nieces, Examples of it, 568.

Marſhall, Richard, Earl, a Chief Leader of the Barons in the War againſt Henry III. 174. He is kill'd in Ireland by Treachery, 175.

Martia, the Wife of King Guitheline, ſaid to have inſtituted the Law culled Marchen Leage, 7.

Martinus made Deputy of the Britiſh Province, falling to kill Paulus, falls upon his own Sword, 25.

Mary, Dutcheſs of Burgundy, her Embaſſy to implore Aid of Edward IV. againſt Lewis XI. and her rebellious Subjects, 473, 474. Deſigns form'd againſt her by Edward and Lewis, 475. Offers her ſelf in Marriage to the Duke of Clarence, ibid. King Edward averſe to it, and why, ibid. Marries Maximilian Son to the Emperor Frederick III. 478.

Mary, Princeſs, ſecond Daughter to Hen. VII. contracted to Charles, Prince of Caſtile, afterwards Charles V. 635.

Mathematicks reviv'd in Europe by Alphonſo King of Arragon, 184.

Matrevers, Lord, cauſes Edward II. to be murder'd, 212. Lurks in Germany, ibid.

Maud the Empreſs, Daughter of Henry I. marry'd to Jeffery Plantagenet, Earl of Anjou, 122. She Lands in England, 128. Takes upon Her the Power of Queen after King Stephen fell into the hands of the Earl of Glocester, ibid. She loſes all by her proud Carriage, 199. Flyes to Oxford from the Council at Winchester, ibid. Her Agents bold Reply to the Legate at the Council of London, 136. She ſends to Her Husband for Aid, ibid. She ſends her Son back to Anjou, ibid. Her Death and Character, 138.

Maximianus Herculeus forc'd to conclude a Peace with Carauſius, and yield him Britain, 23.

Maximilian, Arch-Duke of Auſtria, marries Mary Heireſs of Burgundy, 478. Makes a Peace with Lewis XI. Contracts his Daughter Margaret to Charles the Dauphin, before contracted to King Edward's Daughter Elizabeth, 485. Is Charles the VIIIth of France's Rival for Ann Heireſs of Bretagne, 589. His Perſon ſeiz'd by the Citizens of Gaunt, 597. The Lord Ravenſtein Rebels againſt him, ibid. Marries the Lady Anne by Proxy, 598. His Negligence, ibid. His Rage upon the French King's marrying her, 604. Effectually aſſiſted by Hen. VII. againſt the Flemings, 603. Cannot aſſiſt king Henry in his French War, 604, 605. Recommends Perkin to the Scots King, 614, 615.

Maximus

INDEX to the First Volume.

Maximus a Spaniard, usurping part of the Empire, is overcome at length, and kill'd by Theodosius, 25.

Maximus, a Friend of Gerontius, is by him set up in Spain against Constantine the Usurper, 26.

Mayors of London, when first chosen, 169. One thrown into Prison by Hen. III. 188.

Meaux, after a long Seige surrendred to Hen. V. and on what Conditions, 335, 336.

Mellent, Robert Earl of, Prime Minister to Hen. I. 123. His Riches, ibid.

Mellitus, Justus and others, sent with Austin to the Conversion of the Saxons, 38. Mellitus Converts the East-Saxons, 39. St. Paul's Church in London built for his Cathedral by Ethelred, as that of Rochester for Justus, ibid.

Melun, besieg'd by the English, surrenders on Terms, 332.

Mempricius, one of Brutus's Council, persuades him to hasten out of Greece, 3.

Mempricius and Malim succeed their Father Madan in the Kingdom, 5. Mempricius treacherously slaying his Brother, gets sole Possession of the Kingdom, Reigns tyrannically, and is at last devour'd by Wolves, ibid.

Mend-Market, Robert, Robert Humphreville, Vice-Admiral of England, so call'd, and why, 299.

Mercer, A Scots Pirate, taken by Alderman Philpot, with all his Ships, 240.

Merianus, reckond among the Ancient British Kings, 8.

Meulan Pont taken from the English by the French, and retaken by the Earl of Salisbury, 345.

Mollo, the Brother of Cedwalla, pursu'd, beset, and burnt in a House whither he had fled for shelter, 45. His Death reveng'd by his Brother, ibid.

Money to go above its value, 224.

Monford, Sir Simon, beheaded by the Earl of Warwick, 420.

Monmouth, Geoffrey of, allow'd by all our learn'd Criticks to be a Fabulous Historian, 83.

Monster, One taken out of the Sea like a Man, 169.

Montereau Town and Castle surrendred to the English, 331.

Montfort, Simon de, made Earl of Leicester, and marry'd to the King's Sister by Hen. III. 176. Made Governour of Gascoigny, and remov'd, 182. Refuses to serve the French King, ibid. Has the Lye given him by William de Valence a Favorite to Hen. III. takes Arms with the Barons, 184. His Zeal and bold Sayings, 186. Gains the Victory at Lewes, and takes Hen. III. Prisoner, 187. He is beaten and slain at Evesham, ibid. His two Sons, Simon and Guy submit to the King, 188. Guy kills Henry Son to the King of the Romans in Italy, 190. The branching of this Family, 169.

Montfort, Sir Simon, one of the Conspirators against Hen. VII. in favour of Perkin Warbeck, 608. He is beheaded, 610.

Montmerenci, Mareschal, comes with an Army of French to the assistance of Owen Glendour, 294. His ill Success, ibid.

Moor, Sir Thomas, Servant to Dr. Moreton Archbishop of Canterbury, 545. His History of Edward V. and Richard III. from 481, to 502. He is Under-Sheriff of London, 547. Censur'd by Buck and others, ibid.

Morcar, the Son of Algar, made Earl of Northumberland, in the room of Tosti, 79. He and Edwin Duke of the Mercians put Tosti to Flight, 81. They give Battel to Harold Harfager, King of Norway, but are worsted, ibid. They refuse to set up Edgar Ethelin, and at length are brought to Swear Fidelity to Duke William of Normandy, 82. Morcar rebels and is suppress't, ibid, 106.

Mordred, Arthur's Nephew, said to have given him in a Battel his Death's Wound, 36.

Moreton, Dr. John, Bishop of Ely, suspects the Duke of Gloucester's Fidelity to Edw. V. 492. Committed to the Custody of the Duke of Buckingham by Rich. III. 502. His long Conference with the Duke, whom he persuades to dethrone Richard, and set up Henry Earl of Richmond, 502, 503, 504, 505. He escapes to Flanders, ibid. Attainted by the Usurper Richard's Parliament, 528. Dr. Hird's Character of him, 538. And others, ibid. 539. Writes a Book in Latin against King Richard, 546. Accus'd of Sorcery, as Buck says, 559. Made Archbishop of Canterbury by Henry the Seventh, 582. Lord Chancellor, 591. His Speech to Henry the Seventh's Parliament, ibid. 599. Is hated, and gets a Law for his own Security, 594. His Answer to the French Ambassador's Speech about Bretagne and Naples, 605. His Death, 626. Character, 627.

Morgan, a natural Son of Hen. II. His Answer to the Pope, who would have had him renounce his Birth for a Bishoprick, 149.

Morley, Lord, Slain at the Battel of Dixmuyde, 598.

Morley, Sir Robert, his Engagement with the French at Sea, 216.

Morindus, the Son of Elanius by Tongueflela a Valiant Man, but infinitely Cruel, 7.

Mortaigne, Henry Beaufort Earl of, his Acts in the French War, 384.

Mortimer, Roger, sides with King Henry III. against the Barons, 186. Hated by the Earl of Gloucester, 188. Oppose's the Restoration of the Barons Lands, ibid.

Mortimer, Roger Lord, imprison'd by Edw. II. escapes into France, 207, 208. In great Favour with the Queen, 208. Lands in England with her, 209. Rules all, 210. Made Earl of March, 212. Vide, March, Earl of.

Mortimer, Edmund, Earl of March, his Pun upon Henry IV. who had taken the Crown, which he thought to be his Right, 273. Taken Prisoner by the Welch Rebels, 281. His Children stolen out of Windsor-Castle, 291. He discovers the Earl of Cambridge's Plot to Hen. V. 316. Assists at the Coronation of Queen Katharine, 333. His Right to the Crown, 342. Dyes in Ireland, 351.

Mortimer, Sir John, hang'd for Treason, 348.

Mortimer's Cross, Battel of, 426, 429.

Mortmain, Statute of, enacted, 193.

Morville, Sir Hugh, one of the four Knights that slew Thomas Becket at Canterbury, 140.

Mountacute, Lord, defeats Sir Ralph Piercy and Queen Margaret's Forces, 435. Made Earl of Northumberland by Edward IV. 436. Made Marquess Mountacute, ibid. Deserts King Edward, 445. He lets him pass by him without attacking him, 447. Variously censur'd for it, ibid. 448. Suspected by his Brother the Earl of Warwick, 449. He is slain Fighting against King Edward, 450. His Character, 451.

Mountacute, Sir John, orders all Images to be taken out of his Church in the Reign of Richard II. 287.

Mowbray, Robert de, Earl of Northumberland, slays Malcolm King of the Scots by an Ambush, 119. He Conspires against William Rufus, ibid. Is imprison'd, ibid.

Mowbray, Thomas, Earl of Nottingham, one of Richard the Second's Advisers to Murder the Duke of Gloucester, 275. Made Duke of Norfolk, 278. He falsly accuses the Duke of Hereford, 279. Is banish'd for Life, ibid. His ill Character, ibid. His Death, ibid. 280. His Son of the same Name Rebels against Hen. IV. 292. Beheaded, 293.

Mulmutius. See Dunwallo.

Murder charg'd upon several Kings of England by Buck, 573. Call'd Crimen Sacrum vel Regale, ibid.

Musgrave, Sir Thomas, routed and taken by the Scots, 241.

Musters, General, appointed all over England, 220.

N.

Nantes and other Places surrendred to the English, 325.

Natanleod, Chief King of Britain, routed by Kerdic the Saxon, 3.

Navar, Charles, King of, Murders the Constable of France, 225. Imprison'd by Philip de Valois, ibid. Joyns with Edward III. against him, ibid. Imprison'd again, ibid. Releas'd, 227. Raises a Tumult in Paris, ibid. Sides with the English again, 240.

Navigation of England advanc'd by Hen. VII. 597.

Nevil, Sir George, goes to Perkin Warbeck in France, 607.

Nevil's Cross, Battel of, 222.

Newbury destroy'd by James Butler Earl of Wiltshire, 420.

New-College founded, 291.

Noblemen created, 215, 225, 235, 254, 263, 270, 274, 278, 393, 433. See Creation of Noblemen.

Norfolk, John Howard Duke of, his Creation and Descent, 525. Kill'd at the Battel of Bosworth fighting for Richard the Third, 512. Warn'd not to engage in the Battel, 542. The Princess Elizabeth's Letter to him about Marrying her Uncle Richard III. 568. He is Attainted by Henry the VII's first Parliament, 581.

Norman, John, Lord Mayor of London, the first that went to Westminster by Water, 410.

Normans, their Original, 99. Their Manners and Fashions imitated by the English, 76, 99. The Succession of their Dukes, 100. The Nobility, their Strength and Riches, 161.

Normandy lost to the French, 166. Invaded by Edw. III. 225. Reconquer'd by Henry V. 326. Duke of Bedford's Speech to the Inhabitants, 363. Lost to the French again, 401.

Northampton, a Parliament held there, 212. Another, 244.

Northampton, Battel of, between Lancaster and York, 422.

Northampton, John, Mayor of London, his Zeal for Reformation of Manners, 249. Said to be put upon it by Wickliff, ibid. Call'd Cumbertown for his turbulent Humour, 252. Try'd and condemn'd to a severe Punishment, 253.

Northumberland, Henry Peircy, made Earl of, 235. Recovers Berwick from the Scots, 241. Quarrels with the Duke of Lancaster, and is rude before the King, 248. His Answer to Rich. II. when he sent for him, 281. Proclaim'd Traytor, ibid. Conspires to bring over the Duke of Lancaster, 282. Joyns him, ibid. Gets King Richard into his Power, and carries him to the Duke of Lancaster, 214, 285.

Northumberland, Henry Peircy Earl of, his Victories over the Scots, 285. He rebels and why, 286. He is reduc'd, pardon'd and restor'd, 288, 289. Rebels again, 292. Flies into Scotland, 294. His Towns seiz'd, ibid. In danger, makes his escape, ibid. Appears in Arms, is defeated and beheaded, 297.

Northumberland, Henry Peircy Earl of, restor'd to the Honours his Father the Lord Piercy, surnam'd Hotspur, and his Grandfather the Earl of Northumberland had forfeited by their Treasons, 311.

Northumberland, Henry Peircy Earl of, kill'd at the Battel of St. Albans, on King Henry's side, 412.

Northumberland, Peircy, Earl of, his Son kill'd at the Battel of Towton, on King Henry's side, 433.

Northumberland, Henry, Earl of, Attainted by Edward IV. 436. Restor'd in Honour and Estate, ibid. Kill'd in a Mutiny against Tax-Gatherers, in Henry the Seventh's Reign, 595.

Northumberland, John Nevil, Lord Mountacute, made Earl of, by Edward IV. 436. Made Marquess Mountacute, ibid. Vide Marquess Mountacute.

Norwich, the City of, its liberties taken away by Hen. VI. and why, 392.

Norwich, Henry Spencer Bishop of, defeats the Norfolk Rebels, 247. Has a Commission from one Pope to make War upon another, 250. Conquers almost all Flanders, 251. Forc'd to restore all, and returns with Disgrace, ibid. Threatens the Wickliffists, 265.

Nottingham, a Parliament held there, 213.

Novelties in Religion came in by the Conquest, 99.

O

Oath of Allegiance, the Form of that requir'd by Richard III. 552.

Odta and Ebissa call'd over by Hengist their Uncle, 31. They possess themselves of that part of the Isle which is now Northumberland, ibid.

Odo, Earl of Kent, suppresses a Conspiracy against William the Norman, 106. Imprison'd, 111. Restor'd to Liberty and Favour, 113. Stirs up a Rebellion against William Rufus, 114. Forc'd to Abjure the Kingdom, ibid.

Oencus, one in the Catalogue of Ancient British Kings, 8.

Oeric or Oisc, succeeds his Father Hengist in the Kingdom of Kent, and from him the Kentish Kings call'd Oiscings, 33. He is otherwise call'd Æska.

Offa, the Son of Siger, quits his Kingdom of the East-Saxons, to go to Rome, and turn Monk with Kenred, 46.

Offa, defeating and slaying Beornred, the Usurper, becomes King of Mercia after Ethelbald, 48. He subdues a neighbouring People call'd Hestings, ibid. Gets the Victory of Alric King of Kent at Ottarford, ibid. Inviting Ethelbright King of the East-Angles to his Palace, he there treacherously causes him to be beheaded, and seizes his Kingdom, 49. He is at first at Enmity, afterwards in League with Charles the Great, ibid. He grants a perpetual Tribute to the Pope out of every House in his Kingdom, ibid. He draws a Trench of wondrous length between Mercia and the British Confines, his Death, ibid.

INDEX to the First Volume.

Officers of State, made by Richard the Third, 529.

Oldcaſtle, Sir John, Lord Cobham, goes over to aſſiſt the Duke of Burgundy, 300. He is charg'd with Hereſie, and impriſon'd, 310. His noble Defence, ibid. His Condemnation, and Eſcape into Wales, 311. Accus'd of a falſe Conſpiracy againſt Henry V. ibid. He is ſeiz'd by the Lord Powis, brought up to London, where he is hang'd and burnt, 323. His Writings, 341.

Orange, John de Chalons Prince of, a Friend to the Engliſh, routed by Charles VII. the French King, 344. Commands in Dauphine and Languedoc for the Engliſh, 345.

Orange Prince, ſides with the Duke of Orleans againſt Charles VII. taken Priſoner at the Battel of St. Albans in Bretagne, 593.

Ordeal, what the Tryal was, 97, 108.

Orleans, Duke of, Brother to the French King Charles VI. Challenges Henry IV. King of England, 289. He invades Guyenne without Succeſs, ibid. Beſieges Burges and Blay in that Province in vain, 295. His cruel War with the Duke of Burgundy, 300. Sollicits aid of the Engliſh, 301. Taken Priſoner at the Battel of Agincourt, 318. Ranſom'd almoſt twenty Years afterwards by the Duke of Burgundy, 388.

Orleans, Lewis Duke of, retires to the Duke of Bretagne, and prevents his hearkening to a Peace with Charles VIII. of France, 589, 590. Fights the Battel of St. Albans, and is taken Priſoner by the French King's Troops, 593. Succeeds Charles VIII. 626. See Lewis XII.

Orleans, Siege of, by the Engliſh, 356, 357. Offers to ſurrender to the Duke of Burgundy, 357.

Oſbald a Nobleman, exalted to the Throne of the Northumbrians after Ethelred, 49.

Oſbert reigns in Northumburland after the laſt of the Ethelreds in the time of the Daniſh Invaſion, 53.

Oſbert and Ella helping the Picts againſt Donald King of Scotland, put the Scots to flight at Sterling-bridge with great Slaughter, and take the King Priſoner, 54.

Oſfrid and Eanfrid, the Sons of Edwin, converted and baptiz'd, 41. Oſfrid ſlain, together with his Father in a Battel againſt Kedwalla, 42.

Oſlace and Cnebban, two Saxon Earls, ſlain by Keaulin at Wibbandun, 35.

Oſmund King of the South-Saxons, 48.

Oſred, a Child, ſucceeds Aldfrid in the Northumbrian Kingdom, 46. He is ſlain by his Kindred for his vicious Life, ibid.

Oſred, Son of Alcled, advanc'd to the Kingdom of Northumberland after Elfwald, is ſoon driven out again, 49. Is taken and forcibly ſhaven a Monk at York, ibid.

Oſric, the Son of Elfric, baptiz'd by Paulinus, ſucceeds in the Kingdom of Deira, 42. Turns Apoſtate, and is ſlain by an Irruption of Kedwalla out of a beſieg'd Town, ibid.

Oſric ſucceeds Kenred King of Northumberland, 46.

Oſric Earl of Southampton, and Ethelwolfe of Berkſhire, beat the Danes back to their Ships, 54.

Oſtorius, ſent Vice-Prætor into Britain in the room of Plautius the Prætor, 15. Routs the Britains, and improves his Victory to the beſt advantage, ibid. Gives the Government of ſeveral Cities to Cogidunus a Britiſh King, his Ally, ibid. Defeats the Silures under the Leading of Caractacus, 16. Is ſo diſtreſs'd by them that he dies of Grief, ibid.

Oſtrid, the Wife of Ethelred, kill'd by her own Nobles, 46.

Oſwald, Brother of Eanfrid, living exil'd in Scotland, is there baptiz'd, 42. With a ſmall Army entirely overthrows Kedwalla, ibid. Settles Religion, and very much enlarges his Dominions, ibid. Overcome and ſlain in Battel by Penda at Maſerfield, now Oſweſter, ibid.

Oſwi ſucceeds his Brother Oſwald in his Kingdom, 42. He perſuades Sigebert to receive the Chriſtian Faith, 43. He diſcomfits Penda's vaſt Army, 44. He ſubdues all Mercia, and the greateſt part of the Pictiſh Nation, ibid. Shaken off by the Mercian Nobles, and Wulfer ſet up in his ſtead, ibid. His Death, ibid.

Oſwin, the Nephew of Edwin, ſhares with Oſwi in the Kingdom of Northumberland, 43. Coming to Arms with him, he is overmatch'd and ſlain by his Command, ibid.

Oſwulf has the Crown of Northumberland relinquiſh'd to him by Eadbert, 48. Slain by his own Servants, ibid.

Otha ſucceeds Eſca in the Kingdom of Kent, 35.

Otho, Emperor of Germany, Nephew to King John, demands his ſhare of King Richard's Eſtate, but in vain, 159. He is Excommunicated, 163. His Defeat at Bouvines by the French King, 166.

Otter and Roald, two Daniſh Leaders, landing in Devonſhire, their whole Forces are ſcatter'd, and Roald ſlain, 59.

Oxford Univerſity, ſaid to be founded by Alfred, 58, 90. Burnt by the Danes, 69. A Mutiny by the Students there, 176.

Oxford, Robert de Vere Earl of, a great Favourite of Richard II. 250. Made Marqueſs of Dublin, 254. Made Duke of Ireland, and ſent thither with a great Equipage, 256. Grows more in favour, 257. Turns away his Wife the King's Couſin, and marries a Bohemian Woman to affront the Duke of Gloceſter, 258. His pretended Journey to Ireland, and wicked Conſultations to deſtroy the Lords that oppos'd him, ibid. Defeated by the Earl of Darby at Radcot-Bridge, 261. He flies out of England, ibid. He dies in Exile, 270. His Body brought to England to be bury'd by the King's Order in pomp, 273.

Oxford, Counteſs of, her Enmity to Henry IV. 289.

Oxford, John Earl of, his Bravery at the Battel of Gladſmore-heath, 449. His miſtake the occaſion of the loſs of that Battel, ibid. Defends himſelf at St. Michael's Mount in Cornwall, 457. Submits, and is impriſon'd in the Caſtle of Hammes near Calais, ibid. He eſcapes thence, and joyns the Earl of Richmond in France, 508, 541. He commands the Van of his Army at the Battel of Boſworth, 510. Bucks Account of his Life afterwards, 560. His vaſt Riches, and their Conſumption, ibid. Commands the Army ſent againſt Lambert Simnel's Adherents, 586. In the French Expedition, 604. And againſt the Corniſh Rebels, 619. Severely and ungratefully us'd by Henry VII. 630.

Oye Caſtle ſurrender'd by the Engliſh to the Duke of Burgundy, 380.

P.

Pacatianus left Governour of Britain by Conſtantine the Great, 24.

Pandraſus a Grecian King, keeps the Trojans in Servitude, 3. Is ſet upon, and beaten by Brutus, ibid.

Pandulphus, his Legation from the Pope, 163. He receives the Crown of King John, 164.

Paris, the Citizens will not contribute to King John's Redemption, 227. The Provoſt inſults the Dauphin, ibid. Betray'd to the French, 379.

Pariſians againſt the Engliſh, 345. Their Treachery, 379.

Parker, Sir James, kill'd in a Juſt in Henry the Seventh's Reign, 604.

Parliament, the Authority of, and the Derivation of the Word, 566. Known to the Saxons, ibid.

Parliaments, when ſaid to have met firſt, 122, 123. Held by King Stephen, ibid. 125. By Hen. II. 132. One call'd about the Clergy, 134. One at Clarendon, 135. One at Northampton againſt Becket, ibid. Several Parliaments held, 145. One to raiſe Money for Henry the Second's intended Holy War, 148. One at Nottingham in the Reign of Richard I. 155.

Parliament, one held by King John, 165.

Parliament, Henry the Third's firſt, ſecond, and third Parliaments, ibid. 172. His fourth and fifth, 173. His ſixth, 174. His ſeventh, eighth and ninth, 175. They refuſe to give him a Tax, ibid. His tenth, 176. His eleventh Parliament, 177. His twelfth, 178. Their Anſwer to the Pope's Meſſage for Money, ibid. His thirteenth, ibid. His fourteenth, 179. They reprove the King, ibid. His fifteenth and ſixteenth Parliaments, 180. His ſeventeenth, 181. His eighteenth, 182. His nineteenth, 184. His twentieth held by Conſtraint, 185. His twenty-firſt, 187. His twenty-ſecond Parliament, 188. They are againſt the Barons, ibid. His twenty-third Parliament, ibid. His laſt Parliament at Marlborough, from whence their Statutes ſo call'd, 189.

Parliament, the firſt held by Edward I. 192. They paſs the Statute of Mortmain, 193. One at St. Edmundſbury, 195. Their Acts, ibid. One at Saliſbury, and no Churchmen admitted into it, 197. One at York, in which King Edward promiſes never to levy any Money without their conſent, ibid. Another at York, 198. One at Weſtminſter, and their Acts, ibid. One at Lincoln, and their Acts, 199.

Parliament, the firſt held by Edward II. and their Acts, 203. His ſecond Parliament petition the King againſt Gaveſton, ibid. His third Parliament, and their Acts, 205. His fourth, and their Acts, 206. The fifth in his Reign depoſe him, and choſe his Son King, 210.

Parliament, the firſt held by Edward III. at Northampton, 212. Their Acts, ibid. His ſecond at Wincheſter, ibid. His third at Nottingham, 213. His fourth at London, 214. His fifth Parliament againſt the Uſurpation of the Pope, 220. Other Acts, 224, 225. His ſixth and ſeventh at Weſtminſter, 228, 229. Their Acts, ibid. His eighth, and their Acts, 231. His ninth, and their Acts, 232. They petition to have evil Councellors remov'd, ibid. His tenth give Money, but put it into Commiſſioners hands in Truſt for the King, 234.

Parliament, the firſt held by Richard II. and their Acts, 239. His ſecond at Gloceſter, 241. Their Acts, ibid. His third at Weſtminſter, and their Acts, 242. His fourth, and their Acts, 243. His fifth Parliament at Northampton, 244. They raiſe a Tax, which occaſions Jack Straw's Rebellion, ibid. His ſixth, 248. Their Acts, 249. His ſeventh, and their Acts, ibid. They make the firſt Act for puniſhing Hereticks, ibid. His eighth, and their Acts, 250. His ninth, and their Acts, 251. His tenth, and their Acts, 252. His eleventh, and their Acts, 253. His twelfth, and their Acts, 254. His thirteenth, their numerous and warlike Attendants and Acts, 255. They appoint thirteen Governours to rule the Kingdom, 256. His fourteenth, call'd The Wonder-Working Parliament, 262. Their Acts, 263. His Fifteenth at Canterbury, and their Acts, 264. His ſixteenth, and their Acts, 266. Paſs the Statute of Proviſors againſt part of the Pope's Authority in England, ibid. His ſeventeenth do nothing, 267. His eighteenth act farther againſt the Pope's Authority, 268. His nineteenth paſs the famous Statute of Premunire, 270. One held by him at Dublin for Ireland, 271. His twentieth and twenty-firſt Parliaments, and their Acts, 271. His twenty-ſecond, and their Acts, 274. His twenty third, 276. Pack'd by King Richard to deſtroy the Lords, ibid. They are call'd the Cruel Parliament, 280. His twenty-fourth at Shrewſbury, lodge all their Power in the hands of certain Perſons the King's Creatures, 280. His twenty-fifth depoſe him, and elect Henry Duke of Lancaſter King, 286, 287.

Parliament, the firſt held by Henry the fourth, and what they did, 274. The Statutes of King Richard's pack'd Parliament repeal'd by them, ibid. They proceed againſt King Richard, 275. His ſecond Parliament paſs the Act de Hæretico Comburendo, and proceed againſt Lollards, 282. His third Parliament, Acts and Taxes, 286. His fourth Parliament ſit at Coventry, and do little, 288. His fifth Parliament, and its Acts, 289. His ſixth Parliament, commonly call'd Parliamentum Indoctum, 290. His ſeventh Parliament, 294. His eighth Parliament, 296. His ninth Parliament, 298. Their Boldneſs againſt the Clergy, and Favour to the Lollards, ibid. His tenth Parliament, their Laws and Taxes, 301.

Parliament, the firſt held by Henry V. their Acts, 309. His ſecond, and their Acts, 312. His third, and their Laws, 319. His fourth, and their Acts, 321. His fifth Parliament held by the Duke of Bedford, their Acts, 323.

Parliament, Henry V. holds one at Paris, 332. They confirm the Peace made with the French Queen, and his Succeſſion to the Crown of France, ibid.

Parliament, Henry V's ſixth, their Acts and Taxes, 334. His ſeventh Parliament held by the Duke of Bedford, 335. Their Acts, ibid.

Parliament, the firſt held in the Reign of Henry VI. 344. Their Acts, ibid. The ſecond, 347. Their Acts, ibid. His third Parliament, and their Acts, 350. His fourth Parliament, why call'd the Parliament of Batts, 352. His fifth Parliament, and their Acts, 359. His ſixth, 369. His ſeventh Parliament, and their Acts, 371, 372. His eighth, and their Acts, 375, 376. His ninth, 382. Their Acts, 383. His tenth, and their Acts, 386. His eleventh Parliament, and their Acts, 394, 395. His twelfth held at Bury, 396. His thirteenth, and their Acts, 400, 401, 402. His fourteenth, and their Acts, 406. His fifteenth Parliament, 411. His ſixteenth, and their Acts in favour of the Duke of York, 412. His ſeventeenth Parliament, and their Acts, 420. They attaint the Duke of York, &c. ibid. His eighteenth Parliament, Parliament, 422. They ſettle the Crown on the Duke of York, 424. Their farther Acts, 425. His nineteenth reſtore him, and attaint Edward IV. ſettle the Succeſſion on the Duke of Clarence, and are govern'd by the Earl of Warwick, 446.

Parliament, firſt held by Edward IV. 459. Their Acts, ibid.

Parliament, one held by Richard III. 507. They attaint Henry Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. ibid. 528. A Character of them, 566.

Parliament, the firſt held by Henry VII. 580. Their Acts, ibid. About ſettling the Crown on King Henry ſingly, 581. His ſecond, 591. Several good Laws made by them, 594, 595, 596, 597. His third, 601. His Speech to them, ibid. 502. They paſs the famous Statute to ſell Lands without Fines, and open a way for the Barons to alienate their Eſtates, 612. Other Acts, ibid. His fourth, and their Acts, 613, 614. His fifth Parliament, their Acts, 631. They ſuppreſs Retainers, ibid.

Parliament, a French; their Declaration of their King's Prerogative, as to alienating the Crown, 168.

Pateſhul, Peter, an Auſtin-Fryar, oppoſes the Monks, 259. Favour'd by ſeveral Perſons of Quality, ibid.

Patriarck Fryar, ſets up a Counterfeit Earl of Warwick againſt Henry VII. 625.

Pavier, Sir Americ de, how barbarouſly us'd by the French for ſiding with the Engliſh, 224.

Paulinus, ſent Spiritual Guardian with Edelburga, endeavours to convert Northumberland to Chriſtianity, 40. The manner of his winning King Edwin to embrace the Chriſtian Religion, 41. He converts the Province of Lindſey, and Blecca Governour of Lincoln, and builds a Church in that City, ibid.

Payne, Dr. Biſhop of Meath, preaches Lambert Simnell's Coronation-Sermon, 586.

Peacock, Reginald Biſhop of Chicheſter, his Troubles for his Religion, being a Wickliviſt, 415.

Peada, the Son of Penda, and Prince of the Middle Angles, is baptiz'd with all his Followers, 43. He has South-Mercia conferr'd on him by Oſwi, 44. Is ſlain by the Treachery of his Wife on Eaſter-day, ibid.

Peckham, John Archbiſhop of Canterbury, goes to perſuade Leoline Prince of Wales to ſubmit, 193. Excommunicates him, ibid.

Peirce, Mrs. Alice, Edward the Third's Miſtreſs, petition'd againſt by the Parliament, 232. Expell'd the Court, ibid. Her Inſolence, ibid. Puniſh'd by Parliament, 239. She marries Sir William of Windſor, ibid.

Peircy, Lord Henry, ſirnam'd Hotſpur, kills Earl Dowglaſs in ſingle Fight, 264. Taken Priſoner by the Scots, ibid. His valorous Acts in the Scots War, 285. He joyns with his Father in the Earl of Northumberland's Rebellion, 287. Fights the King, is deſperate and ſlain, 288.

Peircy, Sir Henry, made Lord Marſhal by the Duke of Lancaſter, 232. Favours Wickliff when he appear'd before the Biſhop of London, 233. Created Earl of Northumberland, 235. See Earl of Northumberland.

Peircy, Sir Ralph, a great Lancaſtrian, ſubmits to Edward IV. 434. He revolts to Henry VI. and is ſlain, 435. His Saying of himſelf, ibid.

Pelagius a Britain, brings new Opinions into the Church, 26. The Pelagian Doctrine refuted by Germanus, 28. The Pelagians judg'd to Baniſhment by Germanus, 29.

Pembroke, William Marſhall Earl of, the great Supporter of King John's Right, 170. And Preſerver of his Son Henry III's to the Crown, ibid. He bears the Barons, 171. And obliges Lewis the Dauphin to leave the Realm, ibid. His Care to ſend away the Malecontents, ibid. His Death, 172. His Son of the ſame Name reduces Hugh Lacy, who had rebell'd in Ireland, ibid.

Pembroke, Aymer de Valence Earl of, ſent with an Army into Scotland, 200. Defeats Robert Bruce, ibid. Is defeated by him, 201. Call'd Joſeph the Jew by Peirce Gaveſton, 203. Joyns with the Barons againſt Edward II. 204. He takes Peirce Gaveſton, and delivers him to the Earl of Warwick, ibid.

Pembroke, Haſtings Earl of, ſent by Edw. III. againſt the French in Guyenne, 231. Taken Priſoner at Sea, ibid.

Pembroke, John Haſtings Earl of, kill'd as he was learning to Juſt, 266. The Fate of the Earls of this Title, ibid.

Pembroke, Jaſper Earl of, defeated by the Earl of March, 426, 429. Attainted by Edward IV. 436. Raiſes Forces for Queen Margaret, Wife to Hen. VI. 451. Beheads Roger Vaughan, and flies to Britain from Edward IV. with his Nephew the Earl of Richmond, 454. Takes away his Nephew the Earl of Richmond from the Lady Herbert, 520. Flies with him into France, ibid. Attainted by the Uſurper Richard's Parliament, 528. Created Duke of Bedford, 580. Vide Bedford, Jaſper Duke of.

Pembroke, Sir William Herbert made Earl of by Edward IV. 436. Raiſes Forces for him, 440. Is defeated and beheaded for his Cruelty, 441.

Penda, the Son of Wibba King of Mercia, has the Kingdom ſurrender'd him by Keorle, 41. He joyns with Kadwalla againſt Edwyn, 42. He ſlays Oſwald in Battel, ibid. In another Battel Sigebert, 43. In another Anna King of the Eaſt-Angles, ibid. He is ſlain in a Battel againſt Oſwi, 44.

Peniſſell, reckon'd in the number of the ancient Britiſh Kings, 8.

People, how they came to decay in Henry the Seventh's Reign, 596.

Percival, Sir John Lord Mayor of London, his riſe, 639.

Peredure and Vigenius expel their Brother Elidure, and ſhare the Kingdom between them, 8.

Perkin Warbeck, his Story as in Buck, thought to be Richard Duke of York, younger Son of Edward IV. 553. Henry the Seventh's Endeavours to get him into his hands, 554. He is highly honour'd by foreign Princes, ibid. Several Lords in Ireland, and the Scots King own him as that Prince, ibid. As alſo the French King, 555. He quits France, ibid. Returns to his Aunt the Dutcheſs of Burgundy, ibid. He lands in England, is deſerted, takes Sanctuary, ſubmits, and is receiv'd favourably by Henry VII. ibid. Impriſon'd in the Tower, ibid. Hang'd at Tyburn, as he thinks, unjuſtly, 556. The Characters of thoſe Gentlemen that were for him, 558. Why Henry the Seventh deferr'd his Execution ſo long, 560. If he was not King Edward's Son, he cou'd be nothing, 561.

Perkin Warbeck, his Story as in the Lord Verulam, his Riſe, 605. His Perſon and Cunning, 606. Edward IV. his Godfather, ibid. His Parents and Education, ibid. Why call'd Perkin, ibid. He is preſented to the Dutcheſs of Burgundy, and by her ſent to Portugal, ibid. Lands at Cork, and pretends to be Richard Duke of York, Edward the Fourth's ſecond Son, 607. The French King ſends Agents to him, ibid. He goes to France, and is treated like a King, ibid. Diſmiſs'd thence, he goes to the Dutcheſs of Burgundy, who owns him as Duke of York, ibid. Several Perſons of Quality in England for him, 608. Beheaded on his account, 610. Attempts to land in Kent, but is afraid, 612. Several of his Followers hang'd, 613. Returns to Flanders, 614. Goes to Scotland, recommended by ſeveral Princes, ibid. His Declaration to James IV. King of Scots, ibid. 615. He is favour'd by him, and has the Lady Katherine Gordon beſtow'd on him in Marriage, ibid. He enters Northumberland, and puts out a Ploclamation againſt Henry VII. ibid. 616. The Succeſs of it, ibid. He weeps at the Scots deſtroying the Country when they came into England with him, 617. Diſmiſs'd from Scotland, 621. Lands at Cork in Ireland, ibid. His Counſellors, ibid. He is invited to Cornwall by the Rebels there, ibid. Lands there, is joyn'd by them, and beſieges Exeter, 622. Raiſes the Siege, and flies to Sanctuary, ibid. He ſubmits on promiſe of Life, and is carry'd to King Henry's Court, 623. His Confeſſion not ſatisfactory, ibid. He runs away, is taken, ſet in the Stocks, and reads his Confeſſion, 625. He endeavours to corrupt the Lieutenants of the Tower's Servants, ibid. Draws the Earl of Warwick into a Conſpiracy, ibid. He is try'd, condemn'd, and hang'd at Tyburn, ibid. His Confeſſion, ibid.

Perjury, an Example of Divine Vengeance in Alfred, who conſpir'd againſt King Athelſtane, 61.

Peter, King of Arragon, depos'd for his Tyranny, 230. Reſtor'd by the Black Prince, ibid. His Ingratitude to him, ibid.

Peter of Savoy, Unkle to Queen Eleanor, Wife to Henry the Third, made Earl of Richmond, 177.

Peter Prince of Portugal, comes into England, 351.

Petilius Cerealis, utterly defeated by the Britains, 17. He commands the Roman Army in Britain 18.

Petronius Turpilianus commands in chief in Britain after Suetonius Paulinus, 18.

Philip King of France viſits Becket's Tomb, 145. His War with the Flemings, 164. See French King.

Philip de Valois the French King, his Title to the Crown of France, 213. He ſeizes it from Edward III. ibid. Requires King Edward to do him Homage, ibid. His foreign Alliances againſt King Edward, 215. His Fleet beaten by that King, 216. His Anſwer to Edward the Third's Challenge, 217. Beaten at the Battel of Creſſi, 222. He dies, 224.

Philip his Grandſon, taken Priſoner at the Battel of Poitiers by the Black Prince, 226. Marries Margaret Heireſs of Flanders, and raiſes the Houſe of Burgundy there, 231.

Philip Archduke of Auſtria, and Sovereign of the Netherlands, his Interview with Henry VII. 626. Succeeds his Mother-in-law Queen Iſabella of Spain, as King of Caſtile, 632. Thrown on the Coaſt of England by a Storm, 633. His Entertainment and Conference with Henry VII. ibid.

Philippa, a Noble Lady in the Barons Wars, defends the Caſtle of Lincoln a whole Year againſt the King, 171.

Philpot, John Alderman of London, his Bravery, 340. Suppreſſes the Scots Pyrat Mercer, ibid. Call'd to an account for it, ibid. His Defence, ibid. Aſſiſts Sir William Walworth to kill Wat Tyler, 246. Remov'd from the Bench of Aldermen, 250.

Picquiny, Interview of, between Edward IV. and Lewis XI. 467, 468.

Picts, who they were, 85.

Picts and Scots haraſs the South Coaſts of Britain, 25. See Scots.

Picts and Saxons beaten by the Britains through the pious Conduct of Germanus, 29.

Pir, one of the ancienteſt Race of Britiſh Kings, 8.

Plague in England, 224. The ſecond Peſtilence, 228. One in the North, 242. More Plagues in ſeveral places, 267. Another, 287.

Plague in London, 295. Another, 626.

Plantagenet, how the Family of Anjou, from whence Henry II. took that Name, came to be ſo call'd, 515, 516. A ſhort Hiſtory of that Houſe, ibid.

Plimouth, plunder'd by Bretons, 288.

Poitiers, Battel of, 226.

Poll-Tax, the firſt rais'd, 234.

Polydore Virgil, his Reflection upon King Edward the Fourth's marrying the Lady Elizabeth Gray, 563. Of Edward the Fourth's Death, 565.

Pons Jaſper, his Negotiations in England with Henry VII. for Pope Alexander VI. 627.

Pont de Larch, ſurpriz'd by the French, 398. The ill Conſequence of it, ibid.

Pontoiſe, ſurpriz'd by the Engliſh in a Froſt, 386. Twice attempted by the French King, 387.

Pooll, Michael de la, a Merchant's Son of London, a Favourite of Richard II. 250. Made Earl of Suffolk and Lord Chancellor, 254.

Pooll, Sir John de la, defeated by the French, 348.

Pooll, Richard, Son of Margaret Plantagenet Counteſs of Saliſbury, lives in exile, and is ſlain at the Battel of Pavia, 576.

Pope and Emperor quarrel, and are reconcil'd by the King of France, 121.

Pope, an Edict put out againſt him and all his Agenrs by Henry II. 137. Two Popes at a time, ibid. The Pope's Encroachments on the Kingdom, 173. Oppos'd by the Engliſh Clergy, 177. Sends for Money into England, but has it not, 188. How anſwer'd by the Parliament, ibid. Frederick the Emperor's Letter againſt the Pope, ibid. An Enquiry into his Revenues in England, ibid. An Order againſt his Exactions, ibid. His Agent Ottobon ſits above Henry III. at a Feaſt, 188. Forbids the Clergy of England to pay any Tax laid upon them, 196. Oppoſes Edward the Firſt's Proceedings with the Scots, 199. Abſolves that King from all his Oaths made to his Subjects, 200. Edward the Third's fifth Parliament write to him about Eccleſiaſtical Grievances, 220. They move to have his Power quite ejected out of England, ibid. His Exactions here oppos'd by King and Parliament, ibid. His Bulls prejudicial to the King's Subjects, forbidden to be brought over, 224. Mediates a Peace between Edward III.

INDEX to the First Volume.

and Philip de Valois, 225. Richard II's first Parliament make Laws against His Encroachments, 239. Gregory XI. writes to Richard II. against Wickliff, 240. A War and Schism between two, 241,242. Statute of Provisors made against his Authority in many things, 266. He is startled at it, ibid. The Statute of Præmunire, past provokes him more, 270. Two Popes confirm'd by National Councils in England and France, 272. Boniface IX. Writes to King Richard II. to punish Lollards, 273.

Pope intermedling with the Authority of this Realm, Voted to be against the Laws of England, 276. His Power abridg'd by several Statutes in the Reign of Hen. IV. 282, 283. Oppos'd by that King, 296. A Schism between two Popes, 297. Oppos'd vigorously by Hen. V's first Parliament, 323. Sets Henry Beaufort, Bishop of Winchester, on an Expedition against the Hussites, 362. Acts of the Council of Basil against his Authority, 372. Sends Hen. VI. a golden Rose, and why, 397. The Schism in the Papacy ends by the Resignation of Pope Felix, 399. That Pope's Character, ibid. He redresses the Grievances of Sanctuaries for Hen. VII. 588. His Charter of Legitimation of the House of Beaufort, descended from John of Gaunt, 536, 537. His Charter to Hen. VII. to prefer the Title of Lancaster to that of York, 540.

Porrex, the Son of Gorgobudo, tho' assisted from France, is slain by his Brother Ferrex, 6. His Death reveng'd by his Mother Videna, ibid. Another of that Name reckon'd in the List of British Kings, 8.

Portsmouth denominated from the Landing of Porta a Saxon Prince with his two Sons, Bida and Megla, 33.

Powis, a Welsh Lord, discovers Sir John Old-Castle, takes him and carries him up to London to be executed for Heresy, 323.

Poynings, Sir Edward, sent to besiege Sluice, held against Maximilian by his Subjects, 603. Sent into Ireland, 612. Holds a Parliament, and gets the famous Statute past call'd by his Name, ibid. Arrests the Earl of Kildare, and sends him Prisoner to England, ibid.

Præmunire, Statute of, 270.

Prasutagus, King of the Iceni, leaving Cæsar Coheir with his Daughters, causes the Britains to revolt, 17.

Printing, first invented, and by whom, 417. brought into England, ibid.

Princes should not make War in Person, 543.

Priscus Licinius, Lieutenant of this Isle under Adrian, 21.

Probus subdues the Usurper Bonosus, who falls in the Battel, 23.

Progresses Royal, the Original of them, 123.

Provence, Countess of, Mother of Queen Eleanor Wife to Hen. III. magnificently treated by that King, 177. Her Four Daughters Queens, ibid.

Provisors, the Statute of, enacted, 220.

Provost of Paris, his Insolence to the Dauphin, 227.

Q.

QUO-Warranto, a Writ of Enquiry into the Titles of the Barons Estates, put forth by Edw. I. 195.

Quhtlaw, Alexander, a Scots Bishop, his Speech and Encomium on Rich. III. 572.

R.

Rhebells, King of, Perkin so call'd by Hen. VII. 622.

Rame, Thomas, Esq; his swift Passage over to the Earl of Richmond in Bretagne, 505. Executed at Exeter on bare Suspicion, 507.

Rampston, Sir Thomas, taken Prisoner at Patay, 361. And again at St. Selerine, 390.

Ramsey, Alexander, a Scotsman, with 40 Men surprises and takes Berwick, 241. Loses it, ibid.

Ratcliffe, Sir Richard, employ'd to execute the Lord Rivers and others, 496. Kill'd at the Battle of Bosworth, 512.

Ravenstein, Lord, Rebels against Maximilian King of the Romans, and Sovereign of the Netherlands, 597. His Piratical War, 603. Redu'd to great Streights by the English Succours, ibid.

Readwulfe succeeding Ethelred in Northumberland, soon after his Coronation is cut off with his whole Army by the Danes at Alvetheli, 53.

Rebellion against William the Norman, 105. Against William Rufus, ibid. 114. Against Henry I. ibid. 120. Against King Stephen, ibid. 126. Against Richard II. by Wat Tyler, 245, 246. Another in Suffolk, 246, 247. More Rebellions, ibid. Against Hen. IV. ibid. 278, 279. Against Hen. VI. by Capt. Sharp, 368. One in Normandy against him, 374. In the Country of Caux, Suppress, 379. By Capt. Blewbeard, 402. By Jack Cade, 403. Richard, Duke of York his first, 408. The rise of his second, 410. Against Edward IV. 440. Against Henry VII. the Lord Lovel's, 582. Lambert Simnel's, 583, to 587. Sir John Egremond's and John a Chambers, 595. The Cornish Men's, 617.

Rederchus, reckon'd among the Ancient British Kings, 8.

Redion, one of the Ancient British Kings, 8.

Redwald, King of the East-Angles, Wars against Ethelred in defence of Edwyn, and slaies him in Battel, 40.

Regin, Son of Gorbonian, a good King, 8.

Remarkable Occurrences in the Reign of William the Norman, 112. Of William Rufus, 118. Of Henry I. 124. Of King Stephen, 131. Of Henry II. 149. Of Richard I. 158. Of King John, 169. Of Henry III. 190. Of Edward I. 202. Of Edward II. 205, 211. Of Edward III. 228, 335. Of Richard II. 249, 250, 266, 267, 268, 270, 280, 287. Of Henry IV. 284, 285, 294, 295, 298, 299, 300. Of Henry V. 319, 340. Of Henry VI. 347, 354, 376, 382, 384, 392, 406, 414, 428. Of Edward V. and Richard III. ibid. 506, 513. Of Henry VII. 580, 639.

René of Anjou, King of Sicily, beaten by Sir John Falstaffe, 367. Marries his Daughter to Henry VI. 393. Anjou and Maine deliver'd to him by King Henry, 395. Pawns his Titulary Kingdoms to redeem his Daughter whom Edward IV. had taken Prisoner, 454.

Resumptions of Lands belonging to the Crown, 132. By Richard I. 156. By Henry III. 172.

Retainers suppress by Act of Parliament, 631.

Ribaumont, Monsieur, a French Knight, Fights singly with Edward III. and is honour'd by him, 224.

Richard I. surnam'd Cœur de Lyon, Succeeds his Father Henry II. 150. His Treasures, ibid. His Expedition into the Holy Land, 151. Who accompany'd him, 152. He arrives in Sicily, Conquers Cyprus, and marries the Lady Berengera, ibid. His Actions in the East, where he makes two Kings, the one of Jerusalem, and the other of Cyprus, 153. Troubles in England in His absence, ibid. He is taken Prisoner by the German Emperor in his return, 154. His Letter to Archbishop Hubert about his Redemption, ibid. The Articles of his Redemption, ibid. He arrives in England, 155. He is crown'd again, 156. He resides in Normandy all the rest of His Reign, ibid. His means of raising Money, ibid. His Death and the occasion of it, 157. His Character and Issue, ibid. A notable Saying of His to a Priest, 158. Remarkable Occurrences in His Reign, ibid.

Richard II. born at Bourdeaux, 231. In danger of losing the Succession by means of John of Gaunt, 232. His Age and Disposition when he came to the Crown, 237. Crown'd, ibid. Assists the Duke of Bretagne, 243. Rudely treated by Wat Tyler, 246. Suppresses several Rebellions, 246, 427. Orders vast Numbers of the Rebels to be Executed, 248. Marries the Emperor's Sister Anne, ibid. His Disposition at 17 Years of Age, 250. His Favorites, ibid. Invades Scotland, 253, 254. Puts his Brother to Death for a Murder, ibid. Threatned with an Invasion from France, 255. His haughty Answer to the Parliaments Petition, 256. Leaves them and returns, ibid. Thirteen Rulers appointed by the Parliament, ibid. Receives his Favourites, whom the Parliament had expell'd, at Court again, 257. He and His Favourites contrive the Distruction of the Lords that oppos'd them, 258. His Proceedings against them, and the wicked Answer of His Judges to His Quæries, 259. Forces them to take Arms, 260. His Treachery and Mock Reconcilement with the Lords, ibid. 261. He retires into the Tower from them, ibid. Confesses His Male-Administration, 262. And submits to them, ibid. Solemnly reconcil'd to them, 263. Is of Age, and takes on Him the Government, 264. And manages it for the worse, 265. He assists the Genoese and the Prussians, 266. Angry with the Londoners, and why, 268. Takes away the Londoners Liberties, and sets a Governour over the City, 269. His Sorrow for His Queens Death, 271. He goes to Ireland, subdues several Petty Kings, and holds a Parliament at Dublin, 271. How he dealt with the Wicklivists of Quality, 272. Marries Isabel Daughter to the French King, 273, 274. Has an Interview with the French King, and concludes a Peace, ibid. The vast Expence of his Wedding with Queen Isabel, ibid. Murders his Uncle the Duke of Gloucester, 275. Seizes the other Lords that oppos'd his Favourites, 276. Gets them to be try'd by a packt Parliament, 277. Hated for it, ibid. Gets the Parliament to lodge their Power in the hands of his Favourites and Creatures, 178. Discontents about it, ibid. His violent Proceedings, 280. Seizes the Duke of Lancaster's Estate, ibid. Passes over to Ireland, 281. His Actions there, ibid. 282. His unhappy stay in Ireland after the Duke of Lancaster landed in England, 284. Disbands his Army, ibid. He is carry'd to the Duke by the Earl of Northumberland's Treachery, 285. He is depos'd and resigns the Crown, 286, 287. His Behaviour upon it, 287. Remarkable Occurrences in His Reign, ibid. Proceedings in Parliament against him, ibid. 275. Remov'd from the Tower to Leeds-Castle in Yorkshire, 277. He is murder'd, the various manner of his Death reported by several Authors, 279, 280. His Character and Burial, 280. Henry V. orders his Body to be remov'd to Westminster, ibid. 300.

Richard III. his Dissimulation on his Accession to the Throne, 508. He is Crown'd with His Queen, ibid. 515, 526. He contrives the Distruction of the two young Princes, ibid. 578. Orders them to be murder'd, and is terrify'd in Conscience, 501. His Progress to Gloucester, 527. Quarrels with the Duke of Bucks, ibid. He is Crown'd a second time at York, ibid. His Letter to the Master of his Wardrobe for things for that Coronation, ibid. A Conspiracy form'd against him by Bucks and the Bishop of Ely, 504, 505. He summons the Duke of Bucks to Court, 506. Prepares for his Defence, ibid. 529. His Cruelty, 507. He enters into an Alliance with Scotland, and Proclaims John, Earl of Lincoln, Heir Apparent, ibid. Persuades the Queen to leave Sanctuary, 508. Gets her Daughters into his hands, ibid. Resolv'd to Marry the Eldest, and rid himself of his Wife, ibid. She dyes soon after, ibid. He designs to Marry the Princess Elizabeth, 509. How prevented, ibid. His Proceedings on the Earl of Richmond's Landing, ibid. He marches against him, and encamps at Bosworth, 510. His Speech to his Soldiers, ibid. He fights the Earl, and is slain, 512, 542. He wears his Crown in the Battel, ibid. His Character, 513. His Descent, 514. His Body abus'd, 542, 578. His Virtues maliciously censur'd, 548. Not deform'd, ibid. Defended from the Murder of Hen. VI. 549. Of Prince Edward his Son, ibid. Of George Duke of Clarence, ibid. That he rais'd no Slander against His Mother, 550. Who kill'd the two young Princes, King Edward's Sons, ibid. 551, 552. But prov'd upon him, ibid. Buck's Reasons why He could not be guilty of their Murder, 559. How he excuses his Treaty of Marriage with His Neice the Princess Elizabeth, 567, 568. Defended against the Charge of Tyranny, 570, 571. His Virtues, ibid. His Acts of Charity and Magnificence, 572. Several real Examples of His Good Government from Authentic Records, 576. His Body bury'd in a Royal Tomb by Henry VII. ibid. Buck's Discription of his Person contrary to Sir Tho. Moor and all other Accounts, 577. Verses upon Him, ibid. The Lord St. Albans calls Him a Tyrant, 578. Says his End was Just, ibid. That he murder'd His two Nephews, ibid. His Vices over-ballance His Virtues, ibid. He was Jealous of His Honour, and made good Laws, ibid. Attainted by King Henry VII's first Parliament, 581.

Richard, Earl of Cornwal, Brother to Henry III. is the Occasion of the second Barons War, 173. Heads the Barons, 179. Grows cold towards them, ibid. He goes into the Holy Land, returns and marries Zanchia, Sister to Eleanor Wife to Henry III. 177. Has Gascoign taken from him, 182. Made King of the Romans, 183. He is Crown'd at Aix la Chapelle, 184. He is forc'd to return to England, ibid. 185. The vast Riches he expended in Germany, ibid. His stern Answer to the Barons Demand, ibid. He swears what the Barons would have of him, 186. Denies them, 187. Is taken Prisoner at the Battel of Lewes, ibid. His Death, 190.

Richards, the Name Unfortunate to the Title of York, 429.

Richmond, Robert de Artois, a French Prince, made Earl of, by Edw. III. 215. Ri-

INDEX to the First Volume.

Richmond, Earl of, the Dukes of Bretagne formerly so, 521.

Richmond, Henry Earl of, brought to Henry VI. and his Saying of him, 638. Flies to Bretagne, 454. His Reception there, ibid. 521. His Danger and Escape, 457, 472, 521. Buck's Account of his first Expedition from Bretagne to England, 534. His Descent, 537. His Title to the Crown examin'd, 471, 538, 539, 540. Receives Messengers out of England with an account of the Conspiracy in his favour, 505. Engages to marry the Princess Elizabeth, ibid. 532. He sails to England, but dares not land, 506, 532. Returns to France, ibid. He is attainted, 507. In great danger in Bretagne, ibid. His Reception in France, ibid. He stops the Marquess Dorset going to leave him, 509. He embarks for England, 541. He lands in Wales, ibid. 540. Loses his Way in his March, 510. His Speech before he gave King Richard Battel, 511. He is Crown'd in the Field with King Richard's Crown, by Sir William Stanley, 512, 542. compare with 520, 521, 522, &c. See Henry VII.

Richmond, Countess of, her Descent, 537. Holds up Queen Ann's Train at King Richard's Coronation, 500. Her Correspondence with the Queen Dowager, to advance her Son the Earl of Richmond, 505, 532. Her Dissimulation with King Richard, 520. Attainted in Parliament, 527.

Richmond Palace built by Henry VII. 623.

Rights of the Kings of England to their Crown, 103.

Rikel Judge, an Irishman, Richard II's Tool to murther his Unkle the Duke of Glocester, 276, 278.

Ring Wedding of England, what it is, 575.

Riot, one in London by the Citizens against the Duke of Lancaster, 233. Another against the Bishop of Salisbury's Servants in Fleet-street, 269. One in St. Dunstan's Church, occasion'd by a Quarrel between the Lord Strange and Sir John Trussell's Ladies, 324. One in Fleet-street, between the Students of Clifford's-Inn and the Citizens, 391. Another at chooſing a Lord Mayor, ibid. One at Norwich, 392. One in Wiltshire against the Bishop of Salisbury, 405. One in London against the Duke of Somerset, 406. Another at London in favour of the Duke of York, 413.

Rivallo succeeds his Father Cunedagius, 6.

Rivers, Richard Lord Woodville, made Earl, 438. And High Constable of England, ibid. Put to Death by Robin of Riddesdale, and his Rabble at Northampton, 171.

Rivers, Richard Woodville Earl, arrested by the Duke of Glocester, 484. He is beheaded at Pomfret, 496. compare with 519.

Roan, Archbishop of, defeated and slain by the English, 222.

Roan besieg'd by Henry V. 324. Surrenders on Articles, 325.

Robert, eldest Son of William the Norman, rebels against him, 107. He attempts to get the Crown from his Brother William Rufus, ibid. 113. Makes an Agreement with him, ibid. His Wars with King William in Normandy, 114. Peace made between them, ibid. Mortgages his Dutchy to him, and goes to the Holy War, 116. He behaves himself bravely there, 119. Refuses to be King of Jerusalem, ibid. Unfortunate ever after, ibid. He returns, and arrives at Portsmouth, ibid. His Agreement with King Henry, 120. His second War with that King, is subdu'd, and as some Authors write blinded, ibid. 573.

Robert Earl of Glouceſter, base Son to Henry I. takes Arms against King Stephen, 126. Forc'd to fly to the Empress Maud in Anjou, ibid. Returns to England with his Sister Maud, 128. He takes King Stephen Prisoner, ibid. Is himself taken Prisoner, and exchang'd for the King, ibid. Refuses to side with him, ibid. His Death, 130.

Robbin of Riddesdale rises against Edward IV. in the North, 271.

Roger Bishop of Sarum, Chief Counsellor to Henry I. 123. His Buildings, ibid. His Castles seiz'd by King Stephen, 126. His Troubles and Death, 127.

Rokesby, Sir Thomas Sheriff of Yorkshire, his Valour and Loyalty, 297.

Rollo the Dane or Norman, having fought unsuccessfully here, turns his Forces against France, and conquers the Country, since call'd Normandy, 58. From him descended William, sirnam'd the Conqueror, 89.

Romans land in Britain under the Conduct of Julius Cæsar, 10. Their sharp Conflict with the Britains near the Stoure in Kent, 12. They are cruelly massacred by the Britains, 17. They leave the Island to succour their declining Affairs in other parts, 27. They come and aid the Britains against the Scots and Picts, 28. They help them to build a new Wall, ibid. Instruct them in War, and take their last Farewell, ibid.

Romanus, nam'd among the four Sons of Histion, sprung of Japhet, and from him the Romans fabled to be deriv'd, 2.

Rotheram, Dr. Archbishop of York, his Speech to the Queen, Mother of Edward V. 485. He leaves the Great Seals with her, being Lord Chancellor, ibid. Sends for them again, ibid. The Seal taken from him, 486. He is imprison'd, 494.

Rosamund, the Lord Clifford's Daughter, kept by King Henry at Woodstock, 143. Her Children by King Henry, 149.

Rowena, the Daughter of Hengist, sent for over by her Father, 31. She presents King Vortigern with a Bowl of Wine by her Father's Command, ibid. She is upon the King's demand given him in Marriage, ibid.

Rudaucus King of Cambria, subdu'd in Fight, and slain by Dunwallo Mulmutius, 6.

Rud-Hudibras succeeds his Father Leil, and founds Caerkeint, or Canterbury, with several other places 5.

Runno, the Son of Peredure, not his immediate Successor, 8.

Russel, Dr. John Bishop of Lincoln, made Lord Keeper by Richard III. 529. The Usurper's Original Letter to him, to send him the Great Seal when he was marching against the Duke of Buckingham, 532.

Rutland, Edmund Plantagenet Earl of, murther'd at twelve Years old by the Lord Clifford, 425.

Rye burnt by the French, 236.

S.

Sabra, thrown into the River Severn, (thence call'd Sabrina) with her Mother Estrildis by Guendolen, 5.

St. Albans, first Battel of, 412. Second Battel, 426.

St. Albans in Bretagne, Battel of, 593.

St. Dennis, taken by the French, and retaken by the English, 375. Lost again, 379.

St. Martyn, Richard takes the Earl of Lancaster's Wife from him by Edward the Second's Order or Connivance, 206.

St. Paul, Guido Earl of, the French King's Ambassador to Richard II. his wicked Advice to him to murther his Unkle the Duke of Glocester, 275.

St. Paul, Count de, his Treachery to Edward IV. 463. Abandon'd by King Edward, 465. His bad Condition, 466. He is put to Death, 470. King Edward blam'd for it, ibid.

Saladine, Sultan of Egypt, conquers Jerusalem, 152.

Salisbury, William Montacute Earl of, conquers the Isle of Man, and is honour'd with the Title of King there, 219.

Salisbury, John Montacute Earl of, his Loyalty to Richard II. 284. How receiv'd by the Duke of Lancaster, 285. Condemn'd in Parliament 1 Hen. IV. 274. One of the Conspirators against that King, 277. Taken and beheaded by the Bailiff of Cicester, ibid. A Favourer of Wickliff's Doctrine, 307.

Salisbury, Thomas Earl of, takes Amberville in France, and has the Town given him by Henry V. 321. Recovers Auranches from the French, 336. Obtains a signal Victory over the French, and retakes Pont-Meulan, 345. Made Governour of the Provinces of Brie and Champaigne, 346. His Successes in Champaigne, 347. His farther Conquests and Generosity, 348, 349. Jealous of the Duke of Burgundy's Kindness to his Wife, and hates him, ibid. He takes Mans, St. Susan, and La Ferte Bernard, 350. He is honour'd farther by the Regent, ibid. Sent into France with fresh Forces, 356. Proposes the Siege of Orleans, and commands at it, ibid. Kill'd at that Siege, 357.

Salisbury, Richard Nevill Earl of, Son to the Earl of Westmorland by Earl Thomas's Daughter, 357. Conspires with the Duke of York against Henry VI. 407. Fights and routs the Lord Audley, 418. His Sons taken, and how deliver'd, ibid. Proclaim'd Traytor, 419. Attainted, 429. His Head cut off by the People who hated him, 425.

Salisbury, Countess of.

Salisbury, John Waltham Bishop of, his House in London attack'd by the Rabble, 269. The Citizens lose their Liberties for it, ibid. His Death, ibid.

Salisbury, Margaret Plantagenet Countess of, Daughter to George Duke of Clarence, and the last of the Royal Line of Plantagenet; dragg'd to Execution by the Hair of her Head, as Buck says, 574.

Salisbury, William Ascoth Bishop of, murther'd by his Tenants, 405.

Samothes, the first King that History or Fable mentions to have peopled this Island, 2.

Samulius, recorded among the ancient British Kings, 8.

Sanctuaries, the Use and Abuse of them, deliver'd by the Duke of Buckingham before the Lords of the Council in the Reign of Edward V. 488. The Grievance of 'em redress'd by the Pope for Henry VII. 588.

Saron, the second King nam'd among the Successors of Samothes, 2.

Sawter, William a Wickliffist, the first that suffer'd Death by the Act de Hæretico Comburendo, 282.

Saxons harass the South-Coasts of Britain, slay Nectaradius and Balcobaudes, 25.

Saxons and Picts, See Picts.

Saxons, a Description of them, 86.

Saxons invited into Britain by Vortigern and the Britains against the Scots and Picts, 30. Their Original, ibid. They arrive under the Leading of Hengist and Horsa, ibid. They beat the Scots and Picts near Stamford, 31. Fresh Forces sent to them, and their Bounds enlarg'd, ibid. They making League with the Scots and Picts, waste the Land with ut Resistance, ibid. Beaten by Guertimer in four Battels, and driven into Thanet, ibid. They return most of them into their own Country, ibid. The rest notably defeated by Ambrosius Aurelianus and the Britains, 32.

Say, Lord, beheaded by Jack Cade, 404.

Scales, Lord, his Successes in Anjou and Maine, 349. Taken Prisoner at Patay, 361. His Acts in France, 383. Defends the Tower against Jack Cade, 404. Assists the Londoners against the Rebels, 405. Sides with Henry VI. against the Duke of York, 420. Threatens the Lord Mayor of London if he favours the Duke's Friends, 421. Plays with his Ordnance on the City from the Tower, 422. Resigns it, and is slain, ibid.

Scales, Anthony Woodville, made Lord, 438.

Schism in the Papacy, 116, 297. It ends, 398.

Scots, Picts and Attacots harass the South-Coast of Britain, 25. Overcome by Maximus, ibid. Beaten by the Romans sent to succour the Britains, 28. They make Spoil and Havock with little or no opposition, ibid.

Scots possess'd Ireland, and first nam'd it Scotia, 26.

Scots King does Homage to King Edward the elder, 60. To King Canute, 73. To William the Norman, ibid. 106. Stipulates to do it to William Rufus, 114. He does it to King Henry II. at Chester, 132. And in Normandy, 138. Again, 145. To King Edward I. 195. To Edward III. 214. To King Henry VI. the Form of it, 348.

Scot, the best of their Families descended from English Refugees, 105. Scots King taken Prisoner by some Knights of Yorkshire, 144. Articles agreed on between the Scots King and King Richard I. about the Entertainment of the former in England, ibid. 155. The Scots war with Henry III. 170. Scots King refuse to do Homage to Henry III. 180.

Scots, the Pretenders to the Crown refer their Pretensions to be decided by King Edw. I. 195.

Scots, their long War with the English, and the occasion of it, 196. Almost subdu'd by Edward I. ibid. Beaten at Fawkirke, and reduc'd by that King, 198. They complain of him to the Pope, ibid. They set up Robert Bruce against John Baliol, 200. Defeat the English at Bannockſborough, 205. They are a Terror to the English after this overthrow, ibid. They infest the Borders of England, and invade Ireland, 206. Recover Berwick, ibid. Are like to surprize the Queen at York, ibid. They escape from the young King Edward III. 212. A shametul Peace with them, ibid. Beated by Edward III. at Halydown, 213. Their King driv'n into the Illands by by Edward III. 219. Beaten, and their King taken Priſoner by the Engliſh, 222. Make Inroads into England, 238. They are troubleſome to the Engliſh, 244. A Truce with them, ibid. They take Werk-Caſtle, 252. Invaded by the Duke of Lancaſter, a Truce with them, and they break it, ibid. 253. Their Cruelty, 264. Their Wars with England in the Reign of Henry IV. 276, 282. They are twice defeated, 285. They ſhelter Engliſh Rebels, 294. Much damag'd by the Engliſh Fleet, 299. Beaten by Sir Robert Umfreville in the Reign of Henry VI. 314. They invade England while Henry V. is in France, 322. They retire, 323. They help Charles VI. the French King againſt the Engliſh, 344. Their Alliance with the Uſurper Richard III. 530. The Riſe of the Union between the two Nations, 620.

Scroop Lord, Lord Chancellor of England, refuſes to ſeal a Grant of Richard the Second's, 250. Turn'd out for it, his bold Saying to the King, ibid.

Scroop Lord, beheaded at Briſtol by the Duke of Lancaſter, 283.

Scroop, Richard Archbiſhop of York, riſes in Rebellion againſt Henry IV. 292. Taken and beheaded, 293.

Scroop, Henry Lord, hang'd, drawn and quarter'd for Treaſon to Henry V. 316.

Sea-Monſter, Vide Monſter.

Seaton, Lord, his brave defence of Berwick againſt Edward III. 214. How us'd by him, ibid.

Sebaſtian Don, King of Portugal, his Story, 557. Whether an Impoſtor or not, queſtion'd, ibid.

Sebbi, having reign'd over the Eaſt-Saxons thirty Years, takes on him the Habit of a Monk, 44.

Sebert, the Son of Sleda, reigns over the Eaſt-Saxons by permiſſion of Ethelbert, 39.

Segonax, one of the four petty Kings in Britain that aſſaulted Cæſar's Camp, 13.

Segrave, Sir Nicholas, his Caſe and Sufferings, 199, 200.

Seius Saturninus commands the Roman Fleet in Britain, 21.

Selred, the Son of Sigebert the Good, ſucceeds Offa in the Eaſt-Saxon Kingdom, and comes to a violent end, 47.

Sens, William Archbiſhop of, his profane Speech to the Pope about Becket's Murther, 140. The City ſurrender'd to the Engliſh, 331.

Septimius Severus, the Roman Emperor, arrives in Perſon with an Army in this Iſland, 22. His ill ſucceſs againſt the Caledonians, ibid. Nevertheleſs he goes on, and brings them to terms of Peace, ibid. Builds a Wall croſs the Iſland from Sea to Sea, 23. They taking Arms again, he ſends his Son Antoninus againſt them, ibid. He dies at York, 'tis thought of Grief, ibid.

Serjeants at Law, a Call of, 437. Another, 613. Another, 631.

Serlow, raiſes a Report of King Richard the Second's being alive to diſturb Henry IV. 289. Hang'd, 290.

Severus, ſent over Deputy into this Iſland by the Emperor Valentinian, 25.

Sexburga, the Wife of Kenwalk, driv'n out by the Nobles, diſdaining her Government, 44.

Sexted and Siward re-eſtabliſh Paganiſm in the Eaſt-Saxon Kingdom after the Death of their Father Sebert, 40. In a Fight againſt the Britains, they periſh with their whole Army, ibid.

Sharp, Capt. Jack, his Rebellion to deſtroy Prieſts, 368. He is hang'd, 369.

Shaw, Dr. John, Preaches a ſeditious Sermon to prove King Edward IV's Marriage with his Queen was not lawful, and that her Children were Illegitimate, 497. He dies of Shame and Grief, ibid. Cenſur'd by Buck, 550.

Shaw, Sir Edmund Lord Mayor of London, one of the Conſpirators to advance the Duke of Gloceſter to the Throne, 497. His Diſcourſe with the Duke of Buckingham, 499.

Shaw, Sir John, the firſt Lord Mayor of London that went to Weſtminſter by Water to be ſworn, 639. Removes the Mayor's Feaſt to Guild-Hall, ibid.

Sheep, Cotſwold ſent to Spain by Edward IV. the ill Conſequence, 438, 439.

Shelly, Judge, commends Richard III's Laws to Cardinal Wolſey, 571.

Sheriffs of London, when firſt ſo call'd, 169.

Sheriffs, remov'd for Corruption, 175.

Shore, Jane, kept by the Lord Haſtings after King Edward's Death, 493. She is proſecured by the Lord Protector, the Duke of Gloceſter, 496. Her Character, ibid. Her Sufferings juſtify'd, 570.

Shrewſbury, Hugh Earl of, his Cruelty towards the Welſh, 115. His Death, ibid.

Shrewſbury, John Lord Talbot made Earl of, 391. Taken Priſoner, and releas'd, 401. Recovers Bourdeux, 409. Is ſlain with his Son, &c. ibid.

Shrewſtury, a wicked Parliament held there, who betray'd their Liberties to Richard the Second, 278.

Sigeard and Senfred ſucceed their Father Sebbi in the Eaſt-Saxon Kingdom, 47.

Sigebert ſucceeds his Brother Eorpwald in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Angles, 42. He founds a School or College, and betakes himſelf to a Monaſtical Life, 43. Is forc'd into the Field againſt Penda, ibid. And is ſlain with his Kinſman Eſric, ibid.

Sigebert, ſirnam'd the Small, ſucceeds his Father Seward King of the Eaſt-Saxons, 43. His Succeſſor Sigebert the Second is perſuaded by Oſwi to embrace Chriſtianity, ibid. Is murther'd by the Conſpiracy of two Brethren, ibid. His Death denounc'd by the Biſhop for eating with an Excommunicated Perſon, ibid.

Sigebert, the Kinſman of Cuthred, ſucceeds him in the Weſt-Saxon Kingdom, 47.

Siger, the Son of Sigebert the Small, and Sebbi the Son of Seward, ſucceed in the Government of the Eaſt-Saxons after Swithelm's deceaſe, 44.

Silures, a People of Britain, chooſe Caractacus for their Leader againſt the Romans, 15. They continue the War after Caractacus is taken, againſt Oſtorius and others, 16. They are tam'd, 19.

Simnell Lambert, an Impoſtor ſet up by Richard Simon, an Oxford Prieſt, againſt Henry VII. 583. Pretends to be Edward Plantaginet Earl of Warwick, ibid. He is carry'd over to Ireland by Simon, 584. Very well receiv'd there, ibid. Proclaim'd King, ibid. Gets a Party in England, 585. Is Crown'd at Dublin, 586. Lands in England with an Army, ibid. He is defeated, taken, pardon'd, and made a Turn-broach, 587. Is advanc'd to be King Henry's Falconer, ibid.

Simon Zelotes, by ſome ſaid to have preach'd the Chriſtian Faith in this Iſland, 22.

Simon, Richard, an Oxford Prieſt, ſets up the Impoſtor Lambert Simnell, 583. Thought to be inſtigated to it by ſome great Perſons, ibid. Taken, impriſon'd, and never heard of more, 587.

Simony firſt practis'd in England, 44.

Siſillius ſucceeds Jago, 6. Another of that Name ſucceeds his Father Guitheline, 7. Another Britiſh King of that Name, 8.

Siward, King of the Eaſt-Saxons, Father of Sigebert, little ſaid of Him, 43.

Siward, Earl of Northumberland, ſent by Hardecnute, together with Leofric, againſt the People of Worceſter, 75. He and Leofric raiſe Forces for King Edward againſt Earl Godwin, 77. He makes an Expedition into Scotland, vanquiſhes Macbeth, and places in his ſtead Malcolm Son of the Cumbrian King, 78. He dyes at York in an arm'd Poſture, ibid. His Son Waltheof taken into Favour by William the Norman, and marry'd to His Neice, ibid. 106. Beheaded, ibid.

Sleda erects the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Saxons, 33.

Sobriquets, or Nicknames, their Original, 516.

Somerſet, Thomas Beaufort, John of Gaunt's Son by Kat. Swinford, made Earl of, 274.

Somerſet, Edmund Beaufort, Duke of, puts in for the Government of France, 378. Oppoſes the Duke of York, ibid. Takes Harfleur, 383. And ſeveral other Towns, 389. Made Regent of France by Suffolks means, in oppoſition to the Duke of York, 394. Loſes all France, 398, 399, 400. Retires to Calais, 401. Impriſon'd, and his Houſe robb'd, 406. The Duke of York's Rebellion on his Account, 408. Charges that Duke with Rebellion in the King's Preſence, ibid. More in Favour than ever, 409. Seiz'd by the Duke of York, 411. Sav'd by the Queen, ibid. Made Governour of Calais, ibid. Slain, 412.

Somerſet, Henry Beaufort, Duke of, his Son revenges his Father's Death, 413. Made Governour of Calais, 429. Is deny'd Entrance, ibid. Eſcapes at the Battel of Towton, 433 Submits to Edward IV. ibid. He revolts to Henry VI. is taken and beheaded, 435.

Somerſet, Edmund Beaufort, Duke of, routed at Tewkesbury fighting againſt King Edward IV. 452. Kills the Lord Wenlock on his own ſide, 453. Is beheaded, ibid.

Somerſet, Family of, the Difference between that and Lancaſter, 536.

Somerſets, Earls of Worceſter, from whom deriv'd, 536.

South-Saxon Kingdom, by whom erected, 33.

South-Saxons, upon what occaſion converted to Chriſtianity, 45.

Spencer, Hugh, Father and Son, in great Favour with Edward II. 206. The Barons complain of them, ibid. They are baniſh'd, 207. The younger Spencer turns Pyrate, ibid. They are reſtor'd to Favour, and the Father made Earl of Winchester, ibid. They provoke the Queen to take Arms, 208, 209. The Father hang'd by Her Command at Briſtol, ibid. The Son Earl of Gloceſter hang'd alſo, 210.

Spencer, Hugh, made Earl of Gloceſter by Richard the Second, is degraded by Henry IV. 274. Conſpires and Rebels againſt Him, 277, 278, 279. Is taken and beheaded at Briſtol, ibid.

Stafford, Edward, Biſhop of Exeter, his Speech in Parliament of the King's uncontroulable Power, 276.

Stafford, John, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by his Prudence ſuppreſſes Cade's Rebellion, 405.

Stafford, Lord, deſerts the Earl of Pembroke, Edward IV's General, is taken and beheaded, 441.

Stafford, Sir Humphry, routed and kill'd by Jack Cade, 404.

Stafford, Humphry and Thomas, Rebel againſt Hen. VII. Humphry taken and executed, 582. Thomas is pardon'd, ibid.

Stanley, Thomas Lord, Accompanies the Duke of Gloceſter in his Expedition againſt the Scots, 479, 518. One of the Chief Councellors to Richard Duke of Gloceſter, 491. Impriſon'd, 494. Adviſes the Lord Haſtings to fly, from a Dream, ibid. Set at Liberty, and made Lord Steward, 500. King Richard retains him at Court, ibid. Obliges him to Confine his Wife, the Counteſs of Richmond, Mother to Henry VII. 507. His brave Anſwer to King Richard threatning him to put his Son to Death, 512. Made Earl of Derby, 580.

Stanley, Sir William, Crowns Henry VII. in the Field, 512, 542, 579. Conſpires againſt Him in favour of Perkin Warbeck, 608. He is impriſon'd and beheaded, 610. Reflections on his Death, ibid. 611. His Riches and Ambition, ibid.

Star-Chamber Court deſcrib'd, 594.

Staterius, King of Albany, is defeated and ſlain in fight by Dunwallo Mulmutius, 6.

Stephen, Earl of Bologne and Mortagne, ſwears to be True to Maud the Empreſs, and is advanc'd by Henry I. 122. Elected King of England, and upon what Reaſons and Conditions, ibid. 125. His Firſt Parliament and Actions in it, ibid. He ſeizes the late King's Treaſure, ibid. He prepares for His Defence, and gives Liberty to build Caſtles, ibid. He demoliſhes them, and prohibits the building more, 126. Conquers the Earl of Anjou, ibid. His Saying on the Revolt of the Lords, ibid. He is taken Priſoner by the Earl of Gloceſter, 128. His Brother the Biſhop of Winchester joyns with Maud, ibid. A Council at Winchester held by Him in Her Favour, ibid. Stephen exchang'd for the Earl of Gloceſter, 129. He obliges Prince Henry, Son of Maud the Empreſs, to leave the Kingdom, 130. Comes to an Agreement with Him, ibid. His Death and Character, 131. Remarkable Occurrences in His Reign, ibid.

Stepholm, an Iſland at the Mouth of the Severn, beſieg'd by the Danes, 59.

Stigand, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, refus'd to Crown William the Norman, 104. He is depriv'd, and why, ibid. 105.

Stilicho repreſſes the invading Scots and Picts, 26.

Stillington, Dr. Thomas, Biſhop of Bath, ſaid by Buck to have marry'd King Edward IV. to the Lady Eleanor Talbot before he marry'd His Queen, 562. Comines ſays the ſame, ibid. Loſes King Edward's Favour, 565.

Stoke, Fight of, 587.

Stone, the Fatal, brought from Paleſtine to Scotland, 575. Remov'd to England by Edw. I. ibid. What Buchanan ſays of it, ibid.

Story, Sir Richard, a Wickliviſt and Member of Parliament, threatned by Richard II. 272.

Strangers, their Inſolence in the Reign of Hen. III. 181. Are cruelly us'd and baniſh'd, 185.

Stratford, John, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, his bold Letter to Edward III. 217. To the Lord Chancellor, 218. Another to the King about Grievances, ibid. Accus'd of many Crimes, ibid. Reconcil'd to the King, 220.

Straw, Jack, his Rebellion, 246, 247. His Confeſſion at the Gallows, 248.

Strongbow,

INDEX to the First Volume.

Strongbow, Richard Earl of Pembroke, his Succeſs in Ireland, 141.

Stuff and Withgar, the Nephews of Kerdic, bring him New Levies, 33. They Inherit what he won in the Iſle of Wight, 34.

Sudbury, Simon, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, beheaded by Wat Tyler, 245.

Suebard Reigns with Vitlred in the Kingdom of Kent, 46.

Suetonius Paulinus, Lieutenant in Britain, attacks the Iſle of Mona or Angleſey, 17.

Suffolk, Michael de la Pool, a Merchant's Son, made Earl of, and Lord Chancellor by Rich. II. 254. Try'd and Condemn'd to forfeit all his Eſtate, 256. His Fine forgiven by the King, and he receiv'd into greater Favour, 257. Hinders the King's being reconcil'd to the Lords that oppos'd the Favourites, 260. He flies out of England, 261.

Suffolk, William de la Pool, Earl of, takes ſeveral Towns in France, 347. Defeated, 356. Takes other Towns, 364. Commands at the Seige of Orleans, 357. Impriſons Joan of Orleans's Trumpeter, 358. Is forc'd by her to raiſe the Siege, 359. Taken Priſoner, ibid. Breaks off Hen. VI's Match with the Count Darmagnac's Daughter, 392. Is eager to conclude the Match with Rene Duke of Anjou's Daughter, 393. Gives up much to have her, ibid. Made Marqueſs.

Suffolk, William de la Pool, made Marqueſs, 393. Goes to fetch over Margaret whom he had contracted to Hen. VI. ibid. Joyns with Somerſet againſt the Duke of York, 394. His Speeches to the Lords and Commons about the Match, 394, 395. He is thank'd for it by 'em, 395. Made Duke.

Suffolk, William de la Pool, Duke of, Plots againſt the Duke of Gloceſter, 395. The Queen and he rule all, 397. Impeach'd in Parliament for the loſs of France, and other Crimes, 401. His Anſwer, 402. Beheaded without a Tryal or Warrant, ibid. His Character, ibid.

Suffolk, Edmond de la Pool, Earl of, kills a Man, forc'd to plead his Pardon, and flyes to the Dutcheſs of Burgundy, 628. Is perſuaded to return by Hen. VII. ibid. Flyes again, he is betray'd, and his Accomplices ſeiz'd, 630. Deliver'd up by the Archduke, 633.

Suidhelm ſucceeds Sigebert in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Saxons, 44. He is baptiz'd by Kedda, ibid.

Surianes, Sir Francis, a Spaniard, ſurpriſes Montargis, 367. Made Knight of the Garter, 398. Breaks a Truce made with the French, ibid. And occaſions a War that was the loſs of France, ibid.

Surrey, Thomas Holland Duke of, vindicates the Duke of Aumarle in Parliament, and is condemn'd with him, 274. Conſpires againſt Henry IV. 277. Rebels, 279. Is taken and beheaded, ibid.

Surrey, Thomas Howard Earl of, eſcapes at the Battel of Boſworth, 543. His Fortune afterwards, ibid. He ſurrenders himſelf, and is impriſon'd in the Tower, ibid. King Henry upbraids him there with his ſerving the Uſurper, 544. Releaſes and advances him, ibid. The Greatneſs of his Poſterity, 545. He is reſtor'd to his Father's Honours, ibid. But firſt attainted by Hen. VII's Firſt Parliament, 581. Taken into Favour by Hen. VII. 595. He routs the Rebel Sir John Egremond, ibid. Enters Scotland with an Army, 620.

Sutton, Alderman, kill'd in Cade's Rebellion, 405.

Swaine, in revenge of his Siſter's Death, makes great Devaſtations in the Weſt of England, 67. He carries all before him as far as London, 69. See 93.

Swaine, the Son of Earl Godwin, treacherouſly Murders his Kinſman Beorn, 76. His Peace wrought with the King by Aldred Biſhop of Worceſter, ibid. Toucht in Conſcience for the ſlaughter of Beorn, he goes Barefoot to Jeruſalem, and returning home dyes in Lycia.

Swartz Martyn, ſent by the Dutches of Burgundy with 2000 Men to aſſiſt Lambert Simnel the Impoſtor againſt Henry VII. 586.

Sweating Sickneſs, the firſt in England, 580. Its Cure, ibid. It returns, 639.

Swinford, Katharine, marry'd to John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaſter, after ſhe had been his Miſtreſs, 273. The Court Ladies offended, but her good Behaviour wins them, ibid. Her Deſcent, 471, 535. Her Children by him queſtion'd whether Legitimate, ibid.

Switherd, the laſt King of the Eaſt-Saxons, 47. Submits to Ecbert, 51.

Switzers deſcrib'd, 473.

Sword, Publick and Private, how us'd, 558.

Swurds born at the Coronation of the Kings of England, their ſignification, 526.

T.

Talbot, John Lord, his firſt Actions in France, 355. Made Governour of Anjou and Maine, ibid. His Fame, 356. Recovers Mans, loſt by the Earl of Suffolk, ibid. Takes Lavell, 360. Wounded and taken at Patay, 361. Exchang'd, 367. Takes ſeveral Places, 373. Relieves Giſors, 377. Other great Acts of his in France, 383, 384. He Challenges the Duke of Burgundy, and deſtroys his Towns, 384. Forc'd to raiſe the Seige of Diep, 389. Takes Conchat, and demoliſhes it, 390. Made Earl of Shrewsbury, 391. Vide, Earl of Shrewsbury.

Talbot, the Lady Eleanor, Daughter to the Earl of Shrewsbury, and Widow to Thomas Lord Butler of Sudeſley, contracted and marry'd to Edward IV. 562 to 564. She has a Child by him, 564. Dyes, 565.

Talbot, Mr. Thomas, of Lancaſhire, takes Henry VI. in Diſguiſe, 435.

Taximagulus, a Petty King anciently in Britain, one of the four Kings that aſſaulted Cæſar's Camp, 13.

Taylor, Sir John, goes to Perkin Warbeck in France, 607.

Taylor, William, a Miniſter of Briſtol, burnt for Hereſy in the Reign of Henry VI. 346. His Sufferings, Faith and Conſtancy, ibid.

Tenuantius, one of the Sons of Lud, has Cornwall allotted him, 8. Made King after the Death of Caſſibelan, 14.

Teudric, a Warlike King of Britain, ſaid to have exchang'd his Crown for a Hermitage, 37. To have taken up Arms in aid of his Son Mouric, ibid.

Tewkesbury, Battel of, 452.

Theobald, the Brother of King Ethelfred, ſlain at Degſaſtan, 38.

Theodore, a Monk of Tarſus, ordain'd Biſhop of Canterbury by Pope Vitalian, 44. By his means the Liberal Arts and the Greek and Latin Tongues flouriſh among the Saxons, ibid.

Theodoſius ſent over by the Emperor Valentinian, enters London victoriouſly, 25. Sends for Civilis and Dulcitius, ibid. Puniſhes Valentinus a Pannonian, conſpiring againſt him, ibid. He returns with Applauſe to Valentinian, ibid.

Theodoſius, the Son of the former preferr'd to the Empire, 25. Overcomes and ſlays Maximus, uſurping the Empire, ibid.

Thorp, Judge, deſerts Henry VI. at the Battel of St. Albans, 412. Hang'd by the Mob at Highgate, 422.

Thurfert, and divers other Daniſh Lords ſubmit to King Edward the Elder, 60.

Titalus ſucceeds his Father Uffa in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Angles, 33.

Titles, the Kings of England, theirs to the Crown, 574, 575.

Togodumnus, the ſecond Son of Cunobeline, ſucceeds in the Kingdom, 14. Is overthrown by Aulus Plautius, ibid. Slain in Battel, ibid.

Torture, the Force and Miſchief of it, 555.

Toſti, the Son of Godwin, made Earl of Northumberland in the room of Siward, 78. He ſwears Brotherhood with Malcolm King of Scotland, 79. Goes to Rome with Aldred Biſhop of York, ibid. The Northumbrians riſe againſt him, and expel him, ibid. A Story of great Courage and Cruelty committed by him at Hereford, ibid. Making War againſt his Brother King Harold, he is driv'n out of the Country by Edwin and Morcar, 81. Joyning with Harold Harfager King of Norway againſt his Brother, he is ſlain, together with Harfager in Battel, ibid.

Tournay beſieg'd by Edward III. 216.

Towton, Battel of, 433.

Tracy, Sir William, one of the four Knights that ſlew Thomas Becket of Canterbury, 140.

Trade, the Conſideration of it very much recommended to the Parliament by the Lord Chancellor Moreton, in Henry the Seventh's time, 592, 593. Incourag'd by Hen. VII. 597.

Trayle Baſton, a Writ ſo call'd, what it was, 200.

Treaty of Peace at Britigny, between Edw. III. and his Priſoner John the French King, 228. Between the Duke of Lancaſter and the King of Spain, 256. Between Rich. II. and Charles VI. 270.

Treaty of Peace between Sigiſmond Emperor of Germany and Henry the Fifth, 320. Articles of it, ibid.

Treaty, Articles of that between Hen. V. and the French King, 328, 329, 330.

Treaty, Articles of that between Hen. V. and the Duke of Burgundy, 330.

Treaties between Henry VI. and Charles VII. 376, 388, 392. Come to nothing.

Treaty, between the Duke of Burgundy and Charles VII. 376. Between Edward IV. and Lewis XI. 465. Between Henry VII. and Charles VIII. 605. Between Hen. VII. and the Princes of Italy againſt Charles VIII. 613. The Intercurſus Malus, the Treaty ſo call'd, between Henry VII. and Philip Sovereign of the Netherlands, 617. Henry VII's Treaty of Peace, and the Marriage of his Daughter Margaret with James IV. of Scotland, 625.

Treaties made by Richard III. with the Scots, Flemings and Bretons, 530.

Treachery, and its Arts with reſpect to Princes, 559.

Trebellius Maximus ſent into Britain in the room of Petronius Turpilianus, 18.

Treſſilian, Sir Robert, Chief Juſtice, ſent into Eſſex to try the Rebels, by Richard II. 248. A great Favourite of that King, 250. He engages the Judges that anſwer'd Richard II's Quæries againſt the Lords who oppos'd the Favourites, to give Anſwer as the King would have them, 259. He flies, 261. Taken and hang'd, 263.

Trevor, John Biſhop of St. Aſaph, joyns with the Rebel Owen Glendour, 289.

Trinobantes fall off from Caſſibelan, ſubmit to Cæſar, recommen'd Mandubratius to his Protection, 12.

Triumphs and Thankſgivings in England for the Victory at Agincourt, 319.

Trollop, Andrew, deſerts the Rebels and joyns Hen. VI. 419. Kill'd fighting for him at the Battel of Towton, 433.

Tudor, Owen, his Deſcent, 339. He Marries Queen Katherine, Widow of Henry V. ibid. His Children by her, 382. His Grandſon King of England, ibid. His Death, 429.

Turketill, a Daniſh Leader, ſubmitting to King Edward, obtains leave of him to go and try his Fortune in France, 59.

Turkil, a Daniſh Earl, aſſaults Canterbury, but is bought off, 68. He ſwears Allegiance to King Ethelred, that under that pretence he might ſlay and give Intelligence to Swaine, 69. He leaves the Engliſh again, and joyns with Canute, 70. His Greatneſs ſuſpected by Canute, he is baniſht the Realm, 73.

Tyler, Wat, Rebels, 245. The Cauſe of it, ibid. His Inſolence to the King, 246. Kill'd by Sir William Walworth, ibid.

Tyrant, what he is, 569, 570, 571.

Tyrants, how they juſtifie Cruelty, 519.

Tyrrell, Sir Walter, ſhot William Rufus in New Forreſt, 117.

Tyrrell, Sir James, Murders Edward V. and his Brother Richard Duke of York in the Tower, 501. How he was rewarded for it, 552. An Account of his Actions afterwards, ibid. He confeſſes it in Henry VII's Reign, 608. He is executed for a Conſpiracy againſt Henry VII. 631.

V.

Valentinian the Emperor, ſends over ſeveral Deputies to this Iſland, 25.

Vaucleer Monſieur, his pretended Loyalty, 443. And Treaſon to King Edward IV. 447.

Vaughan, Sir Thomas, arreſted by the Duke of Gloceſter, 484. Beheaded at Pomfret, 497. His bold Speech at his Death, ibid.

Vellius Bolanus, ſent into Britain in the room of Trebellius Maximus, 18.

Vellocatus, See Venutius and Cartiſmandua.

Venutius, a King of the Brigantes, deſerted by his Wife Cartiſmandua, who marries his Eſquire Vellocatus, 16. He rights himſelf againſt her by Arms, 17. Makes War ſucceſsfully againſt thoſe who took part with his Wife, ibid. He remains unconquer'd, 19.

Verannius ſucceeds A. Didius in the Britiſh Wars, 17.

Verneuil, Battel of, 349.

Vertue ever highly rewarded by the ancient Romans, 15.

Verulam Lord, his Hiſtory of Henry VII. 578.

Veſpaſian, valiantly fighting under Plautius, is reſcu'd from danger by his Son Titus, 15. For his his eminent Services here, he receives Triumphal Ornaments at Rome, ibid.

INDEX to the First Volume.

Uffa erects the Kingdom of the East-Angles, 33. From him his Successors call'd Uffings, ibid.

Vicarages, the Rise of them, 268.

Vice-Constable, Sir Ralph Ashton's Commission to be so, 329.

Victorinus, a Moor, appeases a Commotion in Britain by slaying a Governeur of his own recommending, 23.

Victorinus of Tolosa, made Præfect of this Island, 26.

Victred, the Son of Ecbert, obtaining the Kingdom of Kent, settles all things in Peace, 45. After thirty four Years Reign he dies, 46.

Videna slays her Son Ferrex, in revenge of her other Son Porrex, 6.

Vigenius and Peredure, expelling their Brother Elidure, share the Kingdom between them, 8.

Virius Lupus has the North part of the Government assign'd him by Severus the Emperor, 22.

Ulfketel, Duke of the East-Angles sets upon the Danes with great Valour, 68. His Army defeated through the Subtilty of a Danish Servant, ibid. He is slain with several other Dukes at Assandune, 71.

Ulpius Marcellus, sent Lieutenant to Britain by Commodus, ends the War by his Valour and Prudence, 22.

Umfreville, Sir Robert, beats the Scots at Getering, 314.

Vortigern's Character, 30. He is advis'd by his Council to invite in the Saxons against the Scots and Picts, ibid. He bestows upon Hengist and the Saxons the Isle of Thanet, ibid. Then all Kent, upon a Marriage with Rowena, Hengist's Daughter, 31. Condemn'd in a Synod for Incest with his Daughter; he retires to a Castle in Radnorshire, built for that purpose, ibid. His Son Guortimer dead, he resumes the Government, 32. Drawn into a Snare by Hengist, ibid. Retiring again, is burnt in his Tower, ibid. He was at first Earl of Cornwall, 86.

Vortipor reigns in Demetia, or South-Wales, 36.

Urianus, reckon'd in the number of ancient British Kings, 8.

Uther Pendragon, thought to be the same with Natanleod, 33.

Utbred Submits himself with the Northumbrians to Swaine, 69. To Canute, 70. His Victory over Malcolm King of the Scots, ibid. He is slain by Turebrand, a Danish Lord, at Canute's either Command or Connivance, ibid.

W.

Wakefield, Battel of, 425.

Walden, Roger D. D. Archbishop of Canterbury, depriv'd by Henry IV. his Death and Character, 295.

Wales gain'd by Henry II. 177. Reduc'd by King John, 163. Subdu'd more entirely by Edward I. 193. Annex'd to the Crown of England, 194.

Wales, Prince of, when the Heir Apparent of England was first so styl'd, 194. How the Ostrich Feather came to be his Arms, and when, 222.

Walker, Walter, hang'd for a foolish Word, 431.

Wallace, William the brave Scot, his Actions against the English, 198. Is taken and hang'd, 199.

Wallo, the Pope's Agent, a main Instrument in putting an end to the Barons Wars, 171.

Walworth, Sir William, Lord Mayor of London, kills Wat Tyler, 246.

Ward, Sir Simon, Sheriff of Yorkshire, fights the Barons at Borough-brig, 207.

Wards first granted to the King, 172.

Warham, Sir William, his Speech to the Archduke Governour of Flanders, demanding to have Perkin Warbeck deliver'd up, 609.

Warren Earl, his bold Answer to Edward I's Writ of Quo Warranto, 195. Made Warden of all Scotland, 196. Routed by Wallace in Scotland, 198. Is perswaded by the Archbishop of Canterbury to joyn with the Barons against Edward II. 204. Refuses to go with King Edward into Scotland, 205.

Warriours famous in the Reign of William the Norman, 112. Of William Rufus, 118. Of Henry I. 124. Of King Stephen, 131. Of Henry II. 150. Of Richard I. 158. Of King John, 170. Of Henry III. 191. Of Edward I. 201. Of Edward II. 211. Of Edward III. 235. Of Richard II. 288. Of Henry IV. 307. Of Henry V. 340. Of Henry VI. 428. Of Edward V. and Richard III. 513. Of Henry VII. 639.

Wars Civil, between the Houses of Lancaster and York, the Rise of 'em, 410. A Fight in it at St. Albans, 412. More Bloodshed, 414. The Fight at Bloreheath, 418. More Bloodshed, 420. The Fight at Northampton, 422. At Wakefield, 425. At Mortimers-Cross, 426, 429. Second of St. Albans, ibid. At Towton, 433. The vast number of the Slain in that Battel, ibid. More Bloodshed, 434. The Battel at Levells, 435. The Battel of Banbury, 441. Of Loose-Coat-Field, 443. Of Gladsmore-heath, 449, 450. Of Bosworth, 511. Of Stoke-Field, 587.

Warwick, Guy de Beauchamp Earl of, call'd the Black Dog of Arden by Peirce Gaveston, 203. Joyns with the Barons against Edward II. 204. Takes Gaveston Prisoner, ibid. Suppos'd to be poyson'd, 205.

Warbeck, Beauchamp Earl of, seiz'd and imprison'd by Richard II. 276. His Tryal, mean Confession, and Banishment, 277.

Warwick, Richard Beauchamp Earl of, arrives in France with a Reinforcement of six thousand Men, and is made Regent in the Duke of Bedford's absence, 352. His Victories and Fame, 354. Made Governour of Henry the Sixth's Person, 355. Takes Pontorson, ibid. Made Governour of France, 383. His Death, 386.

Warwick, Henry Beauchamp Earl of, his Son crown'd King of Wight by Henry the Sixth's own hands, 390. Made Duke of Warwick, 393. His Death, 395.

Warwick, Richard Nevill Earl of, Conspires with the Duke of York against Henry VI. 407. His Popularity, 411. Strikes the first Stroke in the Wars between Lancaster and York, 412. Takes a great Booty from the Spaniards, 417. Insulted at London, escapes to Calais, ibid. Proclaim'd Traytor, 419. Attainted, 420. Surprizes the Lord Rivers, and is too hard for the Duke of Exeter, ibid. Beheads Sir Simon Monford and others of the King's Friends, 420. His Declaration, and arrival at London, 421. Gets Edw. IV. elected King, 427. His Fear before the Battel of Towton, 432. Arrests King Henry VI. and uses him ill, 435. Discontented with Edward IV. 436. Sent into France to treat of a Marriage with the Lady Bona, 437. Disgusted at King Edward's marrying the Lady Elizabeth Gray, 438. Dissembles, ibid. Retires from Court in discontent, ibid. His Arts to raise a Party against the King, ibid. He conspires against him, 439. Engages the Duke of Clarence against his Brother Edward IV. ibid. Gives the Duke his Daughter in Marriage, ibid. 440. Treats of a Peace, 441. Seizes King Edward's Person, ibid. His Impolitickness in keeping him Prisoner, 442. Two Kings his Captives, ibid. His Interview after King Edward made his escape ends in Anger, ibid. Flies to Calais, 443. Goes to France, ibid. Treats with Queen Margaret, and marries his other Daughter to Prince Edward, ibid. Lands in England, and increases in Power, 444. Drives King Edward out of England, 445. Rules all as he pleases, 446. Refuses any Conditions offer'd by Edward IV. after the Duke of Clarence had deserted him, 448. Fights King Edward at Gladsmore-heath, 449, 450. He is kill'd, 450. His Character from Buck, ibid. He is sent Ambassador to treat of a Marriage between Edward the Fourth and the Princess Bona of Savoy, 563. His Resentment of that King's marrying the Lady Gray before he knew what was done in the Treaty which he had concluded, ibid.

Warwick, Edward Plantagenet Earl of, Son of George Duke of Clarence, confin'd to Sheriff Hutton in Yorkshire by Richard III. imprison'd by Henry VII. in the Tower, 579. A Counterfeit one, 584. The Earl shewn to the People, to discover the Imposture, 585. Another Counterfeit one, 625. He is drawn into a Conspiracy by Perkin Warbeck, ibid. Try'd, and found guilty of raising a Sedition, 626. Beheaded, ibid. He is the last of the Male-Line of the Plantagenets, ibid. Why King Henry deferr'd his Execution so long, 560. King James I. protested against the Justice of his Execution, 570.

Water, John, Mayor of Cork, hang'd with Perkin, 626.

Waterford, Citizens of, their Loyalty to Henry VII. 587, 621.

Welch, their Wars with William Rufus, 115. They rebel against Henry II. ibid. 133. Reduc'd by him, 137. They rebel against Henry III. 172. They revolt again, 178. They rebel again, and are reduc'd, 193, 194. They rebel under Owen Glendour, 281. Beaten in two Battles, 291. Assisted by the French, 294.

Welch Scholars, raise a Mutiny at Oxford, 264.

Welles Lord, unjustly put to Death by Edward IV. 442.

Welles, Sir Robert, his Son in Arms against King Edward IV. will not lay 'em down at his Father's Command, tho' he was in the King's Court, 442. Too furious in seeking Revenge for his Father's Death, 443. Defeated, taken, and beheaded, ibid.

Wenlock, Sir John, attainted by Henry VI. 420. Made a Lord by Edward IV. 451. He leaves him, and joyns with Henry the Sixth's Party, ibid. He is kill'd by the Duke of Somerses for his Treachery or Cowardice, 453.

Werk-Castle, taken by the Scots, 252.

Westminster, Abbot of, one of the Conspirators against Henry IV. and why, 277. Dies out of Grief that his Plot miscarry'd, 279.

Westminster-Hall built, 117.

Westmoreland, Ralph Nevill Earl of, Suppresses the Rebellion of Richard Scroop Archbishop of York, and takes him Prisoner, 293. His Saying of the Scots to Henry V. 314.

West-Saxon Kingdom, by whom erected, 33.

West-Saxons and their King converted to the Christian Faith by Berinus, 42.

Whores, order'd to wear a particular Dress, 225.

Wibba succeeds Crida in the Mercian Kingdom, 37.

Wiche, Richard, a Minister of Essex, burnt for Wickliff's Opinions, 387. Reputed a Saint, ibid.

Wickham, William of, Bishop of Winchester, his Birth, Fortunes and Death, 291.

Wickliff, John, first broaches his Opinions, 232. His Education and Fortune, ibid. Favour'd by the Duke of Lancaster, 233. Appears before the Bishop of London, ibid. A Mutiny at his Tryal, ibid. The Pope writes to Richard II. against him, 240. He is however favour'd, ibid. Vindicated as to any share in Tyler's or the other Rebellions in Richard the Second's Reign, 244. Publishes his Explication of his Opinions and Labours for Reformation of Manners, 249. A Petition to the King from the Commons in favour of his Followers, 250. His Followers keep their Opinions private, 265. Favour'd by the Londoners, 269. Condemn'd by the Council of Constance, and his Bones and Books burnt, 298, 359, 360. His Followers persecuted, 368.

Wight Isle, invaded by the French, 238, 286, 288. Henry Earl of Warwick crown'd King of it by Henry IV. 390.

Wilford, Ralph, the Counterfeit Earl of Warwick hang'd, 625.

Wilfrid, Bishop of the Northumbrians, depriv'd by Ecfric of his Bishoprick, wanders as far as Rome, 45. Returning, plants the Gospel in the Isle of Wight, and other places assign'd him, ibid. Has the fourth part of that Island given him by Kedwalla, ibid. He bestows it on Bertwin a Priest, his Sister's Son, ibid.

Willbrod a Priest, goes over with twelve others to preach the Gospel in Germany, 46. He is entertain'd by Pepin Chief Regent of the Franks, and made first Bishop of that Nation, ibid.

William of Malmsbury, our best Historian, 47.

William Duke of Normandy, honourably entertain'd by King Edward, and richly dismiss'd, 77. He betroths his Daughter to Harold, and receives his Oath to assist him to get the Crown of England, 78. Sending after King Edward's Death, to demand performance of his Promise, is put off with a slight Answer, 81. He lands with an Army at Hastings, ibid. Harold, who with his two Brothers is slain in Battel, 82. He is Crown'd at Westminster by Aldred Archbishop of York, ibid. His Acts before he was King, 97, 98, 100, 101, 102.

William the First, out of Flattery styl'd the Conqueror, 104. His Courage in his Government, ibid. His Voyage into Normandy, and return, ibid. He suppresses many Rebellions, 105. His Wars with the French, 107. He is set against the English, ibid. His Answer to a Sarcasm of the French King's, 108. His Government in Peace, ibid. He alters the Laws of England, 106, 108. Makes Alterations in the Government, 109. Orders a Survey of the Lands in England, 110. His Taxes, ibid. He makes a new Forest, ibid. The Cruelty of it, ibid. His Exactions

INDEX to the First Volume.

Exactions of the Church, ibid. His Council and Miniſters of State, ibid. His Death, Burial, and numerous Iſſue, 111. His Saying about the Succeſſion at his Death, ibid. His Corps immediately abandon'd, ibid. Of his Perſon and Character, 112. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, ibid.

William II. ſirnam'd Rufus, King of England, 113. Makes an Agreement with Robert his elder Brother, ibid. His Wars with his Brothers Robert and Henry in Normandy, 114. Makes Peace with them, ibid. His Wars with the Welſh, 115. A Conſpiracy againſt him, ibid. His Contrivance to raiſe Money, ibid. He gets Normandy, 116. His Avarice, ibid. Of his Perſon and Courage, 117. His Diſcourſe with a Monk, who came with two more to get an Abby that was fallen into his hands, ibid. He hated the Monk's Vices, and for that Reaſon he is rail'd at by them, ibid. His Saying againſt the Interceſſion of Saints, ibid. His Death in New-Foreſt, ibid. Remarkable Occurrences in his Reign, 118.

William Prince, Henry the Firſt's Son, drown'd with many more, 122.

William, Son of Robert Duke of Normandy, depos'd by his People, and ſlain in Battel, 122.

Willoughby Lord, defeats a Party of French, and forwards the taking of Alenzon, 250. Unfortunate at St. Severine, 368. Takes St. Vallery, 371. His Acts in Burgundy, 372. Suppreſſes a Rebellion in Normandy, 374. Beats the French in the Country of Amiens, 389.

Wincheſter, a Parliament held there, 213.

Wincheſter-School founded, 291.

Wincheſter, Henry Beauford Biſhop of, lends his Nephew Henry V. twenty thouſand Pounds on his Crown, 321. Nominated for Pope, 324. Appointed one of the Governours of Henry the Sixth's Perſon, 342. His Quarrel with the Duke of Gloceſter Regent of England, 351, 352. His Anſwer to the Articles preſented to the Parliament againſt him by the Duke of Gloceſter, 353. He is reconcil'd to him, 354. Made Cardinal, 355. His Riches, ibid. His ſtately Reception at London, 360. Raiſes an Army againſt the Huſſites, but carries it into France, 362. Unfortunate, and ill us'd by the Pope, ibid. Fourteen Articles of high Crimes preferr'd by the Duke of Gloceſter againſt him, 390. Clear'd, 391. His Death, 397.

Wincheſter, William of Wainfleet made Biſhop of, 397. His Deſcent and Character, ibid.

Wincheſter, Lewis of Bruges made Earl of, by Edward IV. 459.

Wipped, a Saxon Earl, ſlain at a place call'd Wippeds-fleet, which thence took Denomination, 32.

Withgar, See Stuff.

Withgarburgh in the Iſle of Wight, ſo call'd from being the Burial-place of Withgar, 34.

Withlaff the Succeſſor of Ludiken, being vanquiſh'd by Ecbert, all Mercia becomes tributary to him, 51.

Wolſey, Thomas, Henry the Seventh's Chaplain, his firſt Negociation abroad, 634.

Woodſtock, Thomas of, Son of Edward III. his unfortunate Expedition in Bretagne, 243. Made Duke of Gloceſter, 254. See Gloucester, Duke of.

Woodſtock-Palace built, and the Park incloſ'd by Henry I. 123.

Woodville Lord, carries Forces over to the aſſiſtance of the Duke of Bretagne without Henry the Seventh's Leave, 590. Kill'd at the Battel of St. Albans in Bretagne, 593.

Wooll, Staple of, remov'd from Flanders to England by Edward III. 224. From Middleburgh to Calais, 264.

Woollen Manufacture encourag'd by Henry VII. 597.

Worceſter, Thomas Peircy Earl of, made Governour of Gaſcoigne by King Henry IV. 277. Beheaded for Rebellion, 288.

Wraw, John a Prieſt, ſtirs up the People to Rebellion, 246.

Wulfer, the Son of Penda, ſet up by the Mercian Nobles in the room of Oſwi, 44. Said to have been taken Priſoner by Kenwalk the Weſt-Saxon, ibid. He takes and waſtes the Iſle of Wight, but cauſes the Inhabitants to be baptiz'd, and gives the Iſland to Ethelwald K. of the South-Saxons, ibid. Sends Jarumannus to recover the Eaſt-Saxons, fallen off the ſecond time from Chriſtianity, ibid. Lindſey taken from him by Ecfrid of Northumberland, ibid. His Death accompany'd with the Stain of Simony, ibid.

Wulfheard, King Ethelwolfe's chief Captain, drives back the Danes at Southampton with great Slaughter, 53. He dies the ſame Year as it is thought of Age, ibid.

Wulktul, Earl of Ely, put to flight with his whole Army by the Danes, 55.

Y.

YEomen of the Guard, firſt inſtituted by Henry VII. 580.

Ymner King of Leogria, with others, ſlain in Battel by Mulmutius, 6.

York, Edmund of Langley Duke of, diſguſted at Richard II's ſeizing the Duke of Lancaſter's Eſtate, 280. King Richard's Deputy in England, 281. Raiſes an Army to oppoſe the Duke of Lancaſter, 283. Joyns with him, ibid. His Advice about depoſing King Richard, 285. Diſcovers his Son the Duke of Aumerl's Treaſon to Henry IV. 278. His generous Proceedings upon it, ibid. His Death and Character, 281.

York, Edward Plantagenet, his Son kill'd at the Battel of Agincourt, 317.

York, Richard Plantagenet Duke of, made Governour of France, oppos'd by the Duke of Somerſet, 378. Arrives in France, 379. Is diſplac'd, 383. Sent over Governour a ſecond time, 386. Relieves Pontoiſe, and offers the French King Battel, 387. His other Acts, 389. Diſplac'd by Somerſet and Suffolk's means, 393. Takes hold of Suffolk's ill Miniſtry to raiſe Diſcontents, 397. Firſt mentions his own Title to the Crown, ibid. Appeaſes a Rebellion in Ireland, and gains the Love of the Natives, 399. Stirs up a Rebellion in England, 403. Suſpected to favour it, 406. Writes a Letter of Excuſe to the King, 407. He lands in England, and contrives a Rebellion, ibid. Raiſes an Army, and diſmiſſes it, 408. Charges the Duke of Somerſet with Treaſon in the King's Preſence, ibid. Swears a ſolemn Oath of Allegiance to Henry VI. 409. His Pretences for raiſing War againſt Henry VI, 410, 411. Seizes the Duke of Somerſet, 411. Fights the Battel of St. Albans, and takes the King, 412. Made Protector by the Parliament, turn'd out by the Queen, 413. Makes a Peace with the King, 416. Flies to Ireland, and is proclaim'd Traytor, 419. Attainted, 420. He ſeats himſelf in the King's Throne in the Houſe of Lords, 423. His Speech on that occaſion, ibid. The Nonſenſe of it, ibid. His inſolent Behaviour, ibid. 424. The Crown ſettled on him, and on what terms, ibid. Defeated at Wakefield, 425. He is ſlain, beheaded, and his Head ſet on the Gates of York, ibid.

York, Richard Plantagenet Duke of, Brother to Edward V. deliver'd up by his Mother to the Duke of Gloceſter, 491. Baſtardy laid to his Brother, and his Charge, 495. Murther'd in the Tower by Sir James Tyrell, 501. His Body lately diſcover'd, ibid. How Buck pretends he was ſav'd, and educated afterwards, 553. And that Perkin Warbeck was he, or nothing, 561.

York, Dutcheſs of, Mother of Edward IV. her Speech to her Son againſt his marrying the Lady Elizabeth Gray, 564.

York and Lancaſter, the riſe of the War between the two Houſes, 412. United by the Marriage of Henry VII. with the Princeſs Elizabeth, 539.

York, the Title of that Houſe moſt approv'd of, 579.

York, two Parliaments held there, 197, 198. Courts of Juſtice remov'd thither, 198. King Richard crown'd there, 527.

York, Nevil, Archbiſhop of, ſtirs up his Brother the Earl of Warwick to take Arms, 439. Impriſon'd for Life, 456. How ſurpriz'd by King Edward, 457.

Z.

ZOuch, Lord, attainted in Parliament for ſiding with Richard III. 581.

BIBLIOTHECA
REGIA MONACENSIS

FINIS.

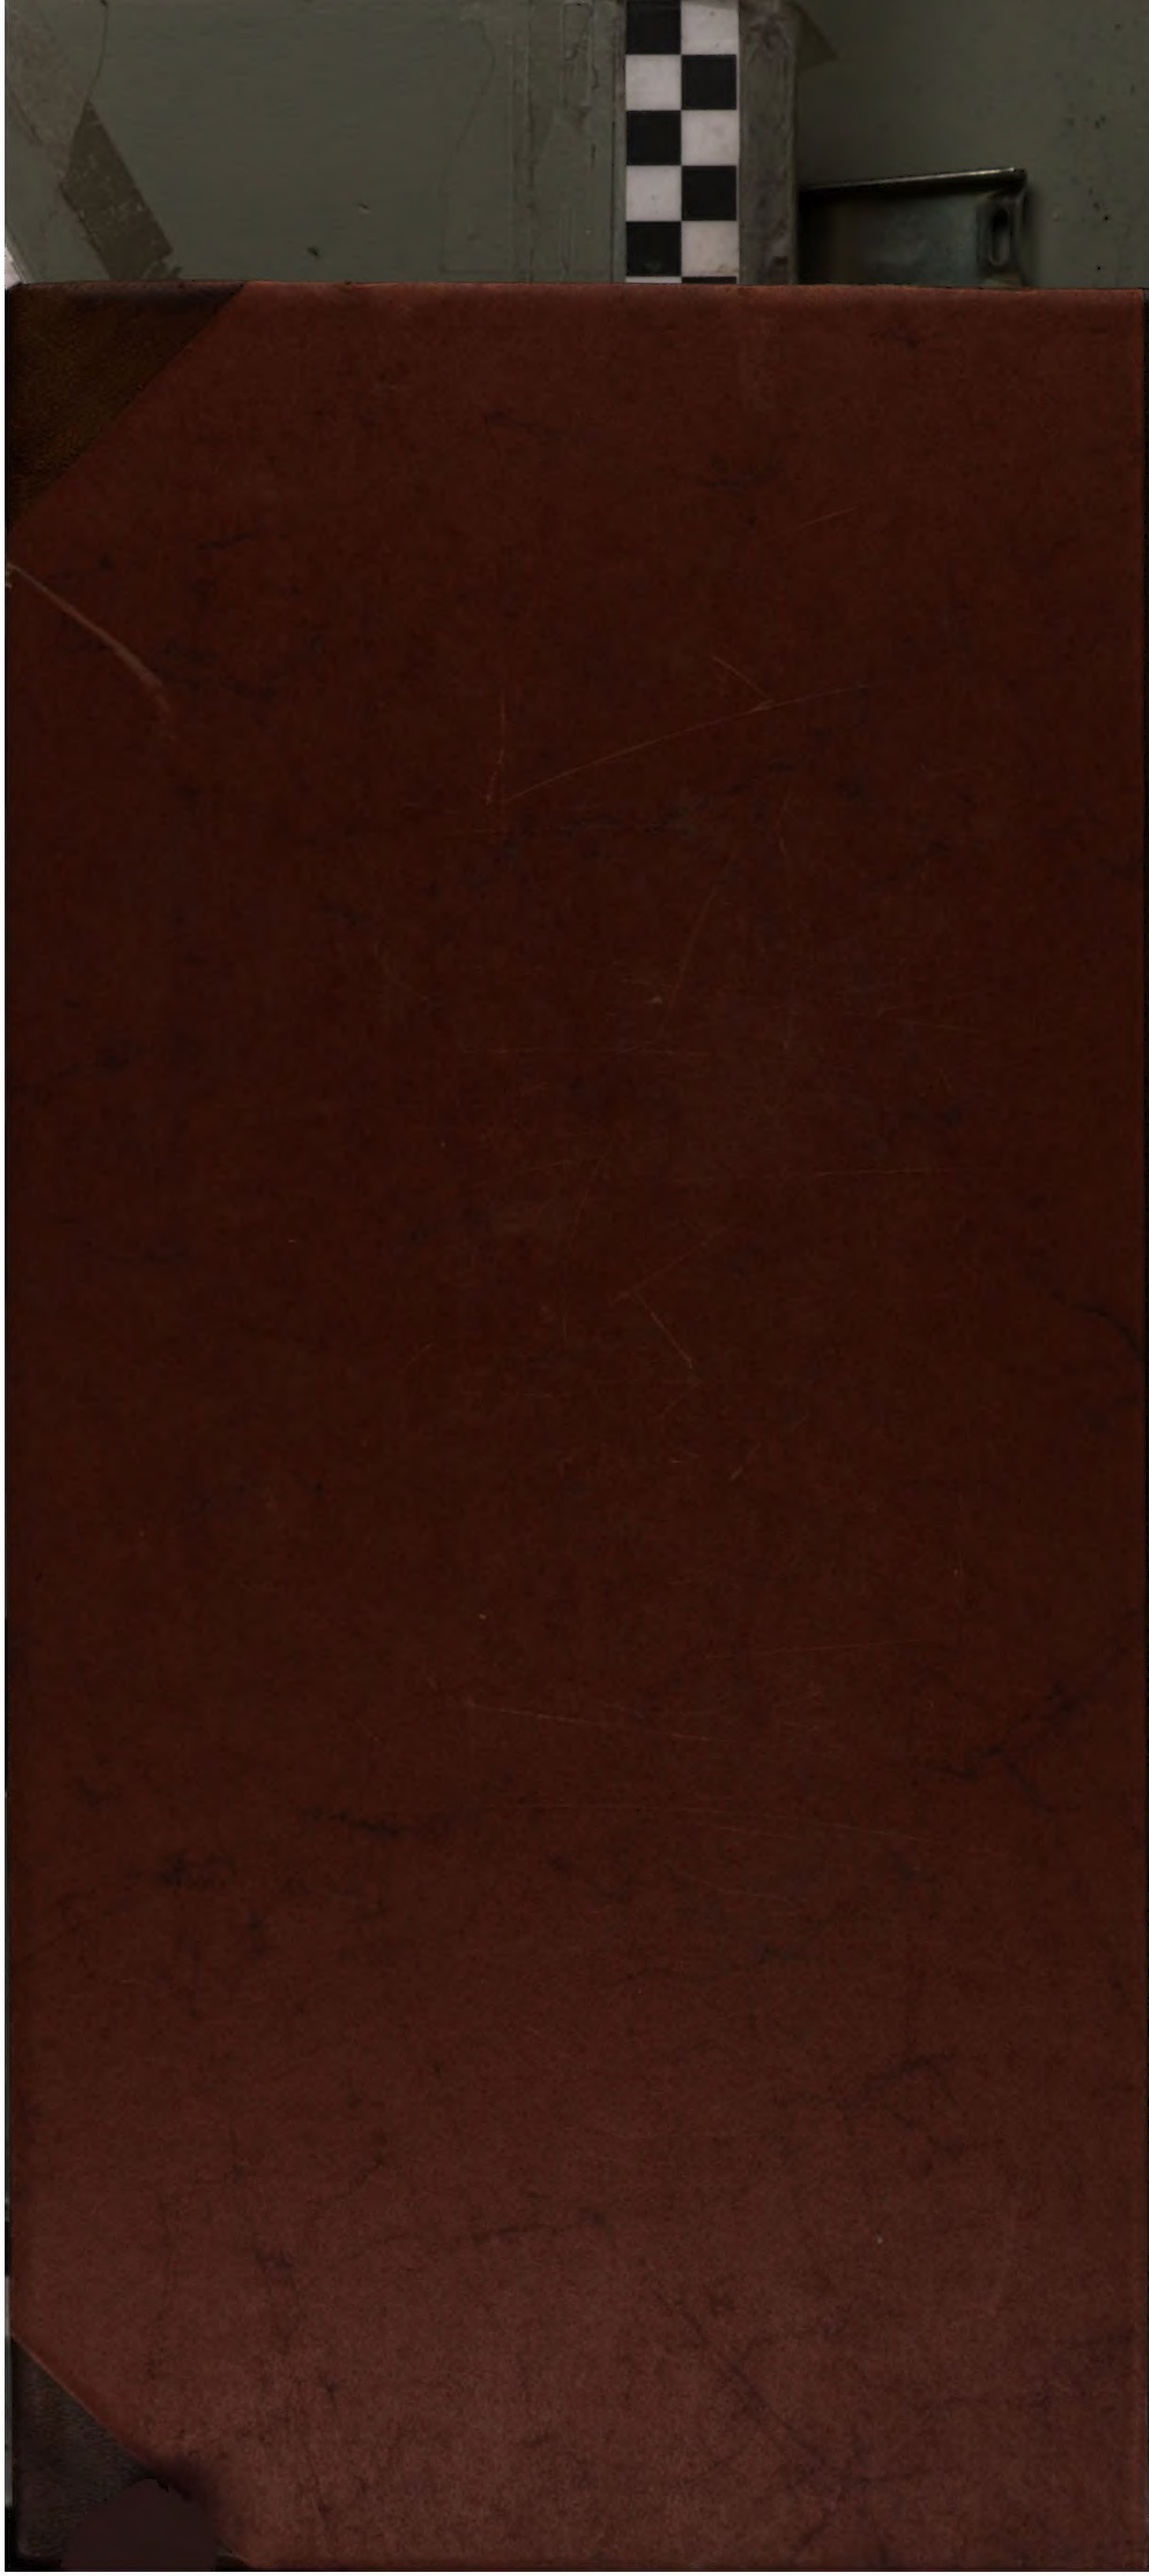
W. Obermeier
Buchbinderei
Rottenburg / L.



BSB Bayerische StaatsBibliothek
MDZ Münchener DigitalisierungsZentrum Digitale Bibliothek

<<A>> Complete History Of England

Bd.: 1

London 1706
Res/2 Brit. 46-1
urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb10865694-7